SENATE PLEADS TO PEOPLE

TWELVE MEMBERS BALK ACTION ON WILSON SEA POWER BILL

8 LIEUTENANTS CONFESS BRIBE PAID TO HEALEY

Delaney Says He Gave the Chief $3,200 for Promotions.

State's Attorney Hoyne's graft investigation of the police department was capped by a startling climax yesterday afternoon when eight lieutenants of police confessed that former Chief Charles C. Healey, already under indictment, held up eleven police sergeants for $3,200 last July before signing an order promoting them to lieutenancies.

Michael W. Delaney, long counted as the former police chief's go-between in money matters, confessed that he himself handed the $3,200 to Healey. Then "to make it look good" the former police head called in the lieutenants who had paid him for their promotions and told them they had been advanced in the service because of their honesty and efficiency, according to their stories.

"[illegible] like taking him by the throat and choking the life out of him when [illegible] it," declared one of the lieutenants who confessed.

THE MEN WHO CONFESS.

The lieutenants who made the confessions were: Frank J. Matchett, [illegible]; Wilfred [illegible], Central; [illegible] O'Connell, Cottage Grove [illegible]; Michael W. Delaney, New [illegible]; William J. Friel, [illegible]; [illegible] Lee, [illegible]; William A. Coles, [illegible], and Bartholomew [illegible].

In addition the men said that Lieuts. [illegible] Coles and Frank T. Murphy, [illegible] prevented from attending the "confessional" by serious illness, paid [illegible] for their promotions. Lieut. [illegible] Schoemaker, the confessors [illegible] to pay $600, and with that [illegible] Lieut. Friel put up $600—[illegible] for himself and $600 for Schoemaker. "Schoemaker afterwards [illegible] out of paying his share," according to the confessors.

[illegible] Friel is out $600, as Lieut. Matchett [illegible] only $200, for when the day came [illegible] pay, Matchett explained to Delaney [illegible] $200 was all he could raise.

HEALEY DOOMED, SAYS HOYNE.

The confessions led State's Attorney Hoyne to declare that Healey, in whom Mayor Thompson [illegible] implicit trust [illegible] than a year, "will go to the penitentiary without a doubt." Mr. Hoyne said he will go before the grand jury [illegible] this week to indict Healey once more for bribery, "to keep the record straight."

[illegible] yesterday Chief Schuettler has [illegible] little to say in criticism of his [illegible], but when he listened to the [illegible] of the eight lieutenants he [illegible] that "it is [illegible] and think to see [illegible] which should have been [illegible] these policemen in the straight [illegible] narrow path contaminate them who [illegible] had never wavered before."

The "confessional" was arranged by [illegible] Deputy Westbrook. Mr. Hoyne, with Dwight McKay, one of his assistants, and two stenographers, met the lieutenants, Westbrook and Chief Schuettler at the La Salle hotel. The lieutenants were eager to make their [illegible] with the prosecutor.

HERE IS THEIR STORY.

Here is the story they told: In the first week of July, 1916, Chief Healey [illegible] in Lieut. Delaney, then a sergeant, and the man who is said to have [illegible] for Healey forty civil service [illegible] that Lieut. George Weidelman might be promoted. He hinted [illegible] that unless his palm was crossed [illegible] eligible list for lieutenants, then [illegible] two years old, would be canceled. He told Delaney to go out and [illegible] what he could do.

Delaney called a conference of the first [illegible] men on the list. They met in Delaney's office in the city hall on the [illegible] of July 11. They talked it [illegible], realizing that if the list was canceled a new examination would be called and that in all probability new blood and [illegible] men would crowd in ahead of [illegible].

They talked of hiring a lawyer to start [illegible] proceedings against the man who was trying to shake them down, to compel him to promote them, inasmuch as the council had appropriated for fifteen new lieutenancies and the places were waiting.

[illegible] that they decided to send a mes-

Wilson to Take Oath Today; Public Rites Due Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—President Wilson will take the oath which makes him president of the United States for another term tomorrow, probably at noon, privately and without ceremony in his office in the capitol, where he expects to be signing bills during the closing hours of congress. He will take the oath upon the same Bible he used when sworn in as governor of New Jersey and later when he took his first oath as president. It is a family heirloom.

On Monday the president will take another oath at the open air inaugural ceremonies at the capitol, just before he delivers his inaugural address.

Weather Not of Best.

Tonight the capital, just emerged from nearly a week of rain and snow, is shaking off the rain drops, drying its bedraggled finery, and generally rearranging the rumpled condition in which a fair city finds itself after being all dressed up, rained on first and then covered under a glaze. Somebody said today that the capital looked like a belle caught in a thunder shower.

"Probably colder and generally fair," was the official weather forecast tonight for the public inauguration day, but the weather bureau explained that conditions could not be foretold accurately because of the uncertainty of movement of a storm centered over the Mississippi. Another day of rain or snow for the capital was forecast for tomorrow.

Patriotism Is Keynote.

Everything is in readiness for the ceremonies, which promise to be a great demonstration of Americanism. Coming at a time when the country is faced with foreign complications of the gravest sort, the note of patriotism dominates all else.

The American flag and the red, white and blue comprise the whole scheme of decorations. Tonight hundreds of flags are rippling and fluttering in the white beams of flood lights, the dome of the capitol down at the foot of Pennsylvania avenue looms up over Peace monument brighter and sharper than it stands on a sapphire day.

A great finger of light shoots through the darkness and points at the tip of the Washington monument, making it look as if it were the top part of the shaft suspended 500 feet in the air. Before the White House, the court of honor in which President Wilson will review the inaugural procession is a flood of light. The courts of state erected along Pennsylvania avenue are illuminated in a similar way, and the broad avenue is looped, trimmed, and decked with hundreds of strands of glimmering lamps.

Many Troops in City.

Thousands are pouring into the city. Troops, bronzed and hardened from months of service on the Mexican border, are here to line the avenue tomorrow as the president passes by—the first time since the first inauguration of Lincoln that soldiers have been present in that way. Hundreds of young military cadets are about in their attractive uniforms; thousands of other visitors have crammed the hotels and all other available places.

Governors of states were arriving tonight with staffs in gold laden uniforms. Democratic clubs, boy scouts, suffragists, civic organizations, and the world and his wife were coming in as the advance guard of the great crowd which will begin to pack the city Sunday and early Monday.

Inspects Court of Honor.

The president himself has given little attention to the preparations for his inaugural. Late today he took a short walk with Mrs. Wilson and inspected the court of honor. A large group of relatives and friends, including Col. E. M. House, are guests at the White House.

Woman suffragists who have been picketing the White House with "silent sentinels" in a show of "mild militancy" have their hosts on hand to surround the executive mansion tomorrow with a great marching throng of women bearing banners of gold, purple, and white, as the climax of their appeal to the president to support the constitutional amendment to give them the vote.

Tammany Braves on Way.

New York, March 3.—Tammany hall today sent 1,081 "Braves" to attend President Wilson's inauguration. They left on four trains, which will take them to Baltimore, whence they will travel tomorrow to Washington. Their music makers included the band of the Sixty-ninth regiment, New York national guard unit, which will march in Monday's parade after many months of service at the Mexican border.

HOUSE RECESS AGREED UPON

Washington, D. C., March 4, 12:30 a. m.—At midnight, house Democratic and Republican leaders reached an agreement to recess until 10 o'clock this morning as soon as the conference report on the naval bill was disposed of. It was believed this would be finished in another hour.

GERMANY UNIT IN DEFENSE OF MEXICAN PLOT

Supports View of Minister in Which This Nation Is Blamed.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, March 3.—The German foreign secretary, Dr. Zimmermann, had a long audience with the emperor yesterday, according to a Berlin dispatch received by the Exchange Telegraph company by way of Amsterdam. It is supposed that the audience concerned the Mexican question. It was followed by a conference between the imperial chancellor and Dr. Zimmermann, at which several foreign office officials were present.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

BERLIN, March 3.—Germany, as a unit, supports the declaration of Foreign Secretary Zimmermann that Germany [illegible] in seeking an alliance [illegible] bring a conflict between Mexico and the United States, but merely sought to insure help in case the present crisis between Berlin and Washington should lead to open hostility.

It is asserted that America's course prior to the break in relations gave Germany ground for taking precautionary measures—those measures to become effective only on America entering the war against Germany.

"MATTER OF FACT" VIEW.

"With gratifying frankness," says the Lokal Anzeiger, "German official quarters set their matter-of-fact statement up against the sensational and colored American reports.

"From the German statement it appears that the preparation of a diplomatic-military precautionary measure was concerned, which the German government not only had a right to do from the standpoint of effective defense against a possible attack, but a patriotic duty as well.

"The betrayal through which Mr. Wilson learned of Germany's intentions has been exploited politically by him in typical American fashion."

STATEMENT BY MINISTER.

The attitude of the German government was explained fully in the following official statement, which was issued by the government press agency:

"Foreign Secretary Zimmermann was asked by a staff member of the official German press bureau about the English report of a 'German plot revealed to get Mexico to declare war against the United States and to secure Japan's aid against the United States.'

"The state secretary for foreign affairs answered:

"'You understand that it is impossible for me to discuss the facts of this "revealed plot" just at this moment and under these circumstances.

"'I therefore may be allowed to limit my answer to what is said in the English reports, which most certainly were not inspired by sympathy with Germany.

"MEASURES OF DEFENSE."

"'The English reports expressly state that Germany expected and wished to remain with the United States on terms of friendship, but that in case the United States declared war against Germany, we prepared measures of defense. I fail to see how such a "plot" is inspired by unfriendliness on our part.

"'It would mean nothing but that we would use means universally admitted in war in case the United States declared war.

"'The most important part of the alleged plot is its conditions and form. The whole "plot" falls flat to the ground in case the United States does not declare war against us.

"URGED COMMON ACTION."

"'And if we really, as the report alleges, considered the possibility of a hostile act by the United States against us, then we really had reasons to do so.

BULLETINS ON DYING CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., March 4, 4 a. m.—Consideration of the agricultural bill temporarily side tracked consideration of the armed neutrality bill at 2 a. m., but parliamentarians said this would not affect the general situation, except to give opportunity for another additional set of speeches. Senator Gronna, a leader in the "arms" filibuster, seized the opportunity to make a long speech on the agricultural appropriation measure. He was still speaking at 3 a. m.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Early this morning the senate agreed to a house resolution postponing the effective date on the Reed "bone dry" amendment until July 1.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—President Wilson signed the District of Columbia prohibition bill just before retiring at midnight.

New York, March 3.—Dr. Zimmermann's attempt to form an alliance with Mexico and Japan in case the United States should become embroiled with Germany was characterized today by Bernard W. Ridder, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, as a grave mistake.

2,000 SOUTHERN NEGROES ARRIVE IN LAST 2 DAYS

More than 2,000 Negroes from Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia have arrived in Chicago in the last two days. About 500 more are expected today. Those responsible for the influx say that Chicago's colored population will have been increased by 10,000 by April 1.

Labor agencies, stockyards interests, and Chicago Negroes, individuals and organizations, are responsible for the flow of southern colored men to Chicago. They all call attention to the fact that immigration from Europe, whence Chicago has drawn its labor supply for many years, is cut off. Many stockyards laborers have gone to work in munitions factories because of the high wages offered, and some have gone back to Europe to fight.

Attorney Beauregard F. Moseley and the Appomattox club, 3441 South Wabash avenue, have sent agents into the south warning the Negroes not to come north until provision has been made for their care. As a result the southern Negro was slow to react to the blandishments of the labor agent.

However, stockyards firms are in need of from 10,000 to 14,000 men and they offered to guarantee lodging and food for one week to southern Negroes. This satisfied the Appomattox club and other interested organizations. Chief Schuettler has assigned Lieut. John Hawkins, a Negro, to the task of watching over the new arrivals.

Temporary homes have been found for the newcomers on Thirtieth, Twenty-ninth, Twenty-eighth, and Twenty-seventh streets, between Dearborn and State streets. Last night they were crowded into these apartments as many as six in a room.

However, more are on the way and 50,000 may be expected before Sept. 1, it is said. Negro leaders say that the southern Negro is to be a potent factor in the industrial and political life of Chicago.

FILIBUSTER MAY KILL BACKING FOR PRESIDENT

Foes of Measure Prevent Vote After Debate of Many Hours.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 4, 4 a. m.—[Special.]—Senator Hitchcock's action in presenting the manifesto declaring that a great majority of the senate favor the bill giving "arms" power to the president is regarded as an admission that the La Follette filibuster has beaten the bill. Senator Hitchcock said the opposition of twelve men in the senate blocks its passage.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 4, 2 a. m.—(Special.)—Although the menace of war with Germany looms more threateningly upon the American horizon than ever before, numerous measures to defend the nation appeared early this morning to be fatally jammed in the legislative machinery of the expiring Sixty-fourth congress.

The trouble is in the senate, which is tied up—it seems hopelessly—for the night over President Wilson's measure authorizing American ships to arm to repel German submarines, empowering the executive to supply arms, ammunition, and gunners, and to employ "other instrumentalities and methods" to protect Americans and American vessels on the high seas.

Filibuster Blocks Others.

It is the filibuster against this measure in the senate that is blocking final action on a series of other measures.

A small group of senators has tied the hands of congress. These men are:

W. J. Stone (Dem.), Missouri.

R. M. La Follette (Rep.), Wisconsin.

A. B. Cummins (Rep.), Iowa.

A. J. Gronna (Rep.), N. Dakota.

W. L. Jones (Rep.), Washington.

G. W. Norris (Rep.), Nebraska.

With these six are half a dozen others, less active in the filibuster. These men include Clapp of Minnesota, Lane of Oregon, Kirby of Arkansas, O'Gorman of New York, Vardaman of Mississippi, and Works of California.

Bills Seemingly Fail.

The other measures, in addition to the "armed ships" bill, that are seemingly doomed to failure include these:

The army bill carrying $337,000,000 for the enlargement, further equipment, and support of the land forces of the nation during the next fiscal year.

The espionage bills to prevent the communication of information to the enemy to establish a stringent censorship and otherwise to regulate the conduct of citizens in time of war.

The general deficiency appropriation bill authorizing emergency expenditures requested by the administration within the last few days.

The navy appropriation bill providing $535,000,000 for new warships, submarines, submarine chasers, patrol boats and guns, ammunition, and other equipment probably has just been given approval by both houses and was sent to the president at 1 a. m.

The senate then adopted the house resolution providing for a bond issue of $150,000,000 to expedite construction of naval vessels. That completed approval of the administration's naval program.

Although the bill authorizing the president to arm American ships and otherwise protect Americans on the high seas would be passed by the senate by an overwhelming majority, this legislation, a modified form of which was passed by the house on Thursday, is being held up by a filibuster conducted by a small group of Republican and Democratic senators.

STONE LEADS FILIBUSTER.

Chairman Stone of the foreign relations committee, and spokesman for the president in congress on international affairs, started the filibuster by talking four and a half hours against the bill yesterday afternoon. At this hour the filibuster is being carried forward by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and Senator Norris of Nebraska, Republicans.

Administration leaders in the senate have just given their opinion that the

MANIFESTO

To the American People.

Washington, D. C., March 4, 3:30 a. m.—Senator Hitchcock has just read into the record of the senate the following manifesto signed by seventy senators—Republicans and Democratic—announcing their support of the bill giving full power to the president to arm ships and otherwise protect American rights at sea. The manifesto follows:

"The undersigned United States senators favor the passage of senate bill 8322 to authorize the president of the United States to arm American merchant vessels and to protect American citizens in their peaceful pursuits upon the seas. A similar bill already has passed the house of representatives by a vote of 403 to 13.

"Under the rules of the senate allowing unlimited debate it now appears impossible to obtain a vote prior to noon March 4, 1917, when the session of congress expires. We desire this statement entered in the record to establish the fact that the senate favors the legislation and would pass it if a vote could be had."

The following senators were recorded as signing the manifesto, although other signatures were expected to include all senators accessible except the twelve "insurgents." The signers:

SENATE FILIBUSTER MAY KILL POWER ASKED BY WILSON

situation is hopeless and that the filibuster will cause the failure of the bill by preventing a vote upon it before the life of the congress expires by law at noon.

There are some senators, like Mr. Cummins of Iowa, who are opposing the grant of unlimited powers to the president, but would vote for a bill authorizing the arming of ships not carrying war munitions.

Senator Stone has proposed an amendment to prohibit the protection of munitions ships. The majority of senators, however, contend that inasmuch as it has been held not unneutral to ship munitions it is proper to protect American ships carrying war supplies.

ARMY BILL HELD UP.

The army appropriation bill has been passed by the house and its allowances increased by the senate committee on military affairs, but the measure has not been considered by the senate. Chairman Chamberlain of the committee sought in vain during the night to get the bill before the body, but the filibustering senators declined to give him permission to interrupt the debate on the armed ship bill.

If the army bill fails of passage, not only will there be no money with which to carry out the increase in the size of the land forces provided by the Hay act of the last session but also no money to provide the airplanes, anti-aircraft guns, artillery, small arms, ammunition, and other equipment representing eleventh hour measures of preparedness brought forward by the administration after the break with Germany, and no money for the support of what army the nation has during the year beginning July 1 next.

LEAVES NATION UNDEFENDED.

Failure of this bill would leave the army completely stranded and the provisions for its increase and additional equipment nullified. As a last resort, Senator Chamberlain will endeavor to put through a resolution continuing during the next fiscal year the appropriations voted for this year at the last session.

The failure of the army bill alone would foreshadow the necessity of an extra session of congress before July 1 and an immediate convening of the new congress, if the administration is not opposed to preparations forthwith to provide an army capable of defending the nation.

EXTRA SESSION IMPERATIVE.

With congress out of Washington, the president could not even raise a volunteer army of 500,000 men, as he contemplates doing in the event of war. The volunteer army act authorizes the president to raise volunteer forces, but only with the express approval of congress. The first step under the law is an executive request that congress authorize a call for volunteers.

In view of these circumstances Democratic as well as Republican leaders are saying that an extra session of congress is imperative. President Wilson continues to say, however, that the killing of appropriation bills will not cause him to call the new congress into session immediately, as it would not be absolutely necessary to supply the deficiencies in appropriations until July 1.

DEBATE IN SENATE

When the senate convened yesterday (Saturday) Senator Brandegee, Republican, of Connecticut, in opening his speech favoring the armed ship measure, called the German prohibited zone "an ambush where Germany lay in wait to deal death" to any one who entered against her edict creating it.

"Shall we sit supinely and allow the ukase of a foreign potentate to clear the ocean of American shipping and blockade our ports?" he asked.

"Are we obliged to wait for the slaughter to be accomplished before we defend ourselves?

"I trust that neither congress nor the American people have fallen to such depths of degradation that they are willing to furl the American flag and withdraw from the high seas as the misguided band of pacifists seem to wish.

"Must we get off the face of the earth—lie down and curl up?

For Peace with Liberty.

"I'm for peace, but I'm going to preserve the liberties of my country. If the pacifists had lived in the time of George Washington we would never have been a country, and if they have their way now we will cease to be a country.

"The peace propaganda in some aspects closely approaches treason."

Senator Fall, New Mexico, followed Brandegee, stating that the passage of the bill would be a virtual declaration of war.

"The president knows if congress passes this bill it amounts to a declaration of unlimited war."

Asked by Senator Reed, Missouri, the attitude of congress as to a declaration of actual war, Mr. Fall retorted:

"Congress would declare war in fifteen minutes if necessary."

War If War Must Be.

The general attitude of senators was that arming of merchantmen would lay the country open to actual war, but that "if it must come after America's questioned patience, then let it come."

"If an American ship is now sunk," Senator Brandegee said, "or, in view of the German attitude, if one of our armed ships sinks an approaching submarine, war will come."

"There is far more safety in an unflinching course now than in an uncertain one," Senator Hitchcock declared.

Senator Fall declared that it would be a public calamity for congress to remain in session during the next two months and held that the duty to protect American rights is manifestly vested in the executive branch.

After holding the floor for more than an hour Senator Fall concluded by pledging his support to the bill. Senator Stone then attempted to secure the floor. Senator Clapp "suggested the absence of a quorum," and a roll call followed.

Stone Believes in Wilson.

Senator Stone at last got the floor.

"For four years," Mr. Stone said, "I've worked by the side of the president and enjoyed his friendship and esteem. I've not always agreed with him. Such men as we cannot always agree. But I have followed him.

"If this question were but one of faith and trust in him I would not hesitate. But I profoundly regret I cannot vote for this, even though the president wishes it. It is our first disagreement that we have been unable to reconcile."

Mr. Stone then denounced the bestowal of "such broad powers in the hands of any president," at the same time expressing confidence that the president would use them "as prudently and justly as any single man."

Would Deny Power to President.

"I would not for a moment consider voting such extraordinary powers into the hands of any president, although I would rather trust President Wilson than the whole united conclave of jingoes in and out of congress."

The bill, Mr. Stone held, would authorize the president to engage in actual war.

He would be made sole arbiter as to what are American rights and as to what "other instrumentalities" he should use, Mr. Stone said.

"He could use American warships to drive German submarines from the seas. No doubt many feel this would be the proper course.

"But, Mr. President, though it be not a declaration of war, it would be the very essence of war. Congress then would be powerless to act. They would have abrogated and surrendered in advance the exercise of their discretion.

"Then it would be too late. There would be nothing else to do but go in and fight it out."

"Could congress authorize the president to order United States naval vessels to seize armed German ships guilty of attacking our merchant ships?" Senator Sutherland interrupted.

"Yes," Mr. Stone replied, "but that would be an act of war."

Mr. Sutherland attempted to question Stone further, but the latter objected, stating that "he wanted to answer any and all his own way and in his own time."

It was at this point that Mr. Stone declared he had heard "expert officers of the United States navy had devised a plan to place small submarine chasers aboard merchant ships sailing from American ports."

"These chasers," Mr. Stone said, "were to be lowered into the waters when the merchant ship entered the danger zones and were to cruise about in search of hostile craft."

Halt on Open Discussion.

Mr. Stone was about to go into greater detail regarding this plan when Senator Hughes suggested that in view of the recent bills passed by congress to prevent information regarding army or navy movements from being disseminated, it would be better to discuss such matters behind closed doors.

Armed merchantmen, Mr. Stone said, would have all the properties of a warship excepting they would not be under command of naval officers.

Should the United States arm merchantmen and send them abroad with munitions for a belligerent she would become virtually an ally of that nation, Mr. Stone said.

WORDS! DEEDS?

Filibuster in Congress on Bill to Arm Ships Bids Fair to Prevent Passage of Army Measure and Other Important Legislation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—(Special.)—Owing to the filibuster in the senate against the bill to authorize President Wilson to arm ships, it is likely the following measures will fail of passage because of lack of time:

The army bill.

Sundry civil bill.

General deficiency bill.

Military academy bill.

Bill to extend powers of the shipping board.

Amendments to the federal reserve law to increase the gold reserve.

All other general legislation.

President Wilson today or tonight signed the following bills:

The legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The Danish West Indies bill.

The pension appropriation bill.

The bill increasing from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 the appropriation for the war risk insurance bureau.

The revenue bill designed to raise $350,000,000 through special taxes and bond issues.

The dry District of Columbia bill.

Not to Protect Contraband.

Senator Stone dwelt frequently on the "intention of arming vessels carrying contraband and munitions."

Senator Hitchcock asked Mr. Stone if he believed the president intended placing the guns on vessels known to be carrying contraband and munitions. After evading the question for some time, Mr. Stone, pressed for a direct reply, said:

"If it is not the intention of arming these vessels we are wasting a lot of time arguing about a useless bill."

Mr. Hitchcock declared he did not believe the president contemplates arming such vessels.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia then asked if this government could not be relied upon to place a proper construction on the contraband feature.

Mr. Smith, unable to draw a reply from Mr. Stone, stated that he believed this government "could decide for itself just what contraband is."

VOTE ATTEMPT FAILS

When Senator Stone concluded his speech and Senator Hitchcock, in charge of the president's bill, endeavored, through a swift parliamentary stroke, to force unanimous consent for a final vote at 9 o'clock, Senator Cummins objected.

"Then 10 o'clock," Senator Hitchcock suggested.

Senator Norris demurred.

Senator Gronna objected this time.

Senators Gronna and Norris then alternated in objecting until 4 o'clock was suggested as a time for close of debate.

Senator Norris then announced he would object to setting any limit to the debate.

Scents a Filibuster.

Senator Hitchcock then asked for unanimous consent for a vote on the bill and the amendments at midnight. Norris objected.

"What I want to develop," Mr. Hitchcock said, "is the fact that there is a well organized filibuster against this bill. Will the senator from Nebraska admit that?"

"I will not," hotly retorted Mr. Norris, "but I will say that if I thought I could talk this bill to death I would do so."

Senator Cummins then came out into the open, declaring he would oppose any and all attempts to apply a gag. He didn't intend to "filibuster," he insisted, but demanded sufficient time for "adequate discussion."

Mr. Hitchcock then withdrew his request for an agreement, remarking he had "now found out just who it is who is blocking this legislation."

JONES JOINS OPPOSITION

Senator Jones, Washington, then joined the fast filling ranks of the filibuster forces, demanding in an impassioned address "Why is it that the president of the United States wants congress to get away from Washington?"

"Mr. President," he shouted, "that is not the team work the president speaks of. And if there ever was a time the nation needed team work it is now. Does the president think he can deal with this situation better without congress?

"This is a time when the affairs of the nation should not be left to one weak mortal, however brave he may be.

"This is the most momentous question that has confronted our nation since 1861. There was no question of the result of that conflict; there was no doubt of the result of the Spanish war.

"If we do get into this war, no one can tell where it will lead. We don't want to get in it—the people don't want to get into it."

Justifies Germany's Action.

Senator Jones justified Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare, declaring "England would do the same thing if she considered it necessary."

"Greece is neutral—she is not a belligerent," Mr. Jones said, "yet England and France have shown no more regard for the rights of Greece than has Germany shown for the rights of Americans. Greece is blockaded. Her citizens are being starved. England has sunk Greek sailing ships—boats of a neutral country. In brief, this shows that war is war."

"But what has that got to do with Germany's killing of our citizens and Germany's sinking of our ships?" asked Senator Sutherland.

"How dare you inject that into this argument?" Mr. Jones demanded with anger. "Does that question mean this resolution is to be directed solely against Germany? I trust not."

Urges "Let Congress Stay."

"You have been criticizing now for some time," interrupted Senator Reed, Missouri. "I would have him to make a constructive suggestion as to what we ought to do."

Mr. Jones replied that would best be answered by letting congress stay here to be of assistance.

"We ought to be here," he continued. "I am not trying to force an extra session, but it would be a patriotic thing to keep us here."

Senator Jones voiced again the argument that had the president warned Americans off belligerent merchant ships there would have been no such situation as exists today.

Senator Chamberlain here endeavored to obtain permission from Mr. Jones to suspend debate and take up his military bill.

Senator Jones retorted: "If the senator tries that, he'll merely be wasting time."

Mr. Jones dragged in the question of Americans "endangering the peace of the country by exercising their rights of traveling on belligerent passenger ships."

"They have those rights," he said, "but they should show their patriotism and refrain from exercising them."

Senator Jones held the [illegible] than an hour.

TOWNSEND SLAMS [illegible]

Senator Townsend, Michigan, [illegible]lican, followed Jones.

"At first," Mr. Townsend said, "I believed the president was asking for too much power. I have since been convinced that he is only asking for power that he already has."

While for the bill, Senator Townsend criticized the handling of our foreign problems.

"Our foreign relations have not been handled as they should have been," he said. "The president has not taken congress into his confidence as I feel he should have. As an example, there is the Zimmermann note.

"I believe the president had this information for some time. He did not give it to the senate. We had to get it from the press.

"But it would be unfortunate at this time to give notice to the world at large that congress is not behind the president.

"However, I would even now refuse to vote these powers to the president if I thought he would not invoke them against all the nations alike—not alone against Germany.

WILSON WAITS

Whether He Will Arm Ships if Congress Withholds Authorization Is Now Problematical.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Whether President Wilson will undertake to arm American merchantmen if congress fails to pass the armed neutrality bill granting him specific authority was a subject of much speculation in the capital tonight.

The president declared in his address asking congressional action that "no doubt I already possess that authority without special warrant of law, by the plain indications of my constitutional duties and powers." He added that he preferred in the present circumstances not to act upon general "implications."

The navy having already made preparations for arming merchantmen, it was the opinion of some administration officials that the president might decide to carry out that policy even if congress does not act. He has given no indication, however, of his intentions.

The impression grew that the president would take the opportunity to discuss the situation in his inaugural address on Monday. Although he has written it, it has not been sent to the public printer and last minute changes may be made.

Mr. Wilson remained up until nearly midnight tonight and kept in close touch with the senate situation.

"Neither do I think we would be justified in arming or convoying munition ships to Germany's enemies."

"Murders on High Sea."

"Mr. President, we should now assert once more and for all that we will not consent to the murder of Americans on the high seas," said Senator Hardwick, Georgia, following Mr. Townsend. "It is a matter of regret that the congress is not solidly behind our president in upholding American rights."

Mr. Hardwick here openly hinted that negotiations were in progress toward a compromise.

"I hope, even now," he said, "that some way may be found of passing the bill. I trust it may be drafted in some way as to satisfy all.

"I believe that if Germany persists in her policy of taking American lives at sea that nothing on this earth can prevent war."

"If the issue comes that American ships are sunk when they are known to be American ships, America shall fight if she is entitled to a place on the map," Mr. Hardwick concluded. "Then the country will rise up as one man. There will be no north, no south, no east, no west—but all America."

AMENDMENT BY CUMMINS

Senator Cummins here offered an amendment to the bill providing that the president shall not arm munitions ships and specifying that the bill is directed "against submarines."

"[illegible] are senators," Mr. Cummins [illegible]ho believe we should have in[illegible]made war when the Lusitania [illegible]k. However monstrous Ger[illegible] was, I am not one who [illegible] we should imperil the lives of [illegible] for such an act.

"[illegible] If congress feels we should de[illegible] want to vote on a resolution of [illegible] this body. We should, if we want war, declare it here so the world will unmistakably know our stand.

"But we should not, in indirect and evasive manner, turn over to the president the powers of taking steps which may well lead to war.

"This is not because I distrust Woodrow Wilson.

"I would as soon trust him as any man who ever sat in the chair. But it is cowardly for congress to shirk the duty of deciding this question."

Senator Cummins said the slogan should be, "Stand by the government"—not "Stand by the president."

He said there have been more American ships sunk by British mines than by German submarines.

"However," he said, "although Britain has violated all international law, I agree that that does not mitigate Germany's atrocious warfare against the United States.

"I would expect American ships to sink a German submarine on sight, had they armament."

APPEAL BY MAJORITY

Discussion was stopped at 1:30 a. m. to permit consideration of the agricultural bill, on which subject Senator Gronna droned for two hours.

Then, with startling suddenness, the Senate at 3:25 a. m., with Ollie James in the chair, pushed aside all extraneous matters to call a showdown on the "armed neutrality" bill.

After cutting the gordian knot of parliamentary proceedings, Senator Hitchcock, in charge of the bill, moved its immediate consideration. Opposition from Clapp of Minnesota was swept aside by rigid ruling from the chair.

All But Twelve For It.

"I wish to say," Hitchcock said, "that all senators who can be reached, except twelve, want to vote on the bill which will give the president power to deal with the international situation and show the world that the congress of the United States upholds him.

"I have a manifesto signed by a great majority of the senators who would vote in favor of giving the president this power were it not for the twelve who block it."

Senator Clapp objected on a point of personal privilege.

"This is unfair and unjust to me," he said. "There are many of us who have no purpose in defeating this bill, but who have waited patiently to discuss it thoroughly. I admit it places us in a peculiar attitude."

Hitchcock Stops Him.

Hitchcock at this point refused to yield further.

"Exasperating and procrastinating debate has been called into play to defeat this bill," said Hitchcock.

La Follette, walking towards Hitchcock, laughed aloud at the statement.

Where the senate had been deserted five minutes previously, at least 75 per cent of the membership were in their seats by this time.

"We propose to show that nine-tenths of the senate is willing and anxious to vote on this bill. We can show and hereby place on record also, so the country may know that nine-tenths of the senate want to uphold the president."

Reads the "Round Robin."

Hitchcock then handed the historic senatorial round robin to Senator Robinson, who proceeded to read it as it had been circulated.

Jones of Washington opposed the reading. "I don't think," he said, "that the members who did not sign should be considered as treating the senate unfairly.

Hitchcock made another request that there be a vote by 6 a. m., but Senator Gronna, despite voice strain from reading many reams of farming propaganda, had voice enough to object and the attempt failed.

Williams Jumps Into the Fray.

Senator Williams, Mississippi Democrat, replying to the filibuster argument, declared that one of the most humiliating spectacles in American history will be presented if this bill is defeated.

"We have been reduced to a point where we can't get a vote without a round robin. This country cannot get the true opinion of this body without a round robin.

"What does this paper mean?" Williams asked.

"We can't vote, being kept by legislative impotence. We can't do a thing but talk. The document means what it says—that if anyone is to blame, it is not we who have signed it."

La Follette sat with smug complacence during the Mississippi senator's remarks.

"Those who are offended," said Williams, "can put the cap on the head if it fits them, and the country can also put it on for them."

It is expected that debate—filibustering—will proceed until noon, when the session must end. There is not at this hour much hope that the measure will pass.

GERMANS PLAN DRIVE TO FORCE PEACE ON ITALY

Kaiser's Big Generals to Command Invaders —Rome Ready.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, Feb. 26, via London, March 3.—Austria and Germany are preparing for a big spring offensive against Italy. German staff officers are now visiting the Trentino front and the Trieste line making arrangements for a great coup to be struck soon if King Frost allows. Field Marshal von Mackensen is to command the Austrian troops, along with German troops already drafted to that section. It is even said Field Marshal von Hindenburg means to keep an eye on operations against Italy. He already has made a careful inspection of the entire front. So far Austrian Gen. Conrad remains head of the general staff, but he will work under German leaders.

The object of the proposed offensive is to push the Italians into the valley and to sweep over Lombardy and Veneto and dictate peace terms to Italy's king.

Copy Roumanian Campaign.

The general outline of the forthcoming attack, judging from movements of the Austrian and German troops and the nature of the preparations going on, resembles that of last fall against Roumania whereby Gens. von Falkenhayn and Von Mackensen dealt such overwhelming blows that the Roumanians were forced to evacuate Wallachia. Substitute Veneto for the Roumanian province and you have a general idea of the forthcoming plan against Italy.

If it were to succeed, Lombardy with its wealth of industry and agriculture would fall into the enemy's hands. Austrians already are counting on its success.

Lacked German Help.

"Last year's offensive failed," they argue, "because the German generals did not help us. But now there are Von Hindenburg, Von Falkenhayn, and Von Mackensen. We cannot lose."

"The Socialists of Vienna are making a lot out of this expedition, using its prospects at public meetings in striving to unite the various peoples and races of Austria-Hungary against their traditional foe, Italy.

Four years ago Gen. Conrad advised Emperor Franz Josef to attack Italy while the bulk of its army was busy on Libia and put it in servitude when none of the other powers were likely to help it. The archduke, Franz Ferdinand, supported Gen. Conrad, but the emperor disapproved and the opportunity passed forever.

Italy Watching Moves.

Italian military experts are fully aware of the preparations Austria and Germany are making against the Italian front, but the situation has changed immensely since May, 1916.

To meet the threats from Vienna we have Italy's fervid preparation during the autumn and winter months, its enormously increased output of heavy guns and ammunition, its mobile system of reinforcements, and the ease with which it can move troops and supplies behind its lines, and, last, the large reserves of fresh troops ready for immediate action, well drilled and equipped and filled with enthusiasm.

Ready for Foe's Attack.

Distinguished officers who twice have won the coveted blue ribbon for valor, the highest award given by Italy for military service, were asked what chances Von Mackensen and Von Falkenhayn would have against the Italian [illegible]

"We don't underrate their preparations, but luckily we are in a very different position with regard to heavy artillery from even last spring. Then Gen. Cadorna not only checked the Austrian offensive, but laid and carried out his plan for the capture of Goritz.

"The French, British, and Russians all suffered for want of heavy guns at the beginning of the war, and so did we. At the beginning we could, in a general way, send back only one heavy shell to the enemy's three, but now we send three to their one. Had we possessed the heavy guns we now have at the beginning of his war we should have been in Vienna by now.

"Yes, we have no fears for Italy in the next offensive, for we have watched our progress in every way since the beginning."

PACIFICISM IN RELIGION? NOT FOR B. SUNDAY!

New York, March 3.—"God wants fighting workers, not pacifists. Take off your kid gloves and get on some fighting clothes."

This was Billy Sunday's message to his "preparedness" army of several thousand advance workers and assistants in New York today. He was telling them how to get ready for his appearance here April 8. The message was followed by George Sunday, son of the evangelist, who added on his own account:

"My father couldn't raise a blister with a blank cartridge. I am here as his lieutenant to put such stuff on the firing line. I want real minute men, who can hit the bull's-eye and mean to do it."

AMERICA AGAIN BUILDING SHIPS FOR THE WORLD

Capital Invested Since Beginning of War Is $141,970,000.

New York, March 3.—[Special.]—Without waiting for the organization of the new shipping board, American capital has found profits in maritime business so huge, despite war losses, that the program of shipping construction and operation is now on an unprecedented scale.

Last month witnessed the chartering of companies with a gross capital of $30,525,000, two and a half times as much as in the previous record month, March, 1916. It brings the total since the outbreak of the war invested in shipping companies to $141,972,000. This was divided as follows:

1914, five months	$ 1,844,000
1915, twelve months	37,662,000
1916, twelve months	69,466,000
1917, two months	33,000,000
Two years and 7 months	$141,972,000

New Spurt Last Month.

The January total was only $2,475,000, accounted for by a fear that the peace movement would succeed and that the enormous demand for tonnage would be decreased. The reply of the allies and the imminence of the United States' entry into the war last month caused a rebirth of confidence and the establishment of the high record.

It does not appear that any of the new money has been raised with a view to coöperating with the shipping board. The demand for new ships is made obvious by the great orders placed here by Norwegian and British builders, the latter for the first time in seventy years. Bottoms are selling at three times or more above their normal value, and ship's plates are almost unobtainable within a year's delivery. As a result vessels which were engaged in the great lakes trade have been dismantled, cut in two, transported to tidewater, reassembled, and put into deep seas trade—at a high insurance rate.

Broader Shipping Laws Urged.

Euthusiasm about the new shipping board does not seem to have been increased by the incident leading to the resignation of Bernard N. Baker of Baltimore from the original board. Baker was the appointee of widest experience and greatest popularity among trained shipping men.

Shipping interests still feel that an American merchant marine is impossible without material changes in our maritime legislation. That there will be growth during the war and the period following it when tonnage is still badly needed is undisputed. Travel under the American flag is still somewhat safer than under other flags, and that factor of safety is strong enough to override temporarily the disadvantages of our legislative enactments. [illegible] however, it is freely predicted there will be a wholesale shift of ships to foreign registry, where legislation is not so great a handicap.

SPECIAL SESSION OF NAVAL BOARD PLANS DEFENSES

Officers Obtain Advice of Many Leaders of Industry.

New York, March 3.—A special meeting of the naval consulting board, which was attended by prominent officers of the United States navy, including Rear Admiral W. S. Sims, president of the Naval War college, was held here today to discuss what were termed "important questions pertinent to the conditions now facing the United States."

The meeting was arranged by a special committee of the consulting board, and those present numbered forty, representing not only the navy but the leading educational, manufacturing, industrial, and scientific organizations of the United States.

An authorized statement as to what transpired at the meeting said its purpose was to obtain information which would be essential if the country were involved in war or in any other great national emergency. Members of the consulting board, seeking to broaden their point of view, asked the invited guests to give their opinions on various phases of "preparedness." The information presented will be tabulated for further study.

The naval officers discussed their problems and in return received valuable information from industrial experts.

A part of the program made public by the committee was as follows:

Talks on "general problem of defense against submarine warfare" by Rear Admiral Sims.

"The Submarine," by Commander Starling.

"The Torpedo," by Commander Robison.

YOUTHFUL TARS LEAVE TO JOIN FIGHTING SHIPS

Bluejackets at Great Lakes Off for the Inaugural.

Bluejackets to the number of 475 left the Great Lakes Training station at Lake Bluff for Washington over the Northwestern road at 9 o'clock last night. They will take part in the inaugural ceremonies and will pass in review before President Wilson. Then they will be distributed among the ships of the battle fleet on the Atlantic seaboard.

The young fellows, more or less recent recruits from Chicago and vicinity, are full of eagerness to get into active naval service, which, they hope, will take them sooner or later into battle. They will be in charge of Capt. W. A. Moffett, commandant of the training station.

After the inaugural parade on Monday, 405 will be sent to the Norfolk navy yard, where they will become part of the crews of the battle fleet. The others, including officers, petty officers, and musicians, will return to Chicago.

Two thousand apprentices at the naval station were lined up in spick and span uniforms to see their comrades "off for the front." Cheers from 2,000 throats rang over Lake Michigan.

ENVOY FLETCHER MEETS CARRANZA

GUADALAJARA, March 3.—The newly appointed American Ambassador, Henry P. Fletcher, presented his credentials today to Gen. Carranza, who replied expressing his sincere pleasure at Ambassador Fletcher's arrival and commenting on the friendly relations between the two countries.

Refuse American Fund for Relief in Germany

AMSTERDAM, March 3.—The Widows and Orphans' Relief society in Berlin has refused to accept an American fund of half a million marks left by Ambassador Gerard for distribution, according to dispatches received from Berlin tonight.

WOMEN'S STYLES CURBED BY WAR

LONDON, March 3.—The German imperial clothing committee has issued a warning that styles in women's clothes cannot be allowed to change every six months, according to an Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company. The committee says that women may wear winter dresses throughout the coming summer and winter without disgrace.

RUSSIANS SEIZE IMPORTANT CITY IN WEST PERSIA

Capture Hamadan in Effort to Unite with British at Kut.

LONDON, March 3.—Hamadan, an important Persian city near the Turkish border, has been captured by the Russians, says a Teheran dispatch received in Petrograd and transmitted by Reuter's.

The message adds that the Russians are pursuing the Turkish troops, who are in retreat.

SCENE OF MUCH FIGHTING.

The reported capture of Hamadan by the Russians may mean that the Russians will again attempt an advance into Mesopotamia from Persia to aid the British in their advance up the Tigris toward Bagdad.

Hamadan, which is 240 miles northeast of Bagdad, has been the center of much fighting between the Russians and Turks. In April, 1915, it was occupied by Turkish troops, but on Dec. 17, 1915, it was taken by the Russians, who continued their advance westward toward the Turkish frontier, later capturing Kermanshah and Khanikin on the Persian border 130 miles northeast of Bagdad.

Forced to Abandon City.

Following the capture of Kut-El-Amara by the Turks in April, 1916, the Russians were forced to retreat from the Persian border and were driven back through Kermanshah to Hamadan, which was evacuated early in August, 1916.

Since then there has been much fighting in the Hamadan region and Turkish official announcements late in December and early in January said that the Russians had been repulsed in attacks near Hamadan. Hamadan has a population of 40,000.

WILSON AT HELM, NAVY GAINS MEN

Washington, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—An increase of 12,002 men in the personnel of the navy during the last four years was reported by the navy department today.

On March 3, 1913, when the present administration went into office, the personnel of the navy was 47,347 men, according to the figures given out by Secretary Daniels. On March 3, 1917, the personnel of the navy is 59,249 men, the secretary said.

In addition to this number 3,038 men have enlisted in the naval reserve in the last few months, the services of these men being available on call. There has also been an increase of from 1,500 to 2,000 men in the naval militia in the last year or two, the secretary said.

STOP CONTRACTS FOR MUNITIONS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 3.—[Special.]—Munitions makers in this country have been notified by the British government that all contracts for the manufacture of shrapnel and other shells must be completed by March 31 and that on that date all contracts in existence for these war materials will lapse.

GUNS ARE READY TO BE MOUNTED IN SHORT TIME

Only Few Hours Will Be Required to Prepare Ships for Defense.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—Anticipating the passage of the armed ship bill, the government today made final and full preparations for the arming of American merchant ships immediately on the passage of the bill in the senate.

The president will order that arms be supplied to all American ships which apply for them. Probably by proclamation, or by notice to the press, the president will signify his intention of arming merchant ships as soon as word is received of the passage of the bill by the senate. One of the American line ships probably will receive the first equipment.

It was learned at the navy department today that enough guns are on hand to arm every American ship which applies in the next few weeks. In all cases the government will supply the guns and ammunition, but in some cases—in fact, wherever it is possible—the ship owners will furnish the gunners.

Many Gunners Are Ready.

In the case of the American line the government probably will not have to supply the gunners. Large numbers of former gunners have applied for the privilege of manning the guns on these ships, and it is probable that these men will be employed.

The guns which will go on the ships are now at the various government navy yards. The exact guns that will go on each ship have been picked out, and the allotment of ammunition for each ship has been put aside.

From this time on no large American ship will leave port without guns mounted. This includes ships of all kinds, from tankers to liners. The ships now in port are awaiting the decision of the United States senate and will wait until they receive their guns before they sail.

No Objection to Search.

The United States government never has objected to the principle of visit and search, and, should a submarine attempt to stop an American ship outside the war zone and examine the cargo for contraband, the government could have no quarrel with Germany officially. On the other hand, there is much doubt as to wether any ship owner carrying contraband will permit this action.

The president is seriously contemplating ordering captains of ships to fire on submarines on sight, but if he decides on this course he will not make a public announcement of the fact, since it would manifestly be an act of war for an American ship to fire on a German submarine without first ascertaining whether the submarine intended to harm the ship.

In the present crisis, however, petty questions concerning the nicety of international law have been laid aside and American ship owners will be expected in the future to protect themselves from German submarine ruthlessness.

JAM IN SENATE STOPS ACTION UPON CARLILE

Washington, D. C., March 3.—[Special.]—As a result of the legislative jam in which it found itself tonight the senate was unable to confirm hundreds of nominations sent to it by the president during the last few weeks.

Included among those which were not confirmed is that of William B. Carlile for postmaster at Chicago.

White House officials intimated that as soon as the extra session of the senate convenes on Monday the president will renominate all of those prospective officials whose confirmations were blocked in this session.

If they fail of confirmation at the special senate session he will then give them recess appointments.

PLOTS AGAINST CHANCELLOR UP IN REICHSTAG

Disclosures of Conspiracy Made—Pan-Germans Are Assailed.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, March 2, via Amsterdam and London, March 3.—Eight sensational disclosures regarding the conspiracy against Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg were made at today's session of the reichstag by Liberal Member Hausmann, who took occasion to make a sharp attack on pan-Germans for arousing hatred abroad against Germany.

[At this point the dispatch bears evidence of being deleted by the censor, no further reference to "disclosures regarding the conspiracy" against the German chancellor appearing.]

Starting with the thesis that the peace offer of the central powers was a wise, sensible deed, Hausmann continued:

"Stupid it was, however, to demand that the government make its peace conditions publicly known. From their very nature peace conditions must be the maximum demands, and therefore they necessarily have the effect of scaring the other party off. The truth of this is proved by the senseless peace conditions of the entente.

Ready to Make Peace.

"We agree with Count Tisza's utterances. Now, as before, we are ready to make peace. But it is self-evident that the initiative must now proceed from our enemies, who will have a change of heart after reflecting on our peace offer.

"The chancellor is quite right in his assumption that any discussion of war aims at present would be fruitless. Just suppose the imperial government had committed itself to concrete war aims in the spring of 1915, as pan-Germans demanded. Pan-Germans simply place us in a false, suspicious light—these people who owe their genesis to a great error.

Says Pan-Germans Hurt Cause.

"These same people formerly attacked Chancellor Caprivi because he gave Zanzibar for Helgoland and the pan-Germans today betray the same dilletantism in the matter of historical events.

"If they only hurt themselves that would not be disquieting. But they give our enemies an opportunity of making capital and evoke a broad hatred of us, and, above all, they hamper the wise education of the German nation in the judging of national and foreign matters.

"Between North America and Germany there are absolutely no war aims and war without aims would be the most insane thing possible."

BIG GREEK GRAIN SHIP TORPEDOED, SUNK BY U-BOAT

Carried Cargo for Athens —Four Americans on Belgier Landed.

LONDON, March 3.—Reuter's Telegram company says the Greek steamship Paeconnissos, of 2,769 tons gross, which had been requisitioned by the Greek Royalist government to go to America for 5,000 tons of grain for the assistance of the Royalist population of old Greece, has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine.

[The Proconnissos was transferred from Greek registry to the French flag and renamed Verdun. No recent movements of the vessel have been published and it was last reported at Bordeaux, France, in November, 1916. The ship was 319 feet long and was built at Sunderland in 1902.]

Four Americans Landed.

Four Americans were rescued from lifeboats of the British steamer Belgier and landed today by a French scout ship. The ship was torpedoed by a submarine on Feb. 23, without any casualties among the crew.

The four Americans who were among the crew were Isador Frank, Percy Craig, Dewitt Stevens, and Daniel Gatliff.

Germany failed by slightly more than a 50 per cent margin to make good its threat to sink 1,000,000 tons of merchant shipping during the first month of unrestricted submarine warfare, according to figures in the possession of the Associated press, the absolute reliability of which is vouched for here.

Its submarines, the figures show, only succeeded in sending to the bottom during the month of February, in round numbers, 490,000 tons.

Record for Submarine.

BERLIN, March 3.—[By wireless to Sayville.]—Nine armed Russian steamers were destroyed by the German submarine which recently was sunk near Hammerfest, according to a Christiania dispatch in the Neue Züricher Zeitung, as quoted by the Overseas News Agency. These vessels are said to have been purchased in South America by Russia.

[It was reported from Christiania on Jan. 26 that thirty-four men from a German submarine which had foundered off the Norwegian coast had been landed near Hammerfest.]

LONDON REPORTS FURTHER GAINS BY THE BRITISH

Advance Made on Five Mile Front to the East of Gommecourt.

FRENCH FRONT.

BRITISH

LONDON, March 3.—During the day our troops made further progress north of Puisieux-au-Mont and east of Gommecourt, and our line has been advanced an average distance of a quarter of a mile on a front of nearly five miles. The enemy offered stubborn resistance.

A local German counter attack made against our advanced positions east of Gueudecourt last night was stopped by our artillery barrage and rifle fire. An enemy bombing attack forced our troops to evacuate a trench east of Sailly-Saillisel this morning. An immediate counter attack was organized, which regained the whole of the lost ground.

The enemy rushed two of our posts last night northwest of Roye. A few men are missing. Another strong enemy patrol that attempted to approach our lines east of Givenchy and La Bassee this morning was stopped by our rifle fire.

AVIATION.

Successful reconnaissances were carried out by our airplanes during the day. One of our machines is missing.

FRENCH

PARIS, March 3.—The artillery was quite active between the Oise and the Aisne, in the region south of Nouvron and in Alsace in the sector of Burnhaupt. The day was calm on the rest of the front.

The cannonading today was light.

During the night our reconnoitering parties carried out several successful surprise attacks against German trenches near Moulin-Sous-Toutvent, east of Hill 304 (Verdun region), and in Apremont forest. We took prisoners and materials.

GERMAN

BERLIN, March 3.—Western front—Before dawn strong British reconnoitering detachments attempted to enter our trenches near Hulluch and Lievin, and in the evening smaller detachments made similar attempts at other points on the Artois front. They were everywhere repulsed. On both banks of the Ancre there were again violent infantry engagements during which the enemy in addition to sanguinary losses lost sixty prisoners and eight machine guns.

On the Aisne and in the Champagne advances by the French against some of our trenches failed.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, March 3.—Eastern front: Front of Prince Leopold—Between Illukst and Lake Narocz the day was calm. On the Stokhod the artillery fire was livelier than on recent days.

Near Voronczyn, west of Lutsk, storming detachments penetrated along a front of two kilometers and a half to a depth of about 1,500 meters into the Russian position. They returned, after destroying the dugouts, with 122 prisoners and four machine guns.

During the advance east of the Narayuvka (Galicia) the number of prisoners reached three officers and 276 men. The booty was increased to seven machine guns.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, March 3.—A gas attack launched by us in the region north of Lake Narocz provoked a panic in the enemy's trenches.

Germans a battalion strong after an hour's artillery preparation attacked our trenches in the region of Slavontin, ten miles southwest of Brzezany. They succeeded in entering our first line trenches but were driven out as the result of a counter attack by our reserves.

AVIATION.

Aerial activity—After an aerial combat with an enemy machine in the region of Dvinsk one of our airplanes fell in flames east of the city. The observer, Second Capt. Baron Drasenfold, was killed.

One of our aviators engaged two enemy machines in the region of Smorgon. Both German aviators were driven back far beyond their positions.

Southeast of Baranovichi one of our machines after an aerial engagement with a German machine was obliged to alight. The observer, Sub-Lieut. Borne of the French service was killed and the pilot, Sub-Lieut. Gretchkin, was injured.

MESOPOTAMIA

BRITISH

LONDON, March 3.—In the Mesopotamian operations the river gunboats Tarantula, Mantis, and Moth came into contact and passed the Turkish army while it was retreating to the westward of Shumran on Feb. 26. The gunboats inflicted heavy losses and captured or destroyed four Turkish steamers and a number of barges full of ammunition. The gunboat Firefly was recaptured.

ROUMANIAN FRONT.

GERMAN

BERLIN, March 3.—Front of Archduke Joseph and army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: During a continuous snowfall the fighting activity was limited.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, March 3.—Roumanian front: Reciprocal firing is proceeding.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN

ROME, March 3.—There were intermittent artillery actions all along the front. Our batteries destroyed advanced enemy posts on Marmolado mountain, near the upper Avisio river [Trentino front], causing fires at various places.

Detachment of our infantry successfully raided the enemy's trench at different points, destroyed his defensive works, and captured ammunition and other war material.

Hostile patrols made several similar attempts against our lines, but were repulsed.

AVIATION.

Some of our airplanes dropped bombs on the enemy's rear lines on the Carso.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, March 3.—Macedonian front—There were no important events.

FRENCH

PARIS, March 3.—Eastern theater: Artillery activity was displayed along the whole front, especially at the Cerna bend. Patrol encounters occurred at Majadg and Monastir. Violent actions at Hill 1,050 carried out by the Italian troops, resulted in the shattering of enemy trenches and the bringing back of prisoners. Enemy counter attacks were repulsed with serious losses.

There has been a heavy snowfall from the Vardar as far as Lake Presba. From Feb. 27 the aviators have been particularly active.

SUPPLEMENTARY

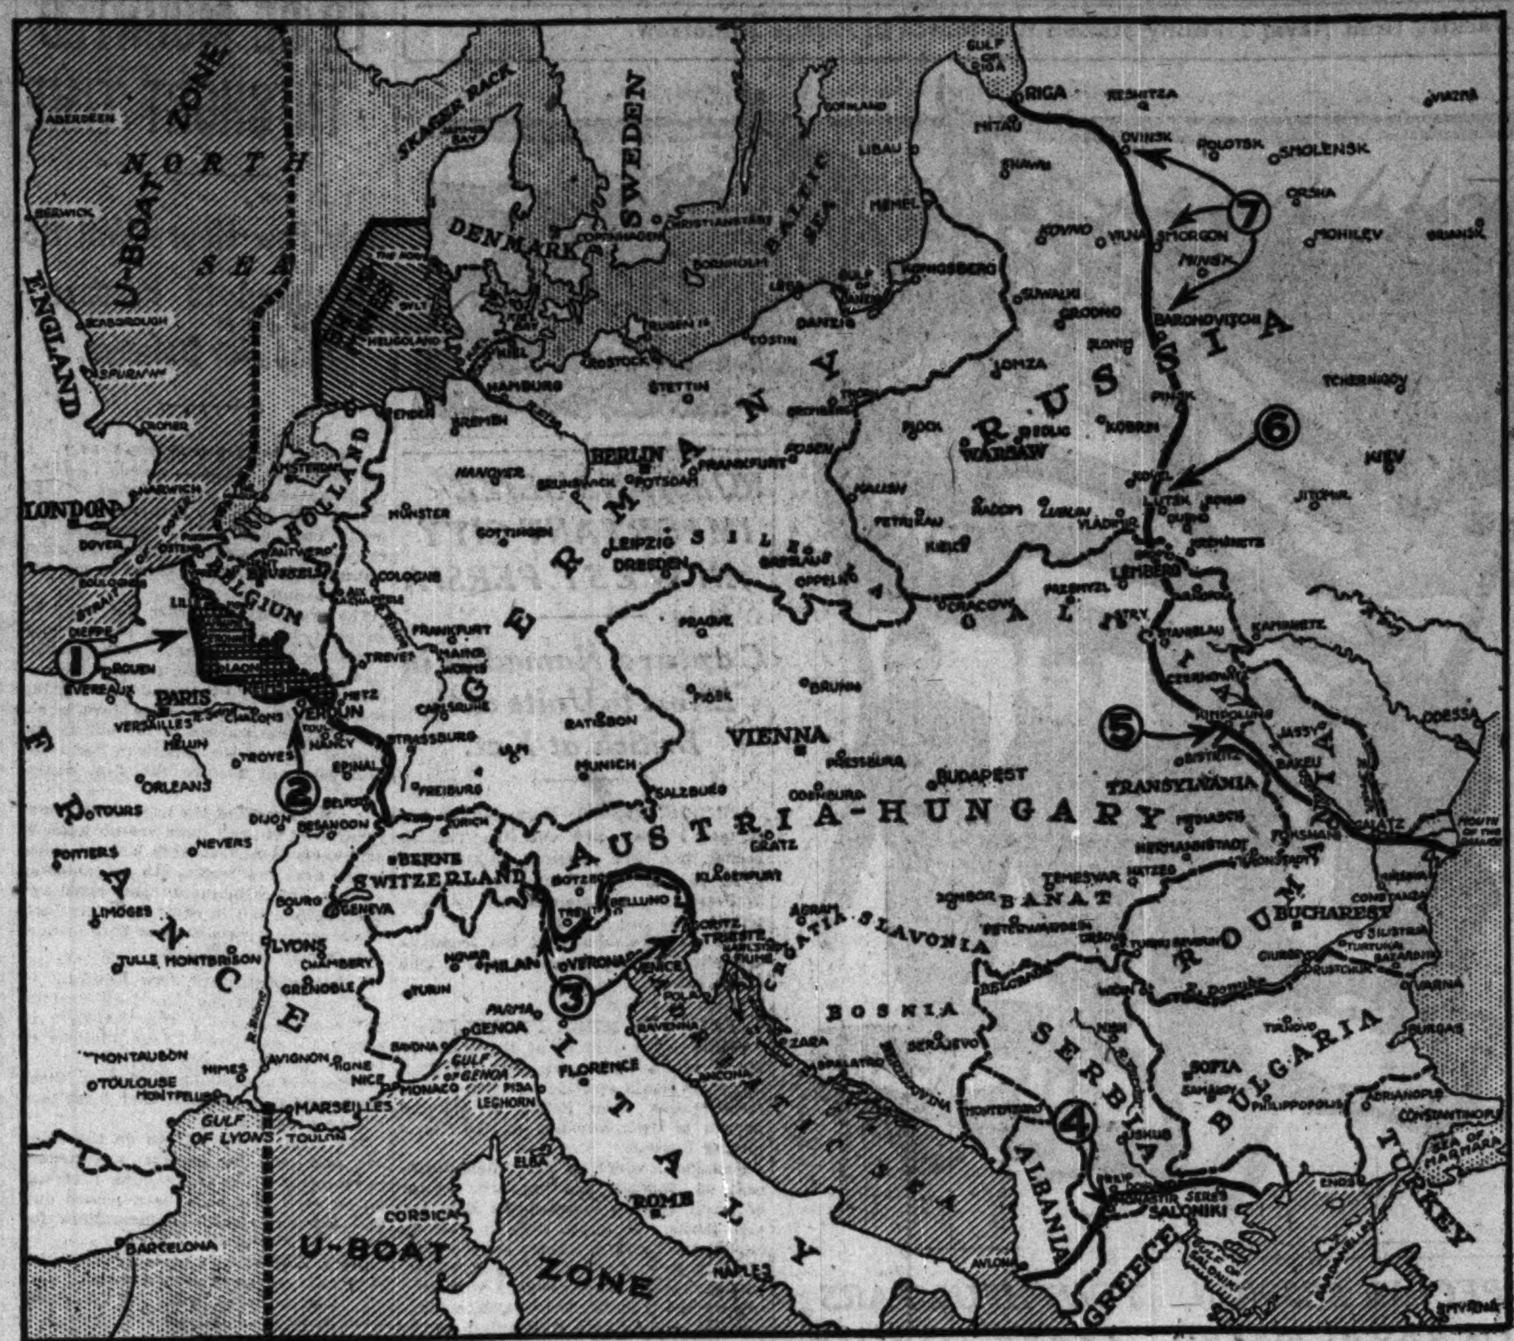
GERMAN

BERLIN, March 3.—No actions of importance have occurred.

J. M. STUDEBAKER ILL; END FEARED

South Bend, Ind., March 3.—[Special.]—J. M. Studebaker, the last of the five founders of the Studebaker corporation, is ill at his home, Sunnyside. Because of his advanced age, 79 years, fears are entertained for his recovery. Up to today he was making favorable progress, but because of a cold which he contracted Friday he suffered a relapse.

WEEK'S REVIEW OF THE WAR ON LAND AND SEA AND IN DIPLOMACY



THREE big features of the week's war news have held the world's attention:

The sinking of the Laconia off the Irish coast, with the loss of two American lives—Mrs. Mary Hoy and daughter, formerly of Chicago.

The German evacuation and the occupation by the British of a large area, including ten towns, on the Somme front.

The revelation of the German plot to embroil Mexico and Japan in a war upon United States soil.

The Laconia incident has brought the United States so near actual war that several senators in the debating yesterday urged an immediate declaration. President Wilson, however, continued to hold back, asking only authority to proceed to arm ships and act as the occasion demands after congress adjourns today.

Disclosure of the Zimmermann note ordering Von Bernstorff to direct the Mexico-Japan plot seemed to excite more demands for drastic action than any previous event, especially after virtual verification was obtained from Zimmermann himself in Berlin.

Washington was surprised—almost shocked—by Zimmermann's admissions and effort to justify the plotting upon grounds of defensive necessity in the event of a conflict with the United States. The utter failure of the scheme is seen by both Washington and Tokio, Japan hotly denouncing the idea as "preposterous." Nevertheless, United States secret service men (some of whom are supposed to have intercepted the Zimmermann note) are undoubtedly still at work along precautionary lines.

The big spring "drives" on all the land fronts still are yet to come, but Von Hindenburg's withdrawal on both sides of the river Ancre carries a foretelling import. Various explanations have been advanced as to why the Germans have fallen back, but the most tenable seems to be that the object is wholly the straightening of the line at least from Sailly to Gommecourt, possibly all the way to Arras.

The German retreat already has allowed the British to advance to within 1,000 yards of the fortress of Bapaume (1). But here Von Hindenburg has stopped. The new German defenses are believed to clear the Sailly-Arras salient and reach straight, cutting west of Bapaume and leaving that important fortress in the kaiser's possession.

Whatever the aim or cause of the evacuation, London is joyful and hails the retreat as a great victory for British arms. This gives hope that the British and French in the spring fighting will be able to clear invaded French territory, shown shaded on the map.

In the Verdun region (2) there have been several minor battles, but no changes in the relative positions of the opposing armies. Neither has the Champagne fighting brought any results.

Down on the Austro-Italian front (3) activity has increased in several districts, but there has come no indication of either side being in a position to swing fortune materially.

Along the Macedonian line (4) the week's news has revealed nothing significant.

Over on the Roumanian front the Russians have made great efforts to push the Teutons back from the Jacobeni-Kimpolung road (5). One day success was reported by Petrograd, only to admit a dislodgment the following day.

Air battles have enlivened the week on the Russian front. The only important raid by land occurred west of Lutsk (6), where the Germans penetrated the Russian first lines on a mile and a half front, destroying trenches and dugouts and returning with more than 120 prisoners.

The air engagements have embraced the regions of Dvinsk, Smorgon, and Baranovichi (7). Petrograd admits Baron Draserfold, a second aerial captain, was killed near Dvinsk. Sub-Lieut. Borne of the French service was slain near Baranovichi. Continued cold and more snow has retarded operations.

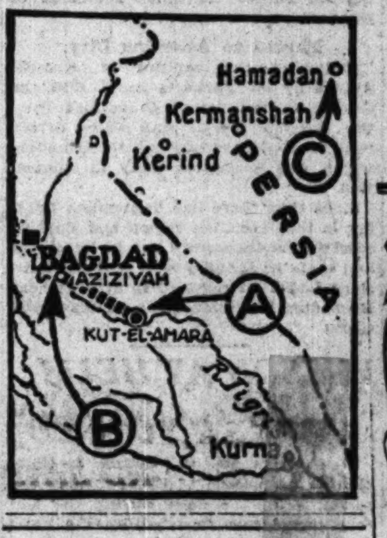
In Asiatic Turkey the British captured Kut-el-Amara (A) after a long siege. The Turks appeared to have been completely routed. They have fled fast toward Bagdad, London announcing the remnants passed through Aziziyah (B), fifty-four miles northwest of Kut and only twenty-five miles out of Bagdad. The British are giving hot chase and expect to lay siege to Bagdad. Exuberant London is now forgetting the surrender of Gen. Townshend's 10,000 men at Kut more than a year ago, the present British deed somewhat atoning for that failure.



More trouble for the Turks showed unexpectedly yesterday, giving further cause for elation in London.

Petrograd announced a dispatch from Teheran containing news of the recapture by Russians of Hamadan (C), in Persia, near the Turkish border. The Russians now are expected to attempt an advance into Mesopotamia and assist the British in their assault upon Bagdad.

Aside from the sinking of the Laconia, the German U-boats did not have a roaringly successful week. The tonnage destroyed reached only 100,827, including thirty-three ships.

GERMANY UNIT IN DEFENSE OF MEXICAN PLOT

Supports View of Minister in Which This Nation Is Blamed.

"'An Argentine newspaper, which printed a story a short while ago, really revealed the "plot" when, in telling that the United States last year suggested to the other American republics common action against Germany and her allies.

"'This "plot" was apparently not conditional in the least. The news as published by the newspaper La Prensa well agreed with the interpretation given, for instance, by the American newspaper man, Edward Price of Berlin, who said that the United States was only waiting for the proper moment in order opportunely to assist the entente.

"Resources for Entente."

"'The same American stated that Americans, from the beginning of the war, really participated in it by putting the immense resources of the United States at the entente's disposal and that the Americans had not declared war only because they felt sure that assistance by friendly neutrality would be during that time much more efficient for the entente than direct participation in the war.

"'Whether this American newspaper man reported the facts exactly we were at a loss to judge in satisfactory fashion, since we were more or less completely cut off from real communication with the United States.

"'But there were other facts which seemed to confirm this and similar assurances. Everybody knows these facts and I need not repeat them.

"'The entente propaganda services have sufficiently heralded all these proentente demonstrations in the United States. And if you link these demonstrations, together with the actual attitude of the United States, then it is obvious that the consideration was not frivolous on our part of what defensive measures we should take if we were attacked by the United States.'"

U. S. OFFICIALS DOUBT BERLIN'S 'PLOT' ATTITUDE

Point to Fact Orders Were Issued Before Crisis on Submarines.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D.C., March 3.—[Special.]—State department officials tonight refused to make official comment on the statement by Foreign Minister Zimmermann of Germany that the efforts of Berlin to win Mexico and Japan into an alliance against the United States was purely a defensive measure.

Privately, however, officials of the department scoffed at the explanation that the alliance was not to be considered unless the United States should attack Germany. The fact that the instructions were sent through Ambassador Bernstorff eleven days before Germany announced resumption of ruthless submarine warfare satisfies the administration that Germany knew President Wilson would break relations, and also that the German chancellor deliberately deceived the reichstag last week when he said that the action of the United States in withdrawing Ambassador Gerard was a surprise to the kaiser's government.

Dr. Zimmermann's charge that the United States had sought to array the South American states against Germany two years ago is not worth serious denial, according to administration officials.

"Unfriendly Act" Seen.

The general comment in official circles was that Germany had confessed to an "unfriendly act" against the United States and in some quarters was heard the assertion that Germany had committed what in normal times undoubtedly would be considered an "act of war."

No disposition, however, is manifested by either the administrative or legislative branch of the government to make the German government's acknowledgment of a war plot against the United States a cause for war, particularly as it is generally believed that the Teutonic scheme has been nipped.

If war should develop between the United States and Germany the Teutonic war plot would constitute one of the chief counts in the American indictment. Secretary Zimmermann's confirmation of the plot is viewed as removing any possibility of dispute over the validity of such an indictment in the event of war.

May Offer More Proof.

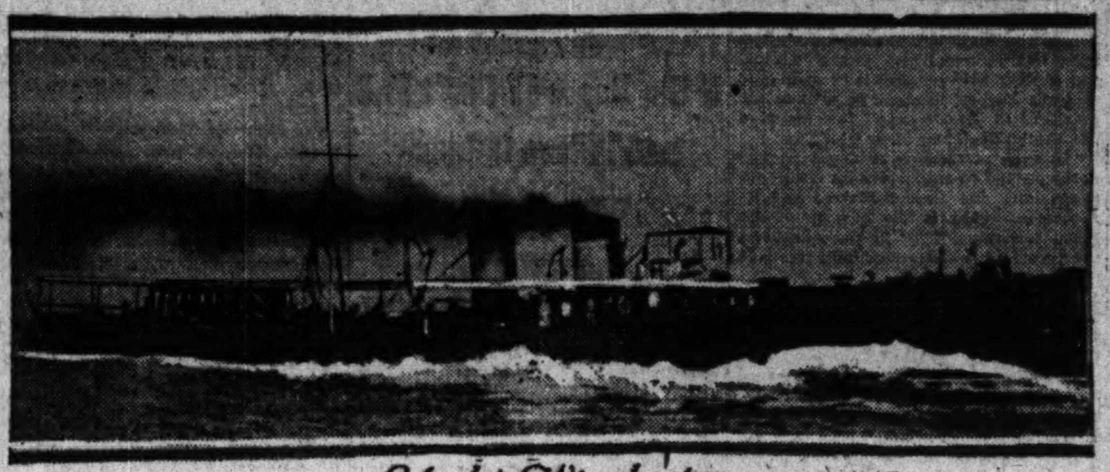
The German news agency's cablegram quoting Dr. Zimmermann's admissions brought expressions of satisfaction from administration officials who had expected a denial from Germany of a nature that might place President Wilson on the defensive and compel him to reveal his proof of the charges. Now there will be no occasion for the president to submit proof to the American people and the world. Official intimations are not lacking, however, that circumstances may cause the president to disclose further information concerning German intrigues against the United States in Central and South America.

Stone and Clark Upset.

The Zimmermann admission proved particularly embarrassing to Senator Stone, Speaker Clark, and other Democratic leaders who had scouted the truth of the president's revelation. It accentuated the unpleasantness developing between the White House and Democratic leaders in congress who are fighting the legislation authorizing the president to deal with Germany with a free hand, while the support of the administration, notably in the senate, has devolved upon the Republicans.

"Germany has given us all the evidence one could demand that, if war comes, our isolation may prove no protection against countless perils," said a Republican senator who is demanding that the administration lose no time in preparing for the gravest developments.

Chicagoans Plan Patrol Fleet of Speedy Yachts for Use of United States in War Service



Yacht Winchester

Stuart G. Shepard of the law firm of Shepard, McCormick, Thompson, Kirkland & Patterson has launched a movement to buy, assemble, and turn over to the government an auxiliary fleet of fast yachts and patrol boats for service on both sea coasts in the event of war with Germany.

The plan contemplates the purchasing by groups of men of fast yachts to be placed at the disposal of the navy and ultimately the swinging into the defense line of hundreds and possibly thousands of owners of yachts and power boats. This immediate tender to the government, the promoters hold, will be of inestimable service in the defense line pending the time when the government can make more adequate preparations on both seacoasts.

Follow Borden's Lead.

Following the lead of John Borden, whose yacht has been accepted by the navy department, Mr. Shepard proposes at the outset that the steam yacht Winchester, the fastest yacht ever built in the United States, be purchased and given to the navy department.

Several of Mr. Shepard's associates, to whom the plan has been unfolded, already have said they would contribute to the fund and when the boat can be purchased they propose it shall be given to the government as Chicago's first contribution to seacoast defense.

"Possibly other groups will be interested in this proposition," said Mr. Shepard, "and in time a great auxiliary naval force could be mobilized for seacoast and patrol duty without cost to the government except the mounting of guns and other equipment of that character."

Has 36 Mile Speed.

The Winchester was built by the Bath Iron works, at Bath, Me. This same firm builds the government's torpedo boat destroyers. The craft is equipped with turbine engines and on its trial trip made thirty-one and one-half knots an hour, or more than thirty-six miles. The Winchester is 225 feet over all, 21 foot beam, with a displacement of 250 tons and an indicated horse power of 8,000.

"Provision is found in the new navy personnel bill," continued Mr. Shepard, "for enrolling men of naval, yachting, and other seafaring experience. It is proposed that the Winchester be bought and donated to the government as a gift from Chicago and Chicagoans.

"Some of the contributors are able to qualify in the naval reserve and hope to find a berth aboard the Winchester or some of the other navy ships if war unfortunately should come.

Many Annapolis Men Here.

"It is probable that Chicago will furnish a large number of men for the navy, as there always has been a number of former Annapolis men located here in the various big industries, and there always has been a considerable interest in the efficient naval militia, as well as in yachting."

Mr. Shepard himself was identified with the naval reserve for a number of years.

MORE THAN 1,000 PRIVATE YACHTS FOR U. S. PATROLS

Some Eastern Owners Offer Services—Navy Has List.

BY MARK WATSON.

New York, March 3.—[Special.]—Nearly a thousand motorboat owners of New York harbor have offered their boats to the government under varying conditions in the event of war. A great part of them have offered their boats without stipulation and also have offered to supply personnel, in most cases with the owner as commanding officer.

The offers are the result of the request made a week ago by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin Roosevelt, who explained to yachtsmen the imperative need of many small boats for patrol work to protect the sea coast, especially the Atlantic ports.

He gave high praise to the 4,000 patrol boats of Great Britain, which have enabled the British navy to maintain control of the sea with losses no larger than those sustained.

Rear Admiral Usher in Charge.

The enrolling of the offers, study of the individual boats' efficiency, and classification of the available units for harbor work and high seas duty have been undertaken by Rear Admiral Usher of the New York navy yard.

At his office it was stated that boat owners' enthusiasm was manifest and that there had been offered a great many boats which the navy department would be unable to use.

"There are severe requirements," it was explained, "and not all pleasure boats can meet them. For a certain class of work we wish the very swiftest vessels. For another class we wish vessels of a more seaworthy type and not necessarily so fast. For another class we wish vessels built even more stoutly, so that fair sized guns can be mounted on them without danger of straining the hull when the guns are fired.

"Many of the small boats are not able to answer any of these demands, and so we are not able at this time to make use of them in our classification.

Take Registry Records.

"We are not waiting for owners to make the offers. We are taking the registry records and eliminating many boats from consideration right there. The others are set down for later examination. We want to get as many satisfactory boats here as possible. Much of the work would be around New York and it is desirable to obtain the maximum of privately owned boats here, as personnel is thus more easily assured.

"The classification shows whether the owner is willing to give his boat, to sell it, or to charter it. This is merely a time saver, for if the government wishes the boat in war time it will take it, but it is convenient to know how many boats, equipped and manned, may be available at a given moment. The larger vessels we are not classifying for patrol work, for they will be needed as cargo vessels and auxiliary cruisers."

Classification of Ships.

The classification starts with forty-one large motorboats which were participants in last summer's naval cruise.

Of these the largest is William Ziegler Jr.'s Gem, 165 feet, with a speed of twenty-three knots. C. P. Brigham's Chingachook, a sixty footer, is speedier, as is Ralph Pulitzer's Mystery, a fifty-eight footer, registering twenty-nine knots. Mr. Pulitzer will receive shortly a seventy-one foot Luders craft now under construction. Two fifty-five foot speedsters are owned by J. K. Robinson and Arch Selwyn.

Mr. Brigham is president of the Greenport Basin & Constructing company, where, it is reported, some smaller craft of tremendous speed, intended for harbor service or smooth sea patrol, are now being developed. They are expected to develop forty-one knots with their double 400 horse power engines, and to carry two torpedo tubes.

U. S. ASKS DATA ON LAKE BOATS

Palm Beach, Fla., March 3.—[Special.]—William J. Conners, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Lakes Steamship company, said tonight he had been requested by the government to send full statement of tonnage, speed, conditions, etc., of the nine boats of this line and of his private yacht, the Mary Alice, now at Buffalo.

Bernstorff a Candidate for Seat in Reichstag

AMSTERDAM, March 3.—Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, has been nominated as a candidate for the reichstag in place of the late Herr von Neiding, according to the Telegraaf.

CONGRESS BIDS GOOD-BY TODAY TO 102 MEMBERS

Washington, D. C., March 3.—One hundred and two members of congress will close their legislative careers tomorrow noon, when the sixty-fourth session ends by constitutional limitation. Of this number fifteen are senators. They are:

Bryan [Fla.],	Lea [Tenn.],
Catron [N. M.],	Lippitt [R. I.],
Chilton [W. Va.],	Martine [N. J.],
Clapp [Minn.],	O'Gorman [N. Y.],
Clark [Wyo.],	Oliver [Pa.],
Du Pont [Del.],	Sutherland [Utah],
Johnson [Me.],	Works [Cal.].
Kern [Ind.],

The number who will return to private life after tomorrow is unusually large in both house and senate. Among the more picturesque of these figures in the house are:

Sparkman of Florida, who has served twenty-two years successively; Representative Bennet of New York, who enjoys the unique distinction of having been in and out of congress three times; Representative Murray of Oklahoma, familiarly known as "Alfalfa Bill"; Representative Davis of Texas; Representative McCorkle of South Carolina enjoys the distinction of serving one of the shortest terms on record. He was a member for only eight days. Representative Rucker of Georgia served eight weeks. Both filled vacancies caused by death.

AUSTRIAN CHIEF IS DISMISSED

LONDON, March 3.—Emperor Charles of Austria has dismissed Field Marshal Conrad von Hoetzendorf, Austrian chief of staff, according to a Vienna dispatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam. Baron Strauzenburg succeeds Von Hoetzendorf.

PANAMA, March 3.—There is no substantiation here for the rumors that there is a German submarine base in the Gulf of Darien.

Zeppelin Explodes; Ten Dead.

AMSTERDAM, March 3.—A new Zeppelin, on its speed trial at Ghent last Monday exploded, burning to death ten of those aboard it, according to dispatches received here from Belgium.

SWEDEN FACING SERIOUS SPLIT IN GOVERNMENT

STOCKHOLM, March 3.—The government was defeated today in a joint ballot of the two chambers of the riksdag on the request for the appropriation of 30,000,000 crowns to be used in preserving Sweden's neutrality. The first chamber gave eighty-seven votes in favor of the appropriation and fifty-nine in opposition, but the second chamber cast eighty-five ayes and 128 nays, thus giving a joint majority of fifteen against the government.

The government's bill for the appropriation was first debated in the separate chambers last Saturday. The opposition proposed an amendment providing for an appropriation of 10,000,000 crowns. The first chamber accepted the government measure by a vote of 76 to 49, but the second chamber rejected it by a vote of 104 against 68. This made necessary today's joint ballot. The government thus gets one-third of the sum requested.

What, if any, will be the political result of the balloting cannot be predicted, but the rejection of the government bill, even though half expected, is nevertheless a great blow.

CHICAGO PEACE WORKER TO WED; MET ON FORD SHIP

A romance of the "peace ship" is to deprive the Polish Woman's alliance at 1309 North Ashland avenue of a secretary, Miss Emily Napieralski, "the Jane Addams of the Poles," is to be married in April.

Matthew Curlanis, a real estate dealer of Detroit, met Miss Napieralski aboard Henry Ford's peace ship.

The wedding is set for April 21.

Miss Napieralski is at present active in Red Cross work and lecturing every day.

Former students of Culver Military academy are going to organize a "Culver division" and offer their services to the government.

JAPAN HOLDING JINGO JOURNALS IN CLOSE LEASH

Officials Hold Issues with U. S. May Be Settled by Negotiations.

TOKIO, March 2.—Kijuro Shidehara, vice foreign minister, today, in response to a question regarding Japan's attitude toward the anti-Japanese measures which were brought forward in Idaho and Oregon, said he had especially requested newspapers to refrain from inflammatory comment, advising that the matter be left for treatment through diplomatic channels.

It was noticeable that the agitation did not approach that of the time the matter was brought up in California in 1913, and it is doubtful whether the masses of the people were even cognizant of the Oregon and Idaho bills.

Sees U. S. Trying to Be Fair.

"Of course, we registered objections to the bills, on the ground that they were discriminatory," M. Shidehara continued. "Japan is convinced Secretary Lansing has done everything possible to prevent the passage of the measures, but regrets the apparent revival of an anti-alien measure in one state. We realize the embarrassment of the central government owing to the system of state rights, but it is our duty to protect the dignity, honor, and interests of Japanese subjects."

M. Shidehara, continuing, declared that the relations between Japan and America were entirely friendly, and that Japan hoped to discover a fundamental solution of the problems affecting Japanese residents in the United States, but had not yet found it.

Germany Called Trouble Breeder.

An additional statement issued by the Japanese foreign office refers to frequent attempts of Germany "to sow seeds of distrust between Japan and Great Britain and to cause the estrangement of Japan and the United States," and adds:

"The government is confident that the peoples and governments of the entente will continue to have confidence in Japan's loyalty and its determination to extend all possible aid and share the difficulties and hardships until the struggle against Germany and German cruelties ends."

BULGAR RULER SERIOUSLY ILL, ROME REPORT

ROME, March 3.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is dangerously ill at an Austrian health resort, according to advices here today.

The dispatch today is the first word of his illness. He was last reported in attendance at the conference at the German kaiser's headquarters on Jan. 27, when the unlimited submarine warfare was decided upon.

King Ferdinand was 56 years old on Feb. 26. He assumed the government in 1887, after abdication of Prince Alexander.

JUDGE INTIMATES FARRELL "FIXED" SUIT; WIFE WINS

$35 a Month Alimony and Child to Go to Mrs. Farrell.

Intimating that Daniel Farrell and his witnesses had "framed" a defense to his wife's suit for separate maintenance, Judge Charles M. Thomson of the Circuit court yesterday dismissed the husband's cross bill charging infidelity and granted Mrs. Jessie Farrell of 848 Dakin street $35 a month and the custody of their 7 year old child.

For several days the judge had been listening to testimony of Mrs. William Zulauf of 6345 Harvard avenue and Mrs. Graves, a neighbor, alleging that Mrs. Farrell had been too friendly with Dr. H. E. Alma, her family physician, and Charles B. Hoffer, a sanitary engineer. For several months Mrs. Farrell roomed at the home of Mrs. Zulauf. Mrs. Graves testified she had seen Mrs. Farrell there with her arms around the neck of the doctor, kissing him as they sat on a couch.

Judge Absolves Doctor.

"This is a suit in which I have noticed a number of unusual developments," said Judge Thomson. "The first is Mrs. Graves' testimony. We have seen the doctor here on the stand, and it is plain that he is not the type that would go around hugging his patients."

Then the judge touched on the incidents following the gas episode, in which Mr. Farrell testified his wife locked herself in the bathroom and threatened to commit suicide.

"Mr. Farrell says his wife told him she would neither eat nor sleep until she could see Clark Hallam, formerly a member of the First Illinois cavalry," continued the judge. "Farrell called Hallam and left him alone with Mrs. Farrell. He was either crazy or was leading Hallam into a trap for the $25,000 alienation of affection suit he started later but dropped.

Farrell "Oversuspicious."

"On the stand Farrell said he became convinced his wife had been intimate with other men when Mrs. Zulauf had told him of seeing her in a room of her own home with a man. Both were sleeping, she told him. Prior to that time he told me that the Dakin street address where his wife is now staying was a questionable flat. Farrell is oversuspicious. He would suspect his own mother."

Previous to Judge Thomson's statement, Dr. Alma and others named in the action denied the charges against them.

Besides the $35 a month Farrell was required to pay withing the next sixty days a $60 doctor bill of his child and all solicitors' fees.

TEUTON CONSUL MISSES PAPERS

BERLIN, March 3, by wireless to Sayville.—A Zurich dispatch reports that the Austrian consulate general there has been entered by burglars, who made away with every piece of paper on which anything was written or printed. The dispatch says the theft was committed by the most expert burglars, who left behind them tools worth about 2,000 francs, and that it appears the crime was committed, not for robbery, but for a political purpose.

CREAM OF RICE

Told to the CREAM OF RICE Demonstrators in the Big Stores

(These are Remarks Made by Users of CREAM OF RICE While They Stop at the Demonstrators' Tables.)

"We have learned to use it in so many ways that mother prepared an entire meal with it. First she served it as a cereal food, then the muffins, coffee cake and dessert—all from CREAM OF RICE."

"It's a splendid food for babies."

"Never knew of any food to be used in so many ways. I thought it was only a breakfast food when I took home the first box."

"I didn't know you could bake with CREAM OF RICE."

"You ought to tell the people to try brown sugar on their CREAM OF RICE. I discovered how good it is with brown sugar one morning when we had no white sugar in the house. Now we keep brown sugar on hand for our CREAM OF RICE."

"It saves me making fancy desserts."

"We keep CREAM OF RICE 'cooked up' in summer and winter. Never had such an easy food to prepare in the house. Sometimes we serve it hot and sometimes cold."

"Baby loves it."

"We like CREAM OF RICE much better when it is cooked with milk. It is perfectly delicious when cooked this way."

"We wouldn't be without CREAM OF RICE in the house any more than we would be without flour. We bake so many different things with it, and use it on the coffee cake and muffins regularly."

Fed Her Flock on Fifteen Cents

"I'm astonished at the economy of Cream of Rice. Last week one package fed the children with liberal bowls of steaming hot cereal every morning and it seems like I made a pudding or a dessert from it most every day. Then it supplied the men folks with all the pancakes they wanted on two occasions, and let me tell you they certainly CAN EAT CREAM OF RICE PANCAKES. So I think that was one fifteen cents I got overflowing value out of, especially as all the folks, young and old, enjoy and thrive on Cream of Rice and keep me busy trying out new recipes from your book."—Mrs. J. CITY FARMERS EAGER TO JOIN GARDEN CRUSADE

"Tribune" Bureau Has a Rush of Applicants for Small Plots.

The back to the soil movement has captured Chicago.

The garden campaign initiated a week ago by THE TRIBUNE has spread to all parts of the city and it now is assured that there will be hundreds of followers of the "city farmer" idea ready to take up the cultivation of vacant land and backyard plots as soon as the planting season begins.

Letters already are coming in to the free garden bureau organized by THE TRIBUNE. These letters come from persons in all walks of life. Women are among those who are enthusiastic for the success of the garden plan. A large portion of the applications for free gardens which are being listed come from them.

Woman Seeks Tract.

One of the women applicants is Miss Grace E. Manion of 2901 Warren avenue. She seeks a small tract of land.

Mrs. Sarah Schenberger and Mrs. A. R. Squair, 4741 Calumet avenue, who are widows of civil war veterans, assert that they are going to cultivate a lot to cut down their household expenses.

Florence E. Jacobi, 4418 Clifton avenue, writes that she and her mother intend to back the garden plan to the limit.

"My mother will devote all her time to it, while I and my friends put in all of our spare time," she writes.

Ethel E. MacDonald, 917 North Waller street, writes: "I think the idea is a splendid one." Miss MacDonald made application for a small plot of land near her home to raise vegetables on.

This Man "Farm Bred."

Wilbert A. Stevens, who writes he is "farm bred," asserts he can "eke out" a fine living from a small plot of land. "I have been longing for a garden both for pleasure of gardening and for business," he says.

Joe Simpson, 6120 Michigan avenue, last year grew carrots, lettuce, radishes, and other vegetables on a vacant lot. This year promises to beat his last year's record.

Blanche Huard, 2454 South Park avenue, who is 15 years old, has been ill. Miss Huard hit on the garden plan as ideal to regain her health and wrote the free garden bureau. She will be allotted a small plot.

MILITANT HEADS SUFFRAGE UNION

Washington, D. C., March 3.—Miss Alice Paul—America's most militant suffrage leader—today was elected unanimously as national chairman of the Amalgamated Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and the National Woman's party, in joint convention here.

The election of Miss Paul heralded a nation-wide fight along more strenuous lines, leaders believe, for the enfranchisement of women by passage of the suffrage amendment to the federal constitution.

PLENTIFUL

Quantities of Foods Reported from Shakespeare Avenue District.

THE report from the second precinct to give figures in the city-wide police food census yesterday showed plentiful quantities in practically every line of necessities despite alleged shortage in many of them. The figures were obtained in 600 stores.

Capt. Henry E. Gorman of the Shakespeare avenue police district reported that in his precinct there were 2,450 pounds of sugar, selling at 7 and 8 cents; 2,500 pounds of cabbages, selling at 15 cents; 2,800 pounds of potatoes, selling at $3.40 a bushel, and 12,870 dozen eggs, selling at 45 cents.

Eggs wholesale went up yesterday half a cent, probably because of predictions of another cold spell. The average price retail was from 35 to 45 cents a dozen.

Potatoes still hang around 80 cents a peck. The county hospital, which inaugurated a boycott last week on tubers, will continue it indefinitely until the price falls. Also dealers, who said the price this week of tubers will be governed solely by the supply and demand, said they expected many housewives will wage the boycott until a lower figure is reached.

The belief that sugar will rise to unprecedented prices because of the shortage in supply coming from Cuba was expressed by some dealers.

CIVIC BODIES TAKE HAND IN GARMENT STRIKE

Members of three influential organzatons—the City club, the Woman's City club, and the Chicago Church federation—took a hand in the strike of women's garment workers yesterday.

The first two named were active in an effort to secure acceptance of an offer made by Attorney L. F. Jacobson, counsel for a number of the garment manufacturers, to throw open the books of his clients for perusal with regard to wages paid and hours of labor.

The church organization sent letters to the manufacturers and their representatives inviting them to meet with leaders of the strike and the labor committee of the federation council in an effort to settle the controversy. The letter follows:

"The strike has reached the point where public interest is deeply enlisted. It is a profound pity that honest differences cannot be adjusted peaceably without resort to the brutality of a strike, which is nothng less than industrial warfare. Feeling sure that you and those associated with you are willing to be fair in the matter, we are writing to ask if you would be willing to meet representatives of the strikers in the presence of the labor committee of our organization if we will arrange such a meeting."

Several strikers were arrested during the day while picketing. Hearing of contempt charges by Judge Baldwin for alleged violations of an anti-picketing injunction will take place tomorrow.

Glencoe Votes Against Sheridan Road Bonds

By a vote of 358 to 131 citizens of Glencoe yesterday rejected a proposition to issue bonds of $28,000 for repairing the streets of the village, including Sheridan road.

SUFFRAGE SIEGE OF WHITE HOUSE WILL END TODAY

Silent Women to Encircle Mansion as Wilson's Term Is Closing.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—Encircling the White House with a chain of purple, white, and gold, woman suffragists will bring to a climax tomorrow in a two hour silent demonstration their siege of President Wilson on behalf of a federal suffrage amendment.

About a thousand women, members of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and the National Women's party, have enlisted to lengthen for the final watch the line pickets on guard at the White House gates for the last six weeks, encompassing the president's comings and goings, to impress him with their determination to have the ballot.

Only in a modified form, however, will the demonstration follow plans that had been laid to reproduce the march of the Israelites around Jericho. Some of the women's leaders say the critical international situation would make such a demonstration appear in bad taste.

Plan Unique Demonstration.

Tomorrow's demonstration, the most remarkable perhaps of all those that have characterized the fight for equal suffrage, will be timed to begin at 3 o'clock, three hours after the official beginning of the new presidential term.

Forming at the union headquarters in a nearby street, the line will proceed past the east entrance of the White House, encompass the semi-circular southern boundary of the grounds next the ellipse, pass up the street between the White House and the state, war, and navy building, and back to the east in Pennsylvania avenue, halting when the ring has been completed. For two hours, then, the line is to be kept at attention.

Besides bringing to a close the White House picketing the march will wind up a three day convention here at which the Congressional union and the Women's party were merged under the presidency of Miss Alice Paul of Pennsylvania. Miss Anne Martin of Nevada, who was the first chairman of the Women's party, was elected vice chairman today and the reorganization was completed with selection of an executive committee of ten. Tonight at a banquet Miss Lucy Burns of New York, who managed the famous "suffrage special" in the last campaign, was a guest of honor.

Wilson Urges Tennessee Suffrage.

An earnest hope that the Tennessee senate will reconsider its recent action in rejecting a woman suffrage bill was expressed by President Wilson in a telegram today to the president of the senate. The measure already had passed the lower house of the legislature and President Wilson said he felt the upper house was shirking a moral responsibility when it refused to accept it. The telegram follows:

"May I not express my earnest hope that the senate of Tennessee will reconsider the vote by which it rejected the legislation extendng the suffrage to women? Our party is so distinctly pledged to its passage that it seems to me the moral obligation is complete."

STAATS-ZEITUNG DEFENDS NOTE BY ZIMMERMANN

The Illinois Staats-Zeitung this morning will say of the Zimmermann note and of the attitude of Germany toward the United States:

"We all know that the United States under the protection of neutrality has done all in its power to assist the allies with war material and money against the central powers, and it is authentic that the king of England as well as the president of France drank the health of the United States as their best ally.

"In spite of these facts Germany has never ceased to emphasize its desire for peace with the United States, and its American policy is the best proof for these feelings. Even in the document the president is claimed to hold this love for peace is expressed.

"If now it further appears that the United States in fact has tried to influence the South American republics to join the allies against Germany, and Germany is reported to intend to protect itself through Mexico and Japan (both denying such intent), then Germany would have done nothing which in world politics it would not be justified to do. Otherwise EVERY alliance between nations would be 'conspiration,' and the alliance between England, France, Russia, Japan, Italy, and the Balkan states would then be the most damnable, most gigantic conspiration against Germany, and every participant of such a combination would be an arch criminal.

"Either this is true or there is no logic any more. It would be entirely different if Germany would have instigated Mexico against the United States in times of peace—then it would have been a damnable action which we would certainly have had to meet.

"But if Germany, fighting for its existence against a world of open and secret enemies, tries to protect itself against a neutral power which instigates neutrals to join Germany's enemies, then we have no right to call this a 'German plot' without coming under suspicion of having lost our reason."

"Rookie" Camp Members to Drill on Wednesdays

The Military Training Camps association, in the federal building, is composing a drill organization, both of members of the association and other men desirous of attending military training camps this coming summer. Beginning next Wednesday night drilling will take place at the Second Regiment armory.

JIM O'LEARY WILL PAY BETS MONDAY, HE SAYS

If the Heavens Don't Fall and Wilson Is Inaugurated.

If you have a ticket on Woodrow Wilson's reelection to the presidency last November, fish it out of the bureau drawer or the old vest pocket, for "Big Jim" O'Leary, stockyards gambling king, is going to pay tomorrow—he says.

"He says" is added for the sake of accuracy, for three times since Nov. 8 O'Leary has set a date for paying off bets amounting, some say, to more than $500,000, and each time he has postponed action.

O'Leary Is Pained.

Mr. O'Leary, the son of the owner of the famous O'Leary cow, the very same, was clamping his massive jaws on a hot and juicy sandwich in his saloon at 4183 South Halsted street yesterday afternoon when he was interrupted with the question:

"Are you broke?"

"Where do you get that stuff?" he inquired with apparent pain.

Saloon Worth $100,000.

A report that the palatial O'Leary mansion at 726 Garfield boulevard was sold for $19,400 last August as the result of a foreclosure suit brought by Moses L. Puryin, head of a concern in the Railway Exchange building, was called to Mr. O'Leary's attention.

"Yes," he said, "I allowed it to be sold, but don't get it into your head that I had to let it go. It was a matter of business pure and simple. I'll sell anything I've got if the price is right." He added that the saloon is worth $100,000.

Hangers on at the O'Leary place said that the gambler has been paying his election bets "right along."

"I'm not drawing any interest on the money I'm holding," O'Leary declared in answer to questions.

MRS. J. J. SHUBERT GRANTED DECREE

Buffalo, N. Y., March 3.—[Special.]—An interlocutory decree of divorce in favor of Mrs. Jacob J. Shubert of New York was handed down in the Supreme court today by Justice Herbert P. Bissell.

The judgment includes the right of Mrs. Shubert to have the custody of her little son, Jacob Shubert Jr., and to accept a sum, said to be $500 a month, as alimony.

The Shuberts were married in Rheims, France, May 26, 1907. Mr. Shubert did not contest the divorce. The cause of the action was proven by two witnesses from New York, who attended a certain dinner, where a woman, not Mrs. Shubert, was present with Mr. Shubert.

COL. E. M. HOUSE WILSON'S GUEST

Washington, D. C., March 3.—Col. E. M. House, personal friend and adviser of President Wilson, reached Washington this evening and is a guest at the White House.

Drug Cure Doctor "Puts One Over" Newspapers, But

CAN'T FOOL DRUG USERS

Prompted by the world-wide success of the modern "Neal Way" during the past seven years, hundreds of "Discoverers" of how to get free publicity have from time to time sought victims to experiment on.

For example, in a recent liberal "write-up," one of these wise "discoverers" modestly suggests that he wants "Experience in One Hundred Cases" before he "talks about" his discovery.

The wise drug user is not harmed by this stuff. He is looking for a "Sure Thing," and shuns the "experiment."

Tens of thousands of former Drink or Drug users have found that the "Neal Way" is the only HUMANE way that scientifically overcomes the cause and effects of using drink or drugs in a FEW DAYS—WITHOUT SUFFERING.

The Greatest Objection

in Motor Car Operation Has Been Finally Eliminated

¶ Shifting gears while driving an automobile has always been the most difficult and annoying operation of all.

¶ It is an objectionable feature which automobile engineers have tried for years to solve. Multiple cylinders were first adopted. Then the electric gear-shift was later announced. And yet the old trouble remained.

¶ So the Owen Magnetic car, with its magnetic transmission, which eliminates shift-gears and clutch, is the only practical and successful solution of this great fault of motor cars.

¶ One Magnetic Unit in the simplified Owen Magnetic car performs all the functions of starting and lighting, of clutch, clutch-pedal, fly-wheel, gear-shifting and braking. It eliminates all of these cumbersome extra parts.

¶ And a little finger-lever on the steering-wheel controls all of these operations.

¶ Imagine how pleasant it must be to merely move a small lever to start the motor, or to drive "at any one of a thousand speeds," or to put on the brake—an electric brake!

¶ Do more! Ride in the Owen Magnetic and actually enjoy a new degree of motor car comfort.

¶ Just telephone for demonstration appointment. There is no obligation.

You shall decide—
Who is right?

The maker who charges you $100 for a typewriter because he spends $51 in selling—

Or the maker who saves this $51 wasted and gives it to you. There can be no doubt.

The present extravagant method of selling typewriters is a waste the purchaser must pay. For thirty years the price of a standard Typewriter has remained $100 although production has increased many hundred fold.

The OLIVER Typewriter Company now at the height of its success, manufacturing its finest and most popular Model, with huge financial resources, producing thousands of machines at its great factories has

By eliminating the terrific sales expense of antiquated methods.

There is absolutely no change in the quality of the machine. It is the same wonderful light touch, high speed, standard visible typewriter that has been bought by great businesses such as U. S. U.S. ATTORNEYS SEE MORE LABOR COMBINE CASES

Thirteen Union Men and Employers Ask for New Trial.

With the conviction yesterday of the thirteen alleged labor extortionists who have been on trial in Federal Judge Humphrey's court, government officials believe a precedent has been established for a new line of prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust law. It will open the way, they say, for a flood of indictments against members of corporations and organization which heretofore have been considered within the pale of the law in their operations.

The thirteen men found guilty by the jury yesterday were charged with forming an organization and making agreements which tended to block competition in Chicago from outside electrical firms.

Chance for Graft.

During the trial it was proved that the business agents of the labor unions took advantage of the situation created by their agreement with the manufacturers to levy blackmail on outside firms who sought Chicago business. Only through the payment of a bribe to the labor "czars" could an outside firm install electrical equipment without undergoing a strike and heavy losses by various acts of vandalism committed by labor sluggers and "firebugs."

One of the chief grafters was Michael J. Boyle (Umbrella Mike), who, it is alleged, extorted during eight years more than $300,000 from contractors, building owners, and manufacturers. Boyle was the undisputed "czar" of the electrical workers. Plots to commit murder, arson, and other crimes were charged to him.

Those Convicted.

The union men found guilty are:

MICHAEL J. BOYLE (Umbrella Mike), former business agent of Electrical Workers' union.

RAYMOND CLEARY, assistant to Boyle.

FRANK A. LUNDMARK, former business agent.

C. L. HAMPTON, successor to Boyle.

The manufacturers convicted are:

JOHN CUTHBERT, Cuthbert Electrical and Manufacturing company.

CHARLES KREIDER, Kohler Bros.

WARREN E. RIPPLE, J. Lang Electric company.

OTIS B. DUNCAN, J. Lang Electric company.

JAMES OBERMILLER, States Electric company.

JULIAN J. NEILSON, States Electric company.

F. W. BERTHOLD, Electric Apparatus company.

[illegible] BERTHOLD, Electric Apparatus company.

C. J. PETERSON, Henry Neward & Co.

The corporations were:

Cuthbert Electrical and Manufacturing company.

J. Lang Electric company.

States Electric company.

Electric Apparatus company.

Henry Newgard & Co.

The heaviest penalty that can be imposed on each guilty man is one year in the penitentiary and a fine of $3,000. Attorneys E. R. Litzinger and Robert W. Childs moved for a new trial, but Judge Humphrey declared that he would set a date next week for its hearing. The convicted men announced their intention of appealing.

BELL THE CAT

Anti-Cruelty Society Urges Felines Wear Bells to Warn Birds of Their Stealthy Approach.

The Anti-Cruelty Society of Chicago yesterday issued a bulletin asking that bells be placed on cats as a protection to birds. The theory is that birds absorbed in other matters would be warned of the cat's approach by the jingling of the bell or bells.

Accordingly a Humane society cat, with some record as a prowler, was immediately belled.

CHARGES ROADS IN EAST STILL TIE UP FOODS

Griffin Says Car Shortage Is Still Grave Peril.

John P. Griffin, president of the board of trade, in a statement to THE TRIBUNE last night charged that eastern railroads still are holding up shipments of foodstuffs, that Chicago after a wait of two weeks virtually is no nearer the solution of the car shortage, and that inflated prices are the direct result of lack of distribution of farm produce.

Thousands of cars of grain and other produce still congest the Chicago yards, he said, and the embargo situation is not noticeably improved despite assertions to the contrary.

Eastern roads, including the Pennsylvania, asserted during the day that the embargo crisis had passed and that the critical state of affairs of two weeks ago had been so much ameliorated that all danger of a serious shortage in foodstuffs had been eliminated.

This contention is "false," President Griffin said.

"There has not been a noticeable letup in the car shortage situation, and any statement to the contrary made by eastern railroads are false," said Mr. Griffin. "The eastern roads are holding up everything in the way of produce so that they can take care of the output of eastern mills.

"I cannot understand what the interstate commerce commission is doing. We have not heard from them, though it was made plain two weeks ago that the situation was desperate.

"If the eastern lines would move some of the loaded cars here and bring empty cars from the east there would result a better food distribution, and this would take the inflation out of the cost of living."

HOYNE ASSAILS COURT AS JURY FREES ERBSTEIN

Defendants Acquitted 'by Acclamation'—Cost Is Put at $100,000.

Charging that Judge Charles M. Walker's courtroom during the trial of Attorneys Charles E. Erbstein, Patrick H. O'Donnell, and four others, which resulted yesterday in an acquittal for the defendants on a charge of conspiracy, resembled "a disorderly poolroom more than a temple of justice," State's Attorney Hoyne last night issued a statement criticizing the jurist and renewing his attack on the defendants. The jury had acquitted the accused without leaving their seats.

Mr. Hoyne asserted that "manifestly the minds of some of the jurors had been poisoned by prejudicial remarks and insinuations," and he declared that "the necessity of terminating the case was apparent." He claimed that "the defendants and their counsel have made the hearing of the last seven weeks a travesty on justice," mentioned the "buffoonery and scurrilous remarks" made by the defendants in court, and added that "they have been allowed to run riot practically unchecked."

Judge Walker Replies.

To this Judge Walker replied that the statement is unworthy of the prosecutor. He added that "it is unfortunate that the bitterness ran so deep between the contending sides in the case."

The acquittal of Erbstein, O'Donnell, former Detectives Michael Weisbaum, Frederick Roth, and two saloonkeepers—Harry Cohen and Nathan Fisher—was a dramatic climax to a turbulent trial.

Judge Walker had refused in the morning session to nolle pros the conspiracy charge at the request of Assistant State's Attorney Frank Johnston Jr., acting under Mr. Hoyne's instructions, and Mr. Johnston with Assistant State's Attorney Henry A. Berger had thereupon withdrawn from the courtroom, stating that the prosecution had abandoned the case.

Prosecution Loses Fight.

This act, unprecedented in the county's legal history, came on the heels of a fierce battle between the state and Attorneys John J. Healy and Edward S. Day for the defense on the state's contention that it could nolle the case any time. The state lost and Judge Walker adjourned court until 2 p. m.

At 2:45 p. m., when court reconvened, Mr. Johnston was absent and Attorney Day calling attention to the presence of Assistant State's Attorney W. W. De Armond, Mr. De Armond left the courtroom. Attorney Healy, who with Erbstein and Day had held a consultation with Judge Walker in chambers, informed the jury of the state's action.

"We are ready to make a defense if you gentlemen wish to hear it," he said. "We are willing also that you should decide this matter on the testimony already presented."

Cries of "Not Guilty."

There were cries from the jury box of "No guilt has been shown," and Juror Walter McClosky, 1023 North Kedvale avenue, called attention to the fact of the jury's being kept out of the courtroom two days. During that time the state has been arguing that the proceedings should be halted on the grounds of prejudice.

Judge Walker expressed his confidence in their integrity and asked them if they wished to retire to deliberate. The jurors arose, but there were cries that their verdict was an acquittal and they remained in their box, signing the verdict immediately afterwards.

Soon after the verdict had been recorded Assistant State's Attorney Buehler, on Mr. Hoyne's order, asked Judge Walker to set the whole proceedings aside on grounds that Juror McClosky had corroborated the state's claim that the jury had been tampered with. The jurist overruled him.

Attorney Healy in commenting on the verdict estimated that the cost of housing state witnesses for eighteen months and the cost of the trial will reach $100,000.

FLAT OWNERS EXPECT TO RUN OWN COAL MINES

Co-operative Company Is Seen as Best Solution of the Problem.

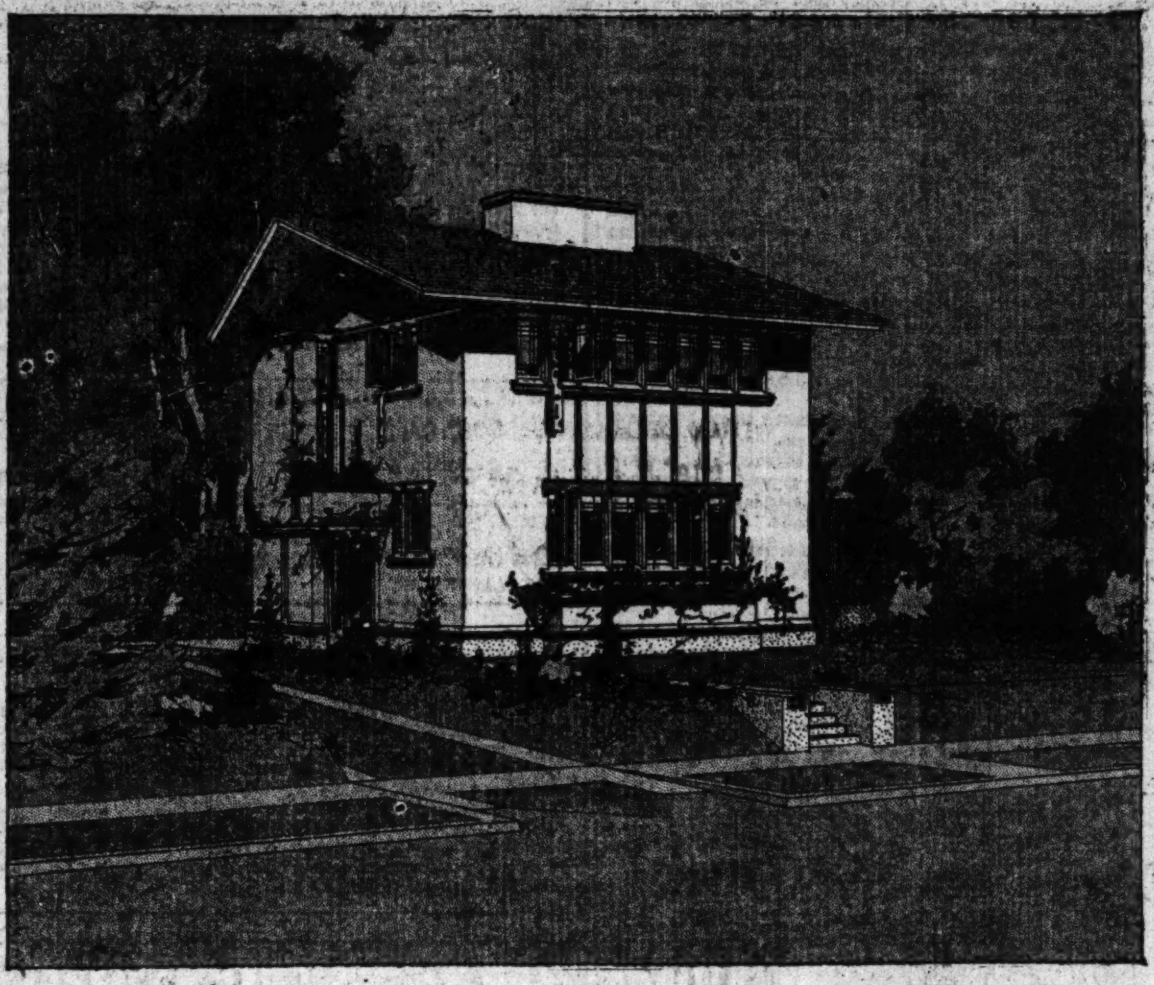
The renting agents of Chicago do not intend that the coal famine and repeated fuel crises of 1916 shall be duplicated this year. Following a meeting of the directors at the rooms of the real estate board of Chicago and a hearing of the report of the coal committee, of which Louis T. Orr of H. G. Howard & Co. is chairman, final plans for the flotation of a $2,000,000 coöperative coal firm were discussed. It is expected the project will be in operating condition by June.

Work on the coöperative scheme has been in progress ever since the members of the renting organization faced the fuel shortage. Since then the plans have been perfected, and a formal announcement of incorporation and personnel is to be made soon.

It is planned to hire experts for the mining, loading at mines, transportation, yarding, and delivery. Present quotations on contract coal are $6.50 to $7 a ton for first fill-up. The coal companies, Mr. Orr declared, are reserving the option to raise prices again after July. For that reason it is imperative that the coöperative enterprise be in operating condition by June.

There are 30,000 apartment buildings in all sections of Chicago represented in the association, housing more than 1,000,000 tenants.

"We have had a great response already from our members," said Mr. Orr. "Many of them have sent in checks for stock."



This house will be built by Hanney Sons, Evanston. Plans of this and many other houses may be seen at dealers' offices and at the Chicago Branch.

AMERICAN HOMES

You who contemplate building a home—fortunately you are now able to have a house as artistically beautiful as it is convenient and comfortable.

The American System of home building enables you to secure houses—correct and charming in design, perfect in taste and intelligent in arrangement—putting at your command the services of Frank Lloyd Wright, America's foremost creative architect—without extra cost.

Wherever you live, in or about Chicago, we will arrange to have one of these houses built for you. We will make all the arrangements, absolutely guarantee the price, with no extras whatever, the materials and the Frank Lloyd Wright designs.

We will arrange for convenient monthly payments if you wish. In the wide variety of designs you will find the American Home that meets your particular desires.

Less cost—that is one amazing feature of the American System, that these beautiful homes, all Frank Lloyd Wright designs, of guaranteed materials and price, can be built for less money than the ordinary house of similar size and materials.

Small homes range in price from $2750 to $3500—larger homes $5000 to $100,000. Whether your plans are for immediate building or somewhat in the future, get in touch with our dealer in your vicinity now, or make an appointment with our Chicago office.

To Builders: These houses will be built through representatives having exclusive rights in their territories. There are still desirable territories not yet closed, for which we will be glad to hear from strong builders who can appreciate the sales possibilities of this enterprise. This applies not only to the immediate Chicago district, but to the surrounding Middle West, which is handled from the Chicago office.

Flats and Apartments: American Homes include also many attractive flat and apartment buildings for which building rights are available to the right parties.

To Subdividers: Nothing could better put the stamp of quality on any subdivision than the building of some of these American Homes designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. We will be glad to show you how easily this is possible.

GARDEN PROFIT MUST BE SHOWN OR PUPILS FAIL

Successful Home Work Is Required by Tobin in Rural Schools.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

If little Johnny doesn't make a net profit of $10 on his chickens he can't pass into the fifth grade. If Sister Sue doesn't show at least $5 profit on her little garden she must stay in the fourth grade.

That is the new rule which goes into force in all the country schools of Cook county this year. It is something very like a revolution in rural education. Already the rural schools about Chicago are recognized as the most progressive in the United States. This latest step in advance will concentrate on them the attention of educators everywhere.

Preparedness for Life.

County Superintendent Tobin and his staff of country life directors have decided to make preparedness for farm life compulsory. The new rule reads as follows: "Beginning Sept. 1, 1917, all pupils will be required to obtain at least one achievement credit annually in order to pass from grade to grade above the fifth."

That does not mean that every boy and girl must make a garden or raise poultry. The girls may learn how to pack fruits and vegetables, for instance. But in order to pass in that course each pupil must pack at least 100 jars of five different varieties of vegetables and fruits and the stuff must be used in the home or sold at a fair rate per jar for labor.

May Do Other Work.

A pupil may also, if he desires, start a news stand or a dairy or a laundry agency, or any one of the different enterprises listed in the "recognized business school-home projects." But if he starts it he must carry it through and show at the end of a year net profits of at least $50. Otherwise he will not pass.

There are other things a child may do in the so-called achievement course. They are all practical and money making operations and unless each pupil carries one of them through successfully—it makes no difference how high he may stand in his book studies—he will not be promoted to the next grade.

Counts as Study Credit.

On the other hand if he does make a good record in his achievement course 15 per cent will be added to his standing in the book studies. The required standing for promotion is 75 per cent. If a pupil stands only 60 per cent in his books and conducts his chicken yard or garden business successfully he will have 15 per cent added to his standing and will go into the next grade with flying colors.

After he leaves the third grade he will be required to carry on one of these practical courses each year he stays in the rural schools. By the time he gets through he should be in real touch with life, instead of carefully cut off from it as are most grammar school pupils at present.

In June of every year these country school children give country life festivals at their schoolhouses. These festivals are attended by the parents of the pupils, and early vegetables and fruits from their gardens are exhibited.

This year Supt. Tobin is making arrangements to have these festivals attended by some of the pupils from the city schools of Chicago.

"Our youngsters are very successful in their gardens," said Supt. Tobin, "and are proud of their success. If they can be of any use in teaching the city children what can be done with a small plot of land they would be tickled to do it."

In June also the annual achievement day for all the country schools in the county will be held in Chicago. Several thousand pupils and parents will be in attendance. It is proposed that the great feature of this year's celebration be a reception by the Chicago Association of Commerce to the farmers, young and old. It has also been suggested that advantage be taken of the opportunity to enlist the Cook county farmers as associate members of the Association of Commerce. That would be only proper recognition of their importance as factors in the commercial supremacy of Chicago.

THE SUCCESSFUL HOME GARDEN

Introductory to a "Tribune" department of vegetable garden advice to city and suburban dwellers. This department will appear daily and Sunday in "The Tribune." Inquiries from readers desiring, through neighborhood and back yard gardens to decrease the cost of living, should be addressed to The Garden Editor.

BY. J. F. H. HEIDE.

To those who have been reared on wilted, insipid vegetables—who have never learned the delightful flavor of crisp, fresh home grown vegetables—there is little in gardening to warrant the necessary attention when prices are normal.

It is an entirely different matter, however, with beans at $4 to $4.50 a bushel, as they were all last summer, especially since four such bushels and more can be grown under back yard conditions from a pint of beans, now costing 25 cents. It will cause the thrifty housewife to stop and think when she realizes that all the potatoes used per year by the average family of four and one-half, namely, twenty-seven bushels, can be grown in this vicinity from a peck of seedlings, now costing 75 cents, on a plot of ground 26½ feet wide and 39 feet long.

It is proposed in this department to take up back yard gardening along approved modern lines, with special regard to the various soils and the atmospheric conditions of Chicago and vicinity.

No Space Too Small.

It is intended to guide the prospective gardener, beginner or experienced, in establishing and caring for such garden as the space limitations permit, between rubbish heaps of the tenement districts, in the courts of apartment buildings, on unused portions of the building lot, on vacant lots adjoining, or on the spacious grounds of a suburban home.

In simple language, stripped of all technical verbiage and of scientific nomenclature, the work of the week (if not of the very day) will be clearly and fully laid out to conform with the varying soil requirements and climatic changes of this vicinity. While a certain uniformity of plan and method will simplify the project, still that plan and method will be so flexible that it will readily adapt itself to most conditions confronting the householder.

The best approved methods of modern horticulture will govern our every step from the first preparation to the final harvest. Conservation of space, of energy, and of expenditure, and the production of the best results—these shall be our aims.

The advantages are not merely economical. "Correct gardening lures men to the natural occupations of the home, gives women a pleasurable pride in the completeness of the household, and stimulates in the child a love of creation and natural simplicity. It exercises a wholesome and refining influence over the character of the entire family circle."

"Loin-Racking Riding."

"Hard work," you say? By no means. The incessant prating of "back breaking garden toil" is no more reasonable than "loin-racking riding" or "arm straining tennis." When unused muscles are set to a new task they must be accustomed to the new strain, which usually requires three to four days. After that gardening is accompanied by no greater discomfort than is walking. Correct physical development requires the exercise of all muscles, including those of the back; and nothing is so well adapted to saving them all from atrophy as handball or vegetable gardening.

"Unsightly?" Far from it. The regular lines of a well kept vegetable garden are pleasing to the eye at every stage of development, and it will truly be well kept if the amateur gardener follows our daily hints. Nevertheless the scheme of planting, to be outlined in due time, will include perennials for masks and landscape effects.

In a word, this column will do its full share in regaining for Chicago its once proud surname of the Garden city, even though chiefly through vegetable gardens. Every phase of the subject will be explained in agreeable homeopathic doses so that we may have fresh vegetables during twelve months of the year through a mere pleasant diversion.

Questions and Answers.

Though we shall concentrate our efforts on such fruits and vegetables as can be readily grown in the vicinity of this great industrial center, we shall give space to all questions about individual preferences as well as those pertaining to peculiar conditions.

The first installment, tomorrow, will deal with zones as influenced by the screen of smoke laden atmosphere which hangs over congested and factory districts, rendering it impossible to bring some of the more delicate fruits to bear in those neighborhoods. It will be shown that all neighborhoods will produce ample variety to surfeit the likes of most people.

Three Not in Confession Named—Delaney Says He Fixed Up Deal.

senger to Healey. Delaney went. He told the chief that the conferees felt they had a right to promotions because of merit and competitive examinations. But the chief said, according to Delaney, "Why don't you think of me a little?" Delaney replied, "I don't know what you mean, chief," and the latter told him to go down and talk it over with "the boys."

Sends Second Message.

This Delaney says he did, and "the boys" sent him back to Healey that afternoon to get Healey's lowest price for the promotions. When Delaney had put it up to Healey "cold turkey," he asserts the latter said, "Tell the boys it will cost them $300 each. It used to cost $500, but I'm a good chief; I'm a nice chief, and I'll make you a better price. I'll promote any of those on the top of the list except Sergts. Day and Fitzgerald. They're too old. I'd rather take those at the top because it will look better."

Delaney went back to his office, but it was then late afternoon on the 11th and only four or five of the sergeants had remained. To these Delaney outlined Healey's ultimatum, and they carried it to the others. But before this meeting broke up "collectors" were appointed. Coles was directed to get $300 each from Matchett, Malone, and O'Connell and "kick in" with $300 himself. Friel was to see Fleming, Cotter, Schoemaker, Lee, and find $300 for himself. Delaney said he would get $300 from Murphy and have his own $300.

$3,200 Turned In.

The next morning the group assembled again and the money was turned over to Delaney. There was $3,200. Matchett was shy $100 and Lieut. John W. Loftus, the twelfth man promoted by Healey, had not been approached. Delaney put the money in an envelope, taking it to Healey's office at once. A few minutes later he returned with the word that the order would be out late that afternoon, and, sure enough, it appeared, promoting the twelve lieutenants and transferring 150 other policemen.

Then the next morning the twelve new lieutenants were called to the chief's office and were told by the man who had held them up:

"You were promoted solely because of your honesty and efficiency. You owe it to no one except Mayor Thompson and myself. You have given fine police service and are good Americans. Go out and make good lieutenants."

Hoyne Condones Action.

"These men were like children before Healey," said Mr. Hoyne after listening to the confessions. "I have no intention of prosecuting them as long as they tell the truth, as I believe they have done."

"I'm surprised, for, as every one knows, I trusted Healey implicitly," said Mayor Thompson when informed of the confessions last night. "However, there is nothing that I can say."

Both Chief Schuettler and First Deputy Westbrook said they believed "absolutely" in the truth of the lieutenants' statements. The chief would not say whether he would punish them, however. He broke his calm where former Chief Healey is concerned, however, and said:

"They were glad to get this thing off their minds. Their wives knew of it, and some of them could not stand the worry. As far as I know they had been straight before. When this graft money was demanded these men were past middle age and they saw their life's work slipping away from them for the lack of a paltry $300. They accepted the proposition.

Schuettler Is Grieved.

"These men are as fine a lot as we have on the police force. The only thing I am sorry for is that the itching palm of a man who should have been directing them in the straight and narrow path caused their contamination. I am grieved that I am obliged to make this statement as Chief Healey's successor."

Lieut. Schoemaker last night denied that he had agreed to pay $300, as set forth in the confession of Friel. He said he had been approached, but that he had not paid and had not agreed to pay. He made a similar statement to Mr. Hoyne some time ago.

Former Chief Healey last night denied the charges made in the confessions and said that any statement must come from his attorney, John J. Healy. The health of the former police head is reported to be failing rapidly.

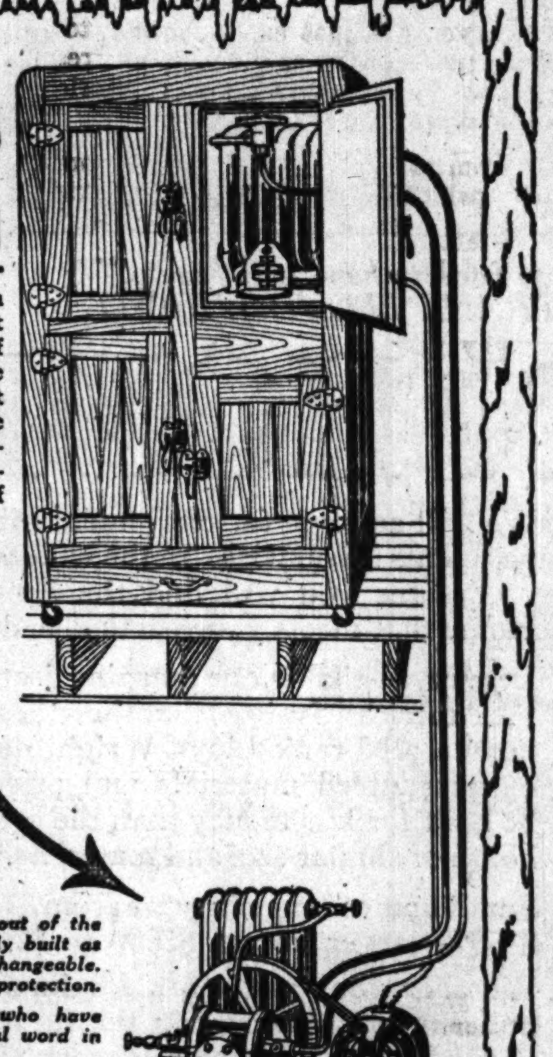
Big Business for Business Men

The most wasteful thing in American life today is the ice delivery system. It costs the ice manufacturer in excess of five times as much to deliver a ton of ice to the family ice boxes as the entire cost of manufacture of the same ton at the plant. The most insanitary and provoking service in your home is the iceman and his sloppy daily "hunk" of much handled expensive ice.

Your cleanest and most satisfactory service is the electric wire, and every home has this electric service.

If you do not appreciate the possibilities of introducing in American homes an electric refrigerating service, as simple and dependable as electric light, and so far ahead of delivered ice in coldness and cleanliness as a tungsten lamp is superior to the kerosene lamp, this announcement is not for you.



Here Is FRIDGER

placed in the cellar or any other convenient out of the way place. A sturdy apparatus as beautifully built as the best automobile. All parts strictly interchangeable. Its very simplicity is the basis of our patent protection.

Mechanical and refrigerating engineers who have examined it agree with us that it is the final word in artificial refrigeration.

Manufactured by financially responsible people who have no stock to sell and who have invested a fortune and years of time in solving the domestic refrigeration problem.

WE WANT MEN

We want men of force and capital; successful men who see that electric ice in the home will quickly become this country's fastest growing and most profitable business. For such men we have a proposition bigger than any agency contract in any line has ever offered.

The initial investment need not be large, BUT we must have men who can swing big business fast and hard as they see it opening before them in their territories.

Today territory is open and tomorrow your territory may be taken.

SMALL GRAND PIANOS
Made by Master Musicians

It is a comparatively easy matter to build a grand piano case small enough to meet the restricted measurements of the modern apartment and small home. It is an exceedingly difficult task to make of so small a piece of furniture, a truly beautiful musical instrument. The CABLE MIDGET GRAND owes its acknowledged superiority over other small grands to the fact that it is produced by master musicians in our own great factories, from the drawing of the scale to the final tone tests. A $750 value at $585. EASY TERMS

A PIANO OF HIGH MERIT
At Indeed a Low Price

In the WELLINGTON we present a piano praised by musical authorities everywhere, beautiful in design and mellow in tone, yet priced by us (because we make it in large numbers) at only $275. We invite comparisons between the WELLINGTON Style W at $275 with pianos selling elsewhere at a much higher price. Cash or easy terms.

THOSE WHO DANCE

will be delighted with the orchestral effects produced upon the EUPHONA HOME ELECTRIC. When a dance record has been inserted in this player piano, the instrument becomes a veritable three piece orchestra with the treble played as though by a ukulele, the bass as a piano, and the melody sounding amazingly as though produced upon a saxophone. The EUPHONA reproduces all classes of music with equal perfection and may be played by hand, operated by pedals or by electricity. Please do not confuse the EUPHONA with coin operated pianos. Easy Terms arranged with purchasers so desiring.

A Dozen Used GRAND PIANOS
at $325 and Up

We are especially anxious to dispose this week of a special lot of rebuilt grand pianos which have been taken in exchange for new instruments. Among them are such well known makes as Knabe, Chase Bros., Baldwin, Chickering and Mason & Hamlin. Any one of these grands may be paid for in monthly installments. And they range in price upwards from $325.

5000 MUSIC ROLLS 25c EACH

A portion of our subway store is undergoing alterations which will culminate in the opening of one of the finest player piano music departments in this city. To reduce the size of our vast stock, we offer this week five thousand rolls, $0.75, $1, $1.25 and $1.50 values, while they last at 25c each.

THE PIANO the MARTINIQUE CHOSE

The KINGSBURY PIANO, our great popular leader, was recently chosen by the Hotel Martinique of New York and the William Penn Hotel of Pittsburgh, for use in their private dining rooms and banquet halls. In scale, finish, structural features and tone, the KINGSBURY is incomparably the greatest piano value to be found in this country. "Your Money's Worth Or Your Money Back." Price $350. Easy Terms of payment.

A Genuine EUPHONA INNER-PLAYER
Complete with Bench, Scarf and Rolls.

Here is an INNER-PLAYER containing the mechanical features of the most costly player mechanisms (including the Miniature Keyboard) but priced $200 lower than any former genuine Inner-Player Piano. Easy Terms. Call NOW for catalog and demonstration.

MASON & HAMLIN PIANOS

Every family which can afford the best, and certainly every musician, no matter what the sacrifice, should own a MASON & HAMLIN, musically the most beautiful piano the world has ever known. To your home it will lend the distinction of its acceptance by the world of wealth and culture. To the musician it brings an inspiration obtainable from no other source. At the close of each musical season we have a number of concert used pianos at reduced prices. Selections may be made now and Easy Terms arranged if wished for.

MAYOR REVOKES CAFE LICENSES OF 442 SALOONS

Schuettler Takes Step to Enforce Closing on Sunday.

All doubt as to Chief Schuettler's attitude toward Sunday closing of saloons was dissipated yesterday when Mayor Thompson revoked 442 restaurant and café licenses. Chief Schuettler alleged these places have been established solely for the purpose of evading the Sunday closing law.

While these revocations do not affect saloon licenses, the blow directly hits back rooms and makeshift "cafés" that have been kept open for the sale of drinks while the bars ostensibly have remained closed.

Ansonia Among Them.

A number of places which have gained a measure of notoriety, politically and otherwise, felt the ax with those of supposedly lesser consideration. "Mike" Fritzel's Arsonia café at 1658 West Madison street is one of these. Fritzel has been operating his café on Sundays without cessation. Others are George Dugdale's "Bucket of Blood," 1733 West Madison street; Frank J. Gazzolo, 2400 West Madison street; Moses Rothschild, [illegible]41 West Madison street; I. Grodzinski, [illegible] East Thirty-fifth street; Michael Dobrowski, 2957 Milwaukee avenue, and [illegible] Hare, 318 East Thirty-first street.

North Clark street was hit hard when a number of places from the bridge to Devon were selected for the ax. Among these are Ankenbauer & Reeves, 801; I. B. Rothschild, 430; Jacob Frank, 501; Morris ("Spike") Hennessey, 620; Sheehan Bros., 530; Goldberg Bros., 500; John McGovern, 661, and McHale & Dwyer, [illegible] North Clark street.

And Still Others.

Others of smaller importance who lost their restaurant and café licenses are Max Robbins, 303 East Thirty-first street; M. Galli, 530 North State street; Louis Cheromokos, 1521 North Clark street; "Con" Dillon, 1244 North Clark; Brown & Seidl, 4836 Broadway; M. E. Duggan, 1686 Ogden avenue.

Nora Bayes Whole Show; No One Else on Stage

Nora Bayes returned to Chicago last night and she was the whole show. She is at the La Salle theater. Even the program appears over her signature.

Miss Bayes has several accomplices, but they are purely muscular. During the two hours of the entertainment no one but her speaks a word. She sings scores of songs and speaks a few words. She sings songs of the south, of the west, of New England, of the orient, of Hawaii, of the war, and many songs [illegible].

In her program she says: "O, life is just one song after another."

SULLIVAN

A Representative of a Family of 15 Who Added to Their Luster Yesterday by Passing Bar Examination.

Atty. Bess C. Sullivan

Miss Bessie C. Sullivan was the only Chicago girl who passed the bar examination held Feb. 27. Thereby a directory of the family which she adorns is made of interest. Exclusive of the parents, it follows:

Bess C. Sullivan,	James D. Sullivan,
Mrs. A. L. Corey,	Harriet Sullivan,
John F. Sullivan,	Mrs. D. H. Padden,
William E. Sullivan,	Philip L. Sullivan,
Agnes M. Sullivan,	George D. Sullivan,
Mrs. F. J. McAdams,	Harold E. Sullivan,
Charles B. Sullivan,	Henry P. Sullivan.
Mrs. S. C. Graff.

And in the opinion of each and every one of the bunch these are some Sullivans. Henry P., the oldest of the clan of Sullivan, is 43 years of age. Harold E., the youngest, is 21. Henry, John, William, Charles, and Joseph are farmer Sullivans. They run one of the largest farms and live stock ranches in Illinois, at Marengo. Philip L. is master in chancery for Judge Joseph P. David. George D. is a lawyer. Bess is to go into partnership with her brother, and when Harold, who is a law student at Loyola university, is admitted to the bar he will join the Sullivan law firm.

Of the other Sullivan girls, four are married and two are engaged to be married. All six, including Bess, the lawyer, were school teachers. Bess taught at the Parkman school before she became interested in law.

Every one of the Sullivans is happy, healthy, wealthy, and wise.

All of which is respectfully submitted for the careful attention of Margaret Sanger, Dr. Anna E. Blount et al.

FIVE DETECTIVES RESIGN AS 37 GO TO THE WOODS

Touch of Pathos Seen as Veterans Quit Their Old Jobs.

Something more poignant than gloom permeated the office of Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler, the detective bureau, and the hearts of thirty-seven detectives, some of whom had been members of the bureau for twenty years or more, in the exodus at the bureau yesterday following the sweeping transfer order.

Many of the men were reduced from senior detective sergeants and sent to various stations in outlying districts and new men took their places.

"Sorry to see you go," was the somewhat husky comment of Acting Chief of Detectives J. V. Larkin, who normally expresses himself more picturesquely and at greater length.

Regrets Are Brief.

"It's tough," was the remark of the departing veterans.

Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler heard that Sheehan, who was one of the detectives affected by the order, and a friend of many battles, was planning to resign after a fifteen day furlough he has asked for. Chief Schuettler was visibly moved when he accepted the resignations of five other veteran detectives who refused to be demoted. The resignations were handed in by Dennis E. Buggle, Philip Miller, James E. Fitzgerald, George L. Trafton, and James H. McCarthy, all members of the force more than twenty-five years and of the bureau more than twenty years.

Chief Commends Men.

The chief expressed the opinion that the men leaving the bureau were the pick of the force and that they had given their best to the city, but stated there was nothing he could do but accept.

In addition to Sheehan, who is expected to resign, "Big Jack" Flynn, known as an expert "pawn shop" man, served notice that he will leave.

Schuettler prepared a communication citing the records of the various detectives who were reduced and asking they be given a hearing before the commission. The civil service body set the hearing for next Tuesday.

The senior detective sergeants who were demoted by a ruling of the civil service commission to the rank of plain sergeant are to be given a hearing before the merit board.

The Security of the Nation Depends on the Intelligence of Each Citizen

When the President speaks, he speaks for you and for every American.

When Congress acts, it acts for you and for every American.

In any great national crisis there is naturally an outburst of patriotic sentiment. This should be reinforced by the intelligent, sober thought of the people whom the President and Congress represent.

For in truth the President is but our proxy in dealing with the grave problems of state. He can act only by the authority of the people. And in order that his action shall be in accord with the highest sense of justice and right, the people themselves must have a broad and intelligent understanding of the questions involved.

No greater obligation rests upon American men and women at this time than the necessity of informing themselves fully as to the present situation and the causes leading up to it.

You as a loyal American should read and study and think.

Equip yourself with the facts and information which will enable you to form sound judgments consistent with American ideals and principles.

You should, for instance, learn the history of American diplomacy and the strong influence it has exerted upon world affairs. You should be familiar with the new doctrines tending to the advancement of humanity which have been injected into the foreign policy of nations. Your knowledge should embrace international relationships, international law, the specific provisions of neutrality reforms, the accepted views as to blockades; it should include something about the impulses and aims of nations, as these elements are shown in statecraft and warfare, as well as the variance in character and the grounds of differences among nations.

How can you know whether the President is right or not, how can you say honestly what Congress ought to do, unless your opinion is the result of intelligent study and thought?

There is the "Monroe Doctrine," essentially American, which the President would apply to world relations—do you know what it is?

Do you know what is meant by "freedom of the seas"? Or the "3-mile limit"?

Are you familiar with the relations which have heretofore existed between this country and Germany? Between the United States and the other nations involved in the present titanic struggle?

Do you know what "breaking off diplomatic relations" means?

If you alone had to decide the course to be pursued in the best interests of this nation of 100,000,000 people, could you decide with the confident assurance that you were guided by wisdom and justice?

As an individual citizen, you are just as responsible to yourself, to your fellow citizens and to your country as if you were President. You cannot plead ignorance. It is your duty as a loyal American to know what is the right, the wise and just course to pursue.

Such knowledge comes from ascertaining the facts—from a study of the elements and conditions which led up to the present crisis.

Questions come fast, one after another, commanding your attention. You should know where to find the answers—where to go for the facts and information necessary to an intelligent grasp of the present situation.

This is another reason why you should own a set of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. This marvelous library makes available the very information you seek as to the real significance of the present crisis. It deals with every feature of international and diplomatic relations, of statecraft, and war.

Turn to the questions in the panel to the right—every one of them directly connected with the present crisis. How many of them can you answer intelligently? Every one is answered fully in the new Britannica.

These are but a few of hundreds which come to the mind of the alert American who is as eager to be right in his knowledge and thinking as he is to be patriotic in his talking. These questions are cited merely to show you the wide scope of the Britannica.

This wonderful work (consisting of 29 1000-page volumes, printed on the famous India paper) is a complete source of information on questions of diplomacy and statecraft, military and naval procedure. It is equally complete and authoritative on every subject in which you are interested—whether it be business, or history, or religion, or science.

You need this great work all the time—it is the most complete and authoritative source of knowledge, practical and abstract. Now is the time to buy it. It will help to make you a better informed, more thorough American. It will exalt your patriotism because it will give you the facts necessary to sound judgment.

Sets on hand of the popular-priced "Handy Volume" Issue are the last that can be offered printed on the superb India paper. When these remaining sets are sold (and they are selling fast) you will not have another opportunity to buy the Britannica in this ideal form. Send today for the illustrated book which tells all about the Britannica and its everyday usefulness. We also have a very interesting book, entitled "The Britannica Book of the War," that we will be glad to send you. This deals with underlying causes and narrates events that have developed into the present situation. Ask for it.

(While they last, the sets of the popular "Handy Volume" Issue of the Britannica in stock are offered at present bargain prices, on the most convenient terms—$1 with order, leaving purchaser to have the use of the books while paying for them, for a limited period at the rate of $3 to $4.50, according to binding.)

Do You Know?

What are "diplomatic relations"?
What are the rights and privileges of diplomatic agents?
Who defined a diplomat as "an honest man sent to lie abroad for the good of his country"?
What are the principles of modern diplomacy?
What does belligerency mean?
What regulations of the Hague Tribunal have been set at naught in the present warfare?
What are the recognized rules regarding the laying of submarine mines?
What is the recognized rule as to the bombardment of undefended places?
How do existing blockades compare with Napoleon's "Continental blockade" of 1806?
What action did the United States take at that time?
What nations participated in 1908-09 conference which adopted rules relating to blockade?
What is "international law"?
What happens to a vessel which runs a blockade—either deliberately or unaware of it?
What general provisions relating to neutrality were provided at the Hague Conference?
What ruling was proposed for neutral states as to the use of telephone and telegraph systems?
How is the shipment of arms and munitions to belligerents regarded?
When is a neutral guilty of a breach of neutrality?
What was the attitude of Germany in the course of the South African war, and of Great Britain in the Russo-Japanese war, regarding the stoppage of certain of the merchant vessels?
What is the financial ability of this nation to conduct a war?
Have you thought of the Panama Canal and what part it may play in the affairs of the immediate future?
What condition relative to the capture and confiscation of enemy property when found on the high seas was made by the United States before it acceded to the Declaration of Paris?
Do you know when territory is considered as "occupied" by a hostile army?
What becomes of prisoners of war?
What disposition is made of newspaper war correspondents who are following an army that is taken by the enemy?
Whether enemy merchant ships are exempt from capture if at the outbreak of the war they are in a hostile port or on their way there?
What happens at the close of a war to mines which have been laid?
How coal is regarded when in shipment?
What is a "prize vessel"?
What are the rights of mail steamers?
How the national war debts of countries that have had wars have been previously provided for?
What is the difference between England's blockade of Germany and Germany's attempted blockade of England?
What the United States had to do with framing the existing international law affecting blockades?
What are the racial and social differences of the peoples involved in the world conflict?
What bearing has commerce on war?
What part does the Red Cross play in war?
What is the "wealth of nations"?
To what extent are England, the United States, Germany and the other countries dependent on their international trade and commerce?
How does war affect business in neutral countries?
What have been the general effects of war on forms of government in previous crises?
Does war tend to promote democracy or monarchy?

Every one of these questions is answered in the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. Every one has an important direct bearing upon the present situation which concerns every true American. These questions are only a few of hundreds on which the Britannica will enlighten you, making you a broader-minded, more intelligent citizen.

TASK AHEAD FOR STATE ASSEMBLY ON NEW LAWS

Statutes Covering Jobs Lost by Consolidation Bill Must Be Revamped.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., March 3.—[Special.]—The Illinois legislature faces its hardest task when it begins next week on the series of reenactments of the existing substantive law controlling the various departments and bureaus that have been abolished and transferred into the new executive consolidation scheme.

It is not the intention of Gov. Lowden to make at this time any radical changes in the statutes under which the departments have been working. That is a job for the 1919 general assembly.

Immediate readjustment of some conditions is necessary, however, to protect against an overlapping of duties that are carried to the nine new department heads and their subordinates.

To Determine on Laws.

Gov. Lowden and his advisers do not know as yet what is to be the extent of the legislation that is to be required from the present session. That is a matter that will have to be determined after the nine cabinet members have been chosen and a plan of original procedure is evolved.

As the consolidation bill stands, it furnishes only the machinery of the new executive organization.

It creates the nine executive departments, authorizes the appointment of the necessary officials and fixes their salaries.

It is up to the governor and his appointees to do the rest, and some legislation is required that may be as important in the long run, as was the business of putting through the consolidation bill.

Favors Complete Revision.

Gov. Lowden is known to favor a complete revision of the substantive law based in large part on the extensive recommendations made by the efficiency and economy commission.

Should time permit at the present session it is believed that he would urge that a beginning at least be made this winter.

Enactment of the consolidation bill by the adoption of the conference report Thursday now permits the appropriations committees of the two houses to get under full steam.

The budget prepared by the retiring legislative reference bureau is practically worthless from a constructive standpoint, inasmuch as nearly every department of state government that responded to its unofficial request for estimates is now switched around or reconstructed so that the request for appropriations made last November have no present value.

Lowden to Submit Budget.

Although the consolidation bill does not become effective until July 1, it is the purpose of Gov. Lowden to submit an executive budget, so that the present legislature can have a basis from which to work in making the appropriations for the approaching biennium. This budget will be based, of course, on the scheme of the consolidation bill. The appropriation committees have been marking time pending the governor's next move.

YOUTH

Man of Forty as Young Today as His Father at Thirty, Says Dr. N. C. Vaughan.

"THE man 40 years old today is as young as his father was at 30," declared Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, dean of the medical department of the University of Michigan, at a luncheon of the Young Men's Jewish Charities yesterday.

"This is because our improved methods of sanitation have decreased the death rate. The average length of life in America in 1880 was 32. Today it is 42. In the northwest it is 49.

"The most important place for sanitation is in the home. The mother must be forced to give her baby proper food and air and clothes. The invalid must be taught to guard himself from exposing those about him.

"In Michigan we passed a law in 1895 requiring schools to teach means of preventing contagion. As a result the death rate from tuberculosis in Michigan is eighty-seven for each 100,000, while in New England it is 140."

JOHN D. BESTOWS MANSION ON SON

Tarrytown, N. Y., March 3.—[Special.]—According to reports at Pocantico Hills, John D. Rockefeller has turned his magnificent mansion and estate over to his son and will not call it home any more. John D. Rockefeller Jr. has closed his home on his father's estate and moved into the million dollar mansion on the hill.

Some friends say that since Mrs. Rockefeller died at the Pocantico Hills house it has not been the same to the oil king and when he left here before Christmas to go to Lakewood he said that he would not come back again except to visit his son. Then the loss of his close friend, John D. Archbold, was keenly felt. He was one of the few friends who called on Mr. Rockefeller.

Piano Dealers to Try to Save Apollo Club

The Piano and Organ Dealers' association has appointed a committee to save the Apollo Musical club, which has had an annual deficit of nearly $7,000.

At the last meeting of the association Frank E. Morton, accoustic engineer of the American Steel and Wire company, spoke of the value of the club to the manufacturers and dealers, and suggested that every effort be made to insure its continued existence.

"We have not organized the campaign yet," said Mr. Morton last night, "but we are certain that the club can be made self-supporting."

Sixty Department Stores Close Doors in a Lockout

Memphis, Tenn., March 3.—Sixty department stores and other mercantile establishments closed their doors today as an answer to a recently organized union of clerks which demanded recognition and various conditions. A minimum of $6 a week and pay for overtime are asked.

Army Surgeons to Lecture Here.

Bourke has been assigned to lecture at Marquette college, Milwaukee, and the Detroit Medical college.

TYPHOID BLAMED EQUALLY ON CITY AND CANAL BOARD

City Sewers and Pumping Station Both Held Inadequate.

Neither the city sewage facilities in the large area on the south side drained by the Thirty-ninth street intercepting sewer nor the pumping works maintained by the sanitary district are adequate in times of unusually heavy rainfall, it was asserted yesterday.

The opinion is that of the joint commission of engineers and health officials named by the city council health committee to investigate Health Commissioner Robertson's charges that the serious typhoid fever epidemic following the big storm of January, 1916, was chargeable to the inefficiency of the district's pumping station.

The report, which was whipped into shape yesterday and represents months of study and investigation, holds both governments at fault, although explaining that the facilities of both are wholly inadequate in times of unprecedented rainfall.

Equipment Inadequate.

The negligence at the pumping station operated by the district, the report says, merely advanced the flooding of basements in that district, since with the present equipment at its best the flood waters could not have been handled.

With respect to the big storm the commission says that "no portion of the sewage system, including the sewage pumping stations, was adequate to take care of it. There was negligence in the operation of the Thirty-ninth street pumping station on the night of the storm. Its effect was only to advance the time of flooding, which was inevitable because of other conditions. The intercepting sewer is not adequate to drain all the tributary district in times of severe storm."

The Sixty-eighth street pumping station is inadequate, also, the commission finds.

Repairs and Extensions.

However, the report says, immediate repairs and extensions should be made at the sanitary district's pumping station. The city pumping station, the report says, has been put in a condition of safety from contamination.

Recommendations are made that the entire Thirty-ninth street plant be overhauled, and a new auxiliary sewerage system be constructed to drain by gravity at least 800 acres in this area, thus relieving the pressure from the pumping plant in times of heavy rainfall.

A relief sewer in Prairie avenue, from Thirty-ninth street to Sixty-second street, and a number of local sewers tributary to the intercepting sewer at Sixty-third, Sixty-seventh, Seventieth, and Seventy-third streets are recommended as the first step in the new plan of protecting the district against contamination from overflooded sewers.

Fear Lake Contamination.

The commission recommends that passenger steamers should not be permitted to dump refuse in the lake and that the use of floor drains in basements or cellars connected with the street sewers should be prohibited.

The report is signed by Isham Randolph, Dr. Herman N. Bundensen, Ernest L. Cooley, O. G. Earl, C. D. Hill, W. R. Matthews, William A. Nelson, Langdon Pearse, and F. W. Sadler.

Another Irish Rebel Will Speak in Chicago

M. V. McGivern, president of the Gaelic league of Liverpool, Irish rebel of Easter week, and the latest refugee from the war zone to reach the United States, will speak on conditions in Ireland at the eleventh annual St. Patrick's night entertainment of the Irish Literary society of Chicago on Saturday, March 17, at the Strand theater, Wabash avenue and Seventh street. Mr. McGivern will tell the story of the Dublin insurrection.

The proceeds of the evening will go to the parish of St. Justin, martyr, of which the Rev. J. K. Fielding, founder and president of the Irish Literary society, is organizer and pastor.

E. S. SMITH WINS BENCH ELECTION

Springfield, Ill., March 3.—State Senator E. S. Smith, Republican, of Springfield was today elected to fill the vacancy on the Seventh judicial circuit bench caused by the death of the late Judge James A. Creighton. Senator Smith defeated Edmund Burke, Democrat, of Springfield by an estimated majority of 3,000. The election of Senator Smith will necessitate the calling of a special election to fill his place.

INDIES SEEK A NEW NAME

ST. THOMAS, Danish West Indies, March 3.—At a massmeeting here it was decided to suggest to the Washington government that the Danish West Indies, now American territory through purchase, should be named the American Virgin islands instead of the Dewey.

CANVASS COUNTS MERRIAM OUT; TO FILE CONTEST

Fetzer Declared Winner with 5 Vote Margin by Election Board.

William R. Fetzer wins the Republican nomination for alderman in the Seventh ward over Ald. Charles E. Merriam.

The election commissioners, sitting as a canvassing board of investigation, yesterday refused to make any further changes in the figures as reported by the clerks and judges of election, and tomorrow morning will officially proclaim Mr. Fetzer the nominee by a majority of five votes. He will then be given the certificate of nomination.

Immediately Ald. Merriam will institute contest proceedings, and will ask that the ballot boxes be opened and the ballots counted under an order of the County court.

Ought to Get at Truth.

"I believe we ought to get at the truth," he said after he had been apprised that he had lost. "In a total of some 12,000 votes a margin of 5 is not very satisfactory. Evidence presented to the election commissioners at today's hearing would indicate that ballots cast for me were not so counted. I should say that the recount of the ballots is the only way now we can settle the matter and settle it satisfactorily."

Attorney W. W. Wheelock, who has been representing Mr. Merriam before the election commissioners, stated that he would proceed at once to prepare his petition.

That the opening of the ballot boxes will be resisted by attorneys for Mr. Fetzer was gossiped in the election board rooms, although no definite statement came from them.

He Expects Opposition.

Mr. Wheelock expects this opposition, he said, and he will endeavor to prepare a petition with the idea of being opposed by demurrer pleadings.

Mr. Fetzer himself is understood not to be opposed to a recounting of the ballots, holding that this would satisfy everybody in the ward, whichever way it finally went, as to just what the ballots show. He expects, in the event of a recount, to increase his majority over Mr. Merriam, according to his attorneys.

He refused to make a statement.

The contest proceedings will be before County Judge Thomas Scully.

Here Are Figures.

The proclamation will carry the following official figures:

	Men.	Women.	Total.
Fetzer	3,438	2,659	6,097
Merriam	3,235	2,857	6,092

Fetzer majority, 5.

The official canvass also discloses that five Democratic ballots were cast for Merriam and seventeen of that party for Fetzer.

Leo Flannigan gets the Democratic nomination in the ward. While not a candidate in the primaries, it was found that 221 men and 116 women voters had written his name on the ballot.

The Sixth ward, where Ald. McCormick had no opposition in the primary and the Democrats had no candidate, turns up with a Democratic candidate now. Charles M. Hanley appears on the official records to have received 131 votes, his name having been written in. Guy Armstrong is expected to be an independent candidate against Ald. McCormick.

The official figures in the first eighteen wards were announced last night by the election commissioners. The figures in the remaining wards will be announced today.

Aside from the Seventh ward no important changes are shown in the police returns.

"Little Mother of Loomis Street" Going to China

Helen Noren, 23 years old, a captain in the Salvation Army and known as the "little mother" of Loomis street, applied for passports to Pekin, China, yesterday. She said that she was going to join the Salvation Army workers in that city. It had been her intention, she said, to go to the leper colony in India but her plans were changed by the war.

When Gustave A. Boehn received his TRIBUNE a few mornings ago, almost the first bit of news to catch his eye reported the death in action of Private George Boehn of Chicago, a member of the Canadian expeditionary force on the Somme front.

"George always was an adventurous boy," the father said. "He persuaded his brother Gustave to enlist. I did my best to dissuade them both, telling them that, as they were American boys, there was no occasion for them to fight for England."

G. O. P. LIKELY TO RULE NEW HOUSE, SAYS M'CORMICK

Congressman Elect Outlines Plans to Make Mann Speaker.

Information came to Chicago yesterday that the Republicans have a fair chance of organizing the new house of representatives, provided Progressives and Republicans can agree on a harmony slate. This was the substance of a statement by Congressman Elect McCormick.

As at present tentatively outlined the plan contemplates the election of Congressman James R. Mann as speaker and Congressman Lenroot of Wisconsin as floor leader. The reorganization scheme also proposes that the new speaker shall be for the most part a presiding officer, and that the naming of standing committees shall be committed to a committee for that express purpose.

The death of Michael F. Conry, Democratic member from one of the New York districts, now puts the Republicans one vote in the lead, assuming that the five independents will herd by themselves.

Each Side Had 215.

Up to the time of Conry's death the Republicans had 215 members and the Democrats 215.

Three other Democratic members are said to be very ill and probably will not be able to participate in the organization of the new house should the president call an extra session.

Just what the five independents will do is the crux of the situation at present. They are Schall of Minnesota, Progressive; Martin of Louisiana, a Progressive protectionist; Randall of California, a Progressive prohibitionist; Meyer London of New York, Socialist, and Fuller of Massachusetts, independent.

Randall leans toward the administration and London probably will vote for himself for speaker in order to keep his party regularity.

Lenroot for Floor Leader.

With Lenroot as the candidate for floor leader under the new harmony plan it is expected that Schall of Minnesota and possibly Martin of Louisiana can be induced to vote with the Republicans.

Both sides are straining every nerve to get the majority lined up, but the result will remain in doubt, it is thought, until the roll call is had in the new congress.

Schumann-Heink Gains After Accident in Auto

ELECTED SCHOOL BOARD DEBATED AT CITY CLUB

Division of opinion as to the proposal for an elective school board was expressed at a luncheon given by the City club yesterday. The speakers were George C. Sikes and Prof. George H. Mead. More than a hundred persons were present.

"We have a bad school board, but there is no need of our looking to Springfield for legislation on it," said Mr. Sikes. "The fault lies with our administration. The board simply reflects the administration. Establish nonpartisan elections and we will not have any trouble with getting a school board. Politics, the bane of the system, will be eliminated."

"An elective school board is the only escape I can see from the present situation," said Prof. Mead. "It could appoint a superintendent wth power to act as manager of the business end of the school system as well as direct the educational policy."

The Oil With a Thousand Uses!

Your Dealer Has It. Get a 25c or 50c Bottle Today!

Here, at last, is a genuine, dependable, 100% efficient general-purpose oil! So good, so successful in the home, office, shop, garage, factory and everywhere that it instantly becomes an absolute necessity. Kibler's All 'Round Oil proves itself to be the best oil to be bought at any price—the oil that meets every requirement—the oil that you ought to now insist on getting no matter what brand you have used before!

You, especially, Mrs. Housewife, should be interested in this remarkable wonder of wonders. For Kibler's All 'Round Oil is very economical—it is a Dustless Duster, an excellent Piano and Furniture Polish, a Cleaner, a Brightener, a Preserver, a Lubricator—and don't overlook this mighty important feature: Kibler's All 'Round Oil is absolutely guaranteed to renew any make of mop!

Kibler's
All 'Round Oil
Never Sticks—Never Gums—Makes Old Things New!

Truly, then, this wonderful oil is the oil with a thousand uses! It is the oil from which you can get complete satisfaction because it economically fulfills every requirement of home or factory. Thousands of Chicago's housewives have already revolutionized their daily housework, their dusting, their cleaning, their once dreaded care of the silverware and the kitchen utensils, because they have installed Kibler's All 'Round Oil and depend on it absolutely.

In hundreds of homes, offices, garages, hotels, factories, etc., Kibler's All 'Round Oil has made itself equally as popular and necessary. Men who for years have maintained that "there will never be a real all 'round oil" have been won over and are now using Kibler's All 'Round Oil because they are CONVINCED that it IS exactly what the name implies and does what we claim for it!

To find out for yourself just why this oil has already gained greater popularity in a few short weeks than any other oil has in years, you should get a 25c or 50c bottle of Kibler's All 'Round Oil and put it to the severest tests you can imagine. We are perfectly willing to let this oil stand on its own, remarkable merits. We KNOW how superior it is and what almost unbelievable things it accomplishes. You—perhaps being a little skeptical—are not quite sure that it is as good as we claim in our advertising. So you are still hesitating.

Yet—and you'll admit the sound logic of this—you can never know why one article is better than another until you are broad-minded enough to try a new product.

That is why we conscientiously urge you to go to your Grocer, Druggist, Furniture Dealer, Hardware Dealer, Paint Dealer, Dry Goods Store or Department store and buy a bottle of Kibler's All 'Round Oil.

We feel confident that 25 or 50 cents has never made a bigger purchase. We know that thousands of good folks have paid more than that for an inferior, one-purpose Oil. So surely, when you take into consideration how long a bottle of Kibler's All 'Round Oil lasts, you cannot class it as any but a permanent investment.

At any rate, make up your mind you're going to try this oil that's got everybody talking. Be sure to say you want KIBLER'S All 'Round Oil! Every merchant in Chicago and suburbs knows that name—and most of them have Kibler's All 'Round Oil for sale. If not they'll get it for you.

Plea Against Dissolution Asks Court to Apply Rule of Reason.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—In briefs filed today with the Supreme court, the United States Steel corporation, its directors, and subsidiaries presented their defense to the federal government's dissolution suit.

The corporation, the defendants assert, was not formed with intent to monopolize or restrain trade, has not since done so, has actually had a beneficial and not harmful effect on the iron and steel industry, is a "good" combination, and has neither power nor has it shown disposition to control production prices or crush competitors.

With admitted control of 40.9 per cent of domestic consumption, the briefs assert "this falls far short of controlling the supply—and obviously cannot control the price."

Mere size and power alone of a combination, the defendants declare, are not inhibited by the Sherman law. Also they insist the anti-trust statute prohibits "unreasonable" restraint of trade—not necessarily restraint of "competition."

That President Roosevelt was not deceived in the corporation's acquisition of the Tennessee Coal and Iron properties in 1907 and that they were bought to prevent a worse panic is insisted in the briefs.

In conclusion the defendants, reciting numerous investigations by federal agencies, state:

"The steel corporation has kept the public and government fully informed as to its course of conduct and policies ever since it was organized. Meanwhile, relying on apparent government and public approval, it has gone on spending millions in development of its foreign and domestic trade, to the manifest advantage of its employés, customers, and the general public, and without injury to its competitors or others. These circumstances indicate a contemporaneous judgment in favor of the integrity and management of the steel corporation, and such judgment ought not to be overturned at this late date except for the most cogent and persuasive reasons."

CHARGE STUFFED BALLOT BOX AT U. OF C. ELECTION

Prominent Students, Men and Women, Are Involved.

A vote fraud in a student election, involving some of the prominent men and co-eds on the campus, has been exposed at the University of Chicago. The election was for membership in the student council and the honor commission. The candidates themselves are believed to be the victims of their friends' activities.

A student investigation committee has been appointed, with Harold Huls, a senior, as chairman. A petition for a new election was submitted to the student council and rejected. Another will be offered to the council on Wednesday. Accusations have been made that the council is a partisan body and if the council again votes against a reëlection the matter will be placed in the hands of the faculty, it is threatened.

Twenty Unofficial Ballots.

The fraud was detected on a recount of the ballots, when it was revealed that three candidates had been favored in ballots found to be unofficial.

The three candidates for whom, it is charged, the ballot box was stuffed are Margaret Cook, Eva Richolson, and Carleton Adams, all juniors.

The judgment of the student council is that these three nominees were victims of a conspiracy and are themselves innocent of any participation in the plot.

The more agitated faction on the campus has already appealed to the faculty, and several undergraduate council members assert that they are in possession of evidence sufficient to determine the offender. At the time of the election, when the fraud came to light, an impromptu secret trial was held, at which the women implicated wept but denied any knowledge of the ballot box stuffing. Challengers at the polls declare they have suspicions, but are unwilling to divulge names until the faculty interferes.

Irregularities Exposed.

The Daily Maroon, the student newspaper, has just published an editorial exposing the "irregularities" and advocating a faculty investigation and another election. The Maroon says:

"Many of those interested know that there was stuffing of the ballot box. A petition asking for a new election was presented to the undergraduate council, but turned down on some technical point. The council is not treating the voters and candidates fairly by this action. In order to clear up the situation, ease every one's conscience, and act fair to all a new election should be held immediately. And if the council refuses this the faculty should step in and take action."

SOCIETY WOMEN TO AID BENEFIT FOR STAGE FOLK

Members of the Forty club, the committee in charge of the allied bazaar, the Chicago and Illinois Athletic clubs, the Chicago Woman's club, bankers, business men, and society women, pledged their support last night to the Chicago Theatrical Managers' association in their effort to pay a part of the debt due American actors for their labor for charity.

Harry J. Ridings, president of the organization, unfolded the plans for the annual actors' fund benefit at the Auditorium theater March 9. For years this event has been made a social occasion sight the theatrical stars producing parts of their regular acts. This year Alexander Leftwich, author, stage manager, and producer, has been sent to Chicago by Daniel Frohman to work out an original program.

COUPLE VANISH AFTER THREAT OF ELOPEMENT

Did Dorothy M. Evans and Peter J. Retinger carry out their threat to elope?

This was the question that concerned their friends yesterday following the confession of the young pair Friday night that they would leave for "somewhere" in Retinger's auto to get married.

"I do not know anything about my daughter and I do not want to know anything about her," said Mrs. John Evans of 6231 Champlain avenue, mother of Dorothy, last night. She hung up the telephone receiver.

"I am tired of the whole affair; I do not know anything about them," asserted Mrs. Philippine Retinger of 5326 Indiana avenue, mother of the young man. She, too, hung up.

If This Were YOU—Who Would Care For Your Dear Ones?

IF YOU were stricken today—what would happen to your wife—your children—those nearest and dearest to you? Would they be cared for as YOU would care for them? Would your family want from the loss of your support? The New National Five-Point policy was designed, after many years of research, to protect the AVERAGE man against any loss. It protects you in LIFE as well as in DEATH. It protects you on FIVE points instead of on one—at a cost of only ONE DOLLAR more per thousand at the age of 35, than some other companies charge for a policy covering only one or two points. Send the coupon for free explanatory booklet.

The National 5 POINT POLICY

"Complete Protection-Insurance—at Lowest Cost"

In this new National Five-Point Policy we combine five points in one policy. This means decreased cost to us. You get the benefit. At the age of 35 you may secure a National Five-Point Policy for as low as $39.73 per thousand—only one dollar more than the cost of a twenty payment life policy in some companies—and you are protected on FIVE POINTS!

Complete Protection

Here, then, is COMPLETE protection—at remarkably low cost. You are insured against loss by sickness. In case of temporary confinement by sickness or disease you are paid a weekly income. You are insured against loss by accident. If you are either partially or totally disabled by accidental injury, you are paid a weekly income. You are insured against loss from total disability. In case of permanent total disability from any cause, you are paid an annual income FOR LIFE, and premiums are waived. You are insured against poverty in old age. The National Five-Point Policy is fully paid-up in twenty years. The face value of the policy is payable IN CASH at the age of eighty-five, or will pay you a cash income for life, beginning at the age of sixty-five. Your estate or family is insured against loss from your death. In case of death from ordinary causes the beneficiary is paid the full face value of the policy IN CASH; if from accidental causes, DOUBLE the face value is payable IN CASH.

The National Five-Point Policy Protects You on These Five Points:

1. Sickness
2. Accident
3. Total Disability
4. Old Age
5. Death

Low Cost

Because we have combined ALL these points in ONE policy, the cost is surprisingly low. It averages only slightly more than the ordinary policy which protects you only on one or two points. It is much lower in cost than several policies separately issued. The National Five-Point Policy simply is a new expression of efficiency.

A Reliable Company

The National Life Insurance Company of the U. S. A. was established in 1868. For forty-nine consecutive years we have served the public faithfully. We have 50,000 policy-holders. Nearly One Hundred Million Dollars of National Life Insurance is in force today. We own our own building. We have over Fourteen Millions of well invested assets. Consequently, you are assured that the National Five-Point Policy is reliable and, although very low in cost, is conservative.

Send Coupon for FREE Booklet

We have prepared a special booklet describing the new National Five-Point Policy. It explains each of the five points. It tells how you are protected in case of sickness, accident, total disability, old age and death. Send for it! We'll gladly mail it to you FREE—whether you live in Chicago or out-of-town. Please use the coupon.

POLICE KNOW HIGGINS SLAYER; ARREST IS NEAR

'Rebuilt' Auto Gives Clew Believed Sure to Trap the Murderer.

Arrest of the slayer of Fred L. Higgins, whose dead body was found on the Hammond road Feb. 20 with all identifying marks cut from the clothing, is only a matter of days. The identity of the man is known to the police and important developments await only the confirmation of two important details.

Discovery late Friday night of a Paige-Detroit automobile in the Twin garage, South Halsted street; the arrest of Percival Lasinsky, 18 years old, who is a barber residing with his parents, and Raymond Del Guerra at 5533 South Winchester avenue, and proof that Mrs. Lasinsky, the mother, purchased a second hand automobile from Fred Higgins two years ago are the new developments in the case.

Seek Raymond Del Guerra.

Raymond Del Guerra, brother of Miss Valentine Del Guerra, a former sweetheart of the murdered man, last night again became a central figure in the case. Detective Sergt. Egan went to the barber shop at 5307 Robey street last night to interrogate him further, but was unable to find him. A relief barber, working in the shop alone despite the large Saturday night trade, disclaimed all knowledge of his whereabouts.

Inquiry at 5533 South Winchester avenue developed that Del Guerra had not been home. The cause of the search for the man was a succession of statements made yesterday by Percy Lasinsky and his mother.

Lasinsky, when arrested after the discovery of the car, was held overnight and yesterday asserted the car had been purchased by his mother for $850 and an older car of a man known as Joe Waldon of 1832 Michigan avenue. Investigation developed that Mrs. Lasinsky holds a poorly spelled bill of sale purporting to come from Waldon.

Can't Located Waldon.

Thomas Brown, proprietor of a small garage at 1832 Michigan avenue, refused to accept a message addressed to Waldon, asserting he knew no such man, and later denied to the police that Waldon was known to him. Search of all the other garages in a radius of two miles failed to show that such a man as Waldon existed.

Mystery grew when comparison of the Lasinsky car with descriptions of the cars known to have been stolen by thieves developed that the car sold to Mrs. Lasinsky contains portions of both machines. The chassis and engine of the Lasinsky machine is that of the car stolen from L. J. Sherland of Evanston, while the body and accompanying parts are from a motor stolen in Milwaukee.

Car Sold by Higgins.

Following this discovery the police were amazed to receive a statement from Mrs. Lasinsky that in 1915 she had purchased a machine from Fred Higgins at the suggestion of Raymond and Valentine Del Guerra. Added to this, she admitted she had no means of knowing how the mysterious "Waldon" came to know that she was in the market for a car early in February.

In any event a stranger telephoned to her that he had a bargain car for sale and later "Waldon" appeared with the bargain. He asked $1,000 for the machine but finally consented to take her old car in exchange on a basis of $150. The police, who are possessed of the factory and other numbers on the machine, now are attempting to trace it through second hand agencies.

Tells of Purchase.

"I paid the man $850 in cash," said Mrs. Lasinsky last night to Detective Sergeant Egan and a reporter for THE TRIBUNE. "I did not draw the money from a bank, as I had saved it in the house. When I purchased it the car had cream colored wheels and was in the same condition as when the police took it from the Twin garage. I did not know Higgins figured in the transaction, though I did buy a car from him when Ray Del Guerra and his sister, Valentine, told me they could get me a bargain."

Inspection of the Paige machine at the garage where it is in storage now showed last night that the wheels originally were painted red and later enameled a yellowish white.

Cigarets and Hairpins.

Another interesting clew developed when the police recovered the machine in which Higgins is thought to have been on the day of the murder, and found two unsmoked cigarets and two hairpins of the color used by blonde haired women. A man suspect in the case smokes the same brand of cigarets and the woman thought to have been in the car when the murder was committed is a blonde.

Raymond Del Guerra's connection with the case became more mysterious than ever when the police showed a desire to interrogate him further.

Receipt for Cartridges.

When Raymond Del Guerra was taken to police headquarters for his first interrogation by Detectives Egan and Griffin a taxicab was used in transporting him to the station. Later the police found in a crevice between cushion and seat frame where he had sat a receipt from an arms store for a 10 cent sale of five steel nosed cartridges. Apparently this had been paid for by a check for $8.10, as the sales slip showed that amount tendered in payment. All of these transactions thus far have been unexplained.

As a result of the new clews suspicion of "Count" Palmer Sparks, accused by Valentine Del Guerra as the murderer, is lessening. He is now believed to be in hiding in Kankakee.

Further evidence of blackmailing operations of wealthy women also has been unearthed and for the first time since the inception of the mystery the police now are possessed of a logical motive for the murder.

DOCTORS CHARGE MISDEALING IN MURPHY 'FUND'

Declare Dr. Barker Used Names Illegally to Collect Money.

Dr. J. Gould Barker, 3103 West Congress street, will be asked tomorrow to explain his connection with the collection of a fund to be used in the construction of a memorial to the late Dr. John B. Murphy.

Prominent physicians, whose names have been used, without warrant they say, have complained that collectors have been combing the city for subscriptions to a memorial fund. Dr. Franklin H. Martin's name has been used on a "board of directors." Yesterday Dr. James Keefe disclosed a telegram from Dr. Martin, who is not in the city, disavowing any knowledge of the project in which Dr. Barker is associated.

Other Physicians' Names Used.

Other physicians whose names have been used by solicitors for funds without authority are Frank Billings, Albert J. Ochsner, Nelson M. Percy, and J. Rawson Pennington.

Dr. Barker was asked on the telephone last night to make a statement of his connection with an enterprise for a memorial to Dr. Murphy, but he preferred to give little information.

He said he had caused a company to be incorporated, but he would not name the other incorporators.

Dr. Barker, it was said, is a graduate of the Jenner Medical college. When he was asked if Dr. Martin is associated with him he replied in the affirmative. This in contradiction of the telegram from Dr. Martin.

Denies Authorizing Names.

"Have you instructed your solicitors to use the names of Chicago physicians?" he was asked. He replied, "Certainly not."

It was said by other physicians that some twenty solicitors representing Dr. Barker's memorial enterprise have been busy in Chicago.

Doctor Is Secretive.

"I can't say a thing about it," said Dr. Barker; "you see, it isn't my affair. There are others in it and I can't quote them."

NAMES MEDICAL BOARD TO MAKE DISEASE SURVEY

Dr. Robertson Asks Report on City Contagion and Its Care.

A committee of medical men, with Mrs. William R. Cubbins of the Chicago Woman's club acting as chairman, was appointed yesterday by Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson to make a complete survey of the city's facilities for caring for contagious disease cases. One feature of the inquiry will be to ascertain the contributing causes of the death of 4 year old Chester McCarthy, who died from cross infection at the old contagious disease hospital. Dr. Robertson requests the committee to report recommendations to minimise such occurrences.

Physicians on Survey.

Besides Mrs. Cubbins, Dr. Robertson named the following to conduct the survey:

Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE and president of the American Public Health association.

Dr. William L. Noble, president of the Illinois Medical society.

Dr. A. J. Ochsner, chief surgeon, Augustana hospital.

Dr. A. A. O'Neill, president of the Chicago Medical society.

Dr. D. A. K. Steele, dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of Illinois.

Inquiry on These Subjects.

In his letter to members of the committee, Dr. Robertson asks them to report on:

The advisability of consolidating or coordinating the old contagious disease hospital with the new.

The advisability of consolidating the laboratories and establishing a research division.

The appointment of an attending or consulting staff.

The necessity of the immediate and future extension of the contagious disease hospital, operated by the city also will be considered in connection with the prevalence of contagious diseases.

The Schmohl family, consisting of Julius and his two daughters, are all on their honeymoons. They were principals at a triple marriage performed by Judge Dean Franklin in his courtroom in the county building yesterday.

Schmohl, who is 52 years old, married Mrs. Christine Kleeberg. He then attended his daughter, Elsie, when she was married to Charles Stuker and his other daughter, Margaret, who became the bride of Arthur Woerz.

The Schmohls have lived at 1233 Eddy street.

ETHEL LEVIN GOING TO SCHOOL FOR BLIND GIRLS

Great, vague shadows may be all of the world 10 years old Ethel Levin will ever see. People, in her eyes, will be gray forms which blot out the light if they stand too close.

The operation performed by Dr. Nils Remmen of the Illinois Eye and Ear infirmary was as successful as he expected, but Ethel will, nevertheless, be sent to the Jacksonville school for blind girls to learn to substitute her sense of touch for her lost sight.

Ethel has been blind for two years.

"I'm glad I'm going to school," she said. "It will keep me busy. I am sort of lonely at times, because when you can't see things there isn't very much to think about."

Marriage of Evanston Girl.

Miss Margaret Ruth Lloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Lloyd of 1106 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, was married to Curtis Kennedy Rorick, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rorick of Seneca, Mich., yesterday at the home of the bride's parents.

Mail Driver Held for Theft.

Frank Messenger, chauffeur of a United States mail truck, was arrested by Postal Inspectors Bradshaw and Jackson yesterday charged with having stolen a number of parcel post packages. Many articles of merchandise which had been stolen and pawned were recovered. Messenger was held to the grand jury by Commissioner Foote.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

A Seven Day Chicago Record.

Murders	2
Holdups	43
Burglaries and larcenies	240
Pickpocket cases	2
Con game cases	6
Stolen autos (not recovered)	4
Safe robberies	2
Bogus check swindles	6

The total of property reported as taken, according to police information, is $20,000, of which $15,000 was in burglaries and larcenies.

REDUCTION OF CRIME IN CITY DUE TO POLICE

As a result of the police roundup of several gangs of thieves, crime for the last week shows a marked decrease. There were 240 burglaries and larcenies reported, which is 100 less than the week before. Holdup robberies also were fewer. Precautions taken by the police to protect industrial establishments prevented the usual weekly pay roll holdup. During the last three months robbers procured about $10,000 from "pay roll jobs."

"We've got 'em on the run," was Chief Schuettler's comment yesterday. "Holdup men and burglars are being caught every day. Several dangerous gangs have been broken up. But it seems as soon as we put one gang out of business, another springs up.

"By keeping constantly after the criminal element we are bound to win. The members of the department are doing good work."

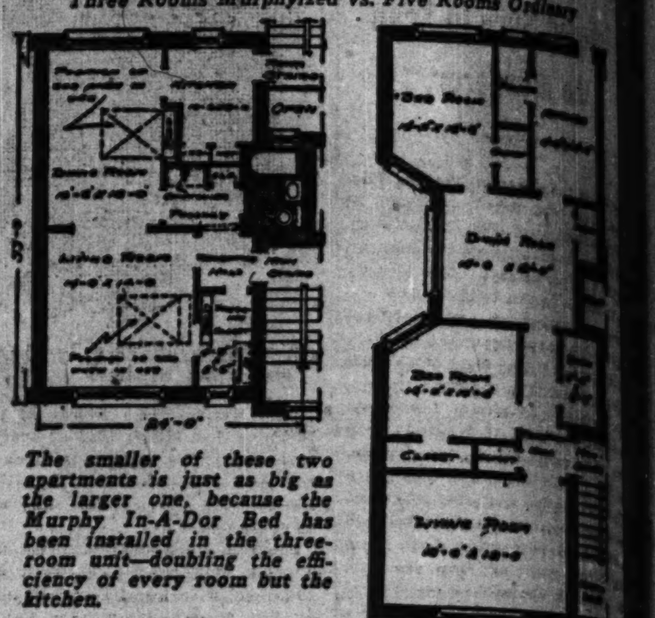
Why Builders Choose Murphy In-A-Dor Beds

Three Rooms Murphyized vs. Five Rooms Ordinary



The smaller of these two apartments is just as big as the larger one, because the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed has been installed in the three-room unit—doubling the efficiency of every room but the kitchen.

MEN who build and own apartment buildings and residences are better fitted than anyone else on earth to testify as expert witnesses concerning Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.

They invest thousands of dollars in them and are vitally—financially—interested in knowing just what tenants really think of them.

Builders would not use Murphy In-A-Dor Beds in a second building if they had not been satisfactory in the first one.

The reason why more than 50,000 homes have been equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds during the past three years is found in the fact that the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is the only one which is satisfactory to both builders and tenants.

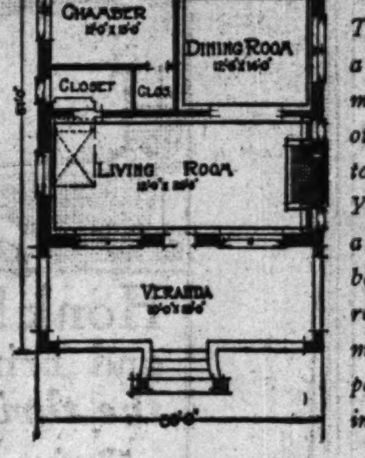
BUNGALOW BUILDERS!

Don't overlook the fact that Murphy In-a-Dor Beds are just as useful in houses and bungalows as they are in apartments.

Each Murphy Bed in Any Home Adds a Room Without Expense



This five room bungalow has seven room efficiency: living room, dining room, kitchen, sun parlor-breakfast room and three bedrooms.

There is not even the hint of a bed in the living room, but merely a door just like any other door, which might lead to another room or to a closet. Yet when this door is opened a made-up, standard size, brass bed can be swung into the room. Another similar bed may be let down into the sun parlor-breakfast room, converting it into a sleeping porch.

Remember This

Builders use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed in building after building, because experience has taught them that:

—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is really and truly CONCEALED behind an ordinary narrow door, just like any other door.
—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is SANITARY and keeps the bed clothes aired all day.
—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is made in standard sizes and ordinary mattress and bedding are used.
—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is as COMFORTABLE as the best bed made.
—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed does NOT get out of order.
—it is MORE ECONOMICAL TO FURNISH either a house or apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.
—it is LESS WORK TO CARE FOR either a house or an apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.
—the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is VASTLY superior to any substitute—and gives the same benefits to those who own their homes that it does to apartment tenants.

BUILDERS:
We will be glad to send our booklet, "How to Use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed," to any one contemplating building either a house or an apartment.

FEARS NEW WAR UNLESS SUBJECT RACES ARE FREED

Principal J. J. Zmrbal Speaks at a Joint Conference.

BY MARGERY CURREY.

A devastating world conflagration with its center in Europe will be a close follow up of the present European war if there is failure to adjust the interrelations of the nations of Europe, both large and small, according to J. J. Zmrhal, principal of the Herzl school, who spoke last evening before the Conference of Oppressed and Dependent Nations and the eighth annual meeting of the Immigrants' Protective league, in joint session at the Hotel La Salle.

"Americans who believe in democracy and who favor a durable peace should support the allies in their demand that the Bohemians and Slovaks secure their independence at the end of the war," declared Mr. Zmrhal. "The causes of the war are manifold, but no one will gainsay that one of the contributing factors to its outbreak was the failure properly to solve and adjust the mutual relations of European nationalities, large and small."

Lithuanian Proposal.

A plea for a "free republic of the nationalities of central Europe" was made at the conference by Mrs. Mary Jur[illegible] of the Immigrants' Protective league, who spoke in behalf of Lithuania.

"The Lithuanians," she said, "can ally themselves with none of their neighbors except the other oppressed nationalities, which have similar hopes and ideals. Allying themselves in a common demand for the right of every nationality to decide its own fate, they should be able to form a permanent federation."

Mme. Aino Malmberg of Finland spoke in behalf of her country. Albert N. Weber, editor of "The Croatian Flag," said the Serbians, the Croatians, and the Slovenians are looking to America for help.

That the United States shall join with the liberal world in asking that the discriminations and injustices to which the Russian government has subjected the Jewish people be ended was the plea made by Jacob L. Grossberg.

"The frightful pogroms from which the Jews of Russia have suffered," he said, "have been instigated by the same elements that have kept the Russian peasantry illiterate and without political or social opportunities. The reactionary element tin Russia has always attempted to keep alive religious hostility to the Jews."

Mrs. Francis Sheehy-Skeffington asked America to help carry the burden of oppression in Ireland.

Report of League.

Miss Grace Abbott, director of the Immigrants' Protective league, in her annual report urged the establishment in Illinois of a compulsory part-time system of work for non-English speaking and illiterate minors, in the hope that this would give them opportunity to learn English and take additional general vocational training. The "visiting teacher" was advised for Chicago.

Judge Julian Mack, president of the league, presided at the joint meeting.

Maj. Abel Davis was elected president to succeed Judge Mack. George Fisk and Maj. Davis were elected to the board of trustees.

THOUSANDS PAY FINAL TRIBUTE TO JOHN SIMAN

Though he had been city clerk for less than two years, the late John Siman yesterday was accorded a tribute such as few city officials have received. The funeral services on the west side crowded the streets and halted traffic for many hours.

Prominent officials of all political factions joined with civic leaders and intimate friends in testifying to his integrity, his ability, and his unselfish devotion to public interests.

Mr. Siman's body lay in state in the Bohemian Turner hall, Eighteenth street and Ashland avenue, during the morning while thousands of friends and neighbors filed by.

Brief speeches were made by Mayor Thompson, Ald. C. E. Merriam, County Judge Thomas F. Scully, and Dr. V. [illegible], president of the Pilsen Sokol. One address was delivered in Bohemian by Rudis Jicinsky, editor of a Bohemian newspaper

Mayor Thompson said Mr. Siman had conducted his office with extraordinary ability and efficiency. County Judge Scully referred to the coöperation which Mr. Siman had given to the board of election commissioners.

"Of all the officials who came before the finance committee," said Ald. Merriam, "Mr. Siman was the only one who said he could run his office on less money than there was available for his department."

Mrs. F. C. Bartlett.

Born 1880. Died March 3, 1917.

Mrs Frederick C. Bartlett

Mrs. Dora Tripp Bartlett, wife of Frederic Clay Bartlett, died in her New York apartment, 131 East Sixty-sixth street, at 6:30 o'clock yesterday evening. She had been believed only slightly ill, but had been a victim of fainting spells.

It is believed she had become weakened in her long fight in nursing her son, Clay Bartlett, who has just passed through a siege of pneumonia. No announcement of the funeral has been made.

Mrs. Bartlett was born in White Plains, N. Y. She had been active in woman's club affairs even before her marriage to Mr. Bartlett, who achieved note when he gave up a life of business with his father, A. C. Bartlett of the firm of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., to become an artist. Mr. Bartlett studied under Whistler, and his return to America from his work abroad was marked by immediate success.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett designed the residence at Twenty-ninth street and Prairie avenue, which was pointed out as the "most wonderful house in Chicago." Some two years ago they planned to build on the north side—with a colony of artistic people, on the west border of Lincoln park, but they did not carry out this plan, going instead to New York for a year's residence and they both have been pursuing studies in art and political economy in that city.

Mrs. Bartlett was interested in sociological and reform work and at the time of her death was vice president of the Woman's City club of Chicago.

Harpist Singer, of the Orchestra, Is Dead

Walfried Singer, second harpist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, died yesterday of diabetes in the Presbyterian hospital. He was apparently in normal health on Thursday, when he took part under Conductor Stock in the rehearsal of the Friday-Saturday program—a rehearsal especially arduous because of the nonarrival of Eugène d'Harcourt, the French composer, who was expected to conduct his own symphony, the "Néo-Classique."

Mr. Singer was taken to the hospital Friday morning.

Mr. Singer served in the violin choir when the second harp was not called for. He had been a member of the Orchestra seventeen years.

He is survived by a widow and three children.

OBITUARY.

J. G. BRUNS, for twenty years a prominent figure in Chicago auction and furniture circles, died Friday, aged 54 years, after a protracted illness.

In 1893 Mr. Bruns married Cecilia Miller, who survives him, as do his three sons—Clement, Herbert, and John—his brother, William Bruns, of Grand Rapids, and his sisters, Mrs. Henry Backus, Mrs. C. M. Griffith, Mrs. H. H. Embry, Miss Rose Bruns, and Mrs. T. J. Sullivan of Chicago, and Mrs. Sidney Radcliffe of New York. Mr. Bruns was a member of the Chicago Athletic association and also of the Milwaukee Hotel Men's association.

The funeral takes place Monday at 11 a. m. from the residence, 3527 Jackson boulevard, to Our Lady of Sorrows church, thence by autos to St. Maria's cemetery.

PHILO WARREN STACY, 84 years old, Milton township's oldest citizen, died in Glen Ellyn on Friday. He had resided on his farm, near Glen Ellyn for eighty-two years. His parents settled on the then wild lands, coming from New York when he was an infant and Indians were plentiful. Chief Blackhawk was accustomed to pass over the old Indian trail by Stacy's farm and regaled himself, as did other Indian chiefs, on hospitality of the pioneers. Mr. Stacy was a member of the E. S. Kelly post, G. A. R., at Wheaton. The funeral services will be held privately tomorrow afternoon and interment will be in Forest Home.

HARRIET ELIZABETH BOND ELLINGTON, wife of E. E. Ellington, died yesterday, aged 65, at her residence, 9631 South Winchester avenue. Mrs. Ellington was a granddaughter of Joseph Meeker, one of the early settlers of Chicago, who resided on the present site of the First National bank. Mrs. Ellington and also her mother were born there. She leaves two sons, Ernest T. Ellington of Chicago, and Harold S. Ellington of Detroit, and one grandchild. She was a member of Chicago Chapter D. A. R. and of the Thirteenth Church of Christ, Scientist, Chicago.

QUARTUS HORATIO CHAPIN died yesterday at the home of his cousin, Charles O. Chapin, in Lombard, Ill. Mr. Chapin was past commander of the George H. Thomas post of the G. A. R. and served in the First Illinois Light artillery in the civil war. He was born in Chicopee, Mass., July 6, 1844. For nearly half a century he was in the United States railway mail service. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 90 East Randolph street under the auspices of his Grand Army post.

NAHUM MORRILL, former judge of Auburn, Me., died yesterday, aged 98. He leaves two sons, Judge John A. Morrill of Auburn, Me., and Donald L. Morrill of the Chicago Title and Trust company.

In No Car Save the Hudson Super-Six

These Things Are Exclusive—And You Want Them

The Super-Six motor is a Hudson invention.

All its supremacies are controlled by our patents.

So, in choosing a fine car, the first thing to decide is—Are these things important?

It means 80 per cent more efficiency.

It means almost doubled endurance.

A smoothness undreamed-of before it.

Motor friction and wear reduced almost to nothing.

And these are the chief results:

A speed capacity, due to lack of vibration, which has broken all stock-car records.

Record-breaking quick acceleration.

Hill-climbing ability when, at Pike's Peak, a Super-Six made the best time in the world's greatest hill-climb, against twenty great rivals.

Endurance so surpassing that a Super-Six won the 24-hour stock-car record by 52 per cent.

Such marvelous persistence that a Super-Six twice broke the transcontinental record in one continuous 7,000-mile round trip.

No doubt these are feats you don't care to perform. But remember they have always been used to prove the superior motor type.

The car which won them—as a stock car—has always been conceded supremacy. Just because they prove less friction, less wear, less waste. And that means more endurance.

Now, for the first time, one car—the Hudson—holds all the worth-while records. And the endurance records by tremendous margins.

Some Stars Have Set

Don't be misled by ancient prestige in choosing a car today. Since the Super-Six invention, many a star has set.

Two years ago the Six seemed doomed, because of this vibration. The trend was toward Eights and Twelves. That trend has stopped. The Super-Six, by every test, excelled.

Last year—in its first year—the Super-Six assumed first place in sales, among cars above $1100. And this year, as last year, the sales will be limited only by factory capacity.

Now is the time to prove these facts—before the over-demand begins. See how the Hudson, in beauty and luxury, now matches its motor supremacy. See the new gasoline saver now attached to the Hudson—another exclusive economy.

We have the latest models now on show.

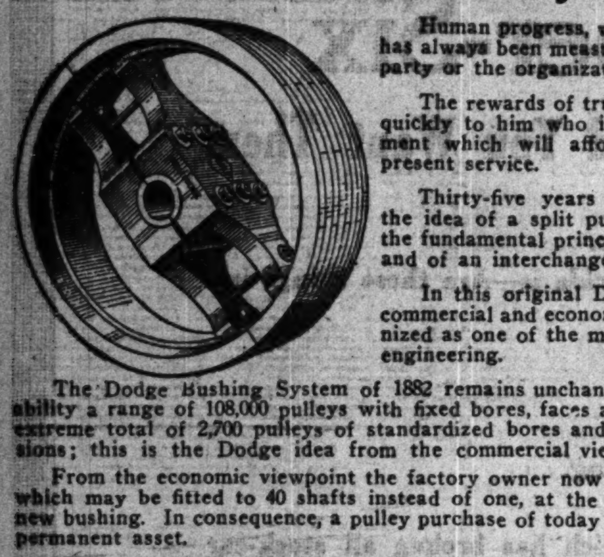
through its many Branch Warehouses, District Organizations and their accredited Sales Agencies throughout the world.

Foundation of the Pulley Industry—1882



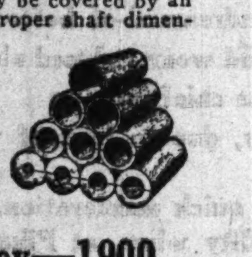
Human progress, whether social, political or industrial, has always been measured by the ability of the person, the party or the organization to render service to others.

The rewards of true service-giving come naturally and quickly to him who is continually seeking that development which will afford the opportunity to expand his present service.

Thirty-five years ago Wallace H. Dodge conceived the idea of a split pulley made of hardwood, embodying the fundamental principles of compression shaft fastening, and of an interchangeable bushing system.

In this original Dodge idea was the basis for a new commercial and economic development which is now recognized as one of the most important branches of industrial engineering.

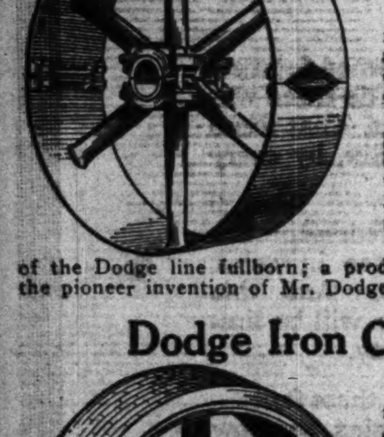
The Dodge Bushing System of 1882 remains unchanged in 1917; through its interchangeability a range of 108,000 pulleys with fixed bores, faces and diameters may be covered by an extreme total of 2,700 pulleys of standardized bores and 40 bushings of proper shaft dimensions; this is the Dodge idea from the commercial viewpoint.



From the economic viewpoint the factory owner now buys one pulley which may be fitted to 40 shafts instead of one, at the slight cost of a new bushing. In consequence, a pulley purchase of today is regarded as a permanent asset.

Thus as early as 1882 Wallace H. Dodge, founder of Dodge Manufacturing Company, was acknowledged the inventor, patentee, and master of the principles which today govern the manufacture of all stock pulleys.

Addition of "Standard" Cast Iron Split Pulley—1900



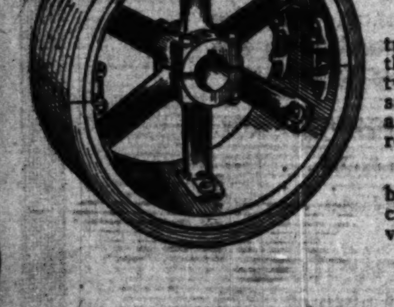
In 1900, the "Standard" Cast Iron Split Pulley, using similar metallic interchangeable bushings, was added to the Dodge line by purchase; for even then the split bushed pulley was being copied in other materials than the original wood type.

The "Standard" Iron Split Pulley met with immediate favor in industry the world over; that first demand for a metallic pulley decreed as absolutely essential those same qualities of strength and perfect balance possessed by the original wood type.

Pulley users were unwilling then, as now, to accept lightness alone as a substitute for true-running and durability. At this time the "Standard" Iron Split Pulley was the only metallic pulley which would maintain an absolutely round shape under all conditions of belt strain, a requisite necessary for efficiency of operation.

Thus the "Standard" Iron Split Pulley became a part of the Dodge line fullborn; a product that had profited by and attained perfection through the pioneer invention of Mr. Dodge and the experience of others.

Dodge Iron Center Wood Rim Pulley



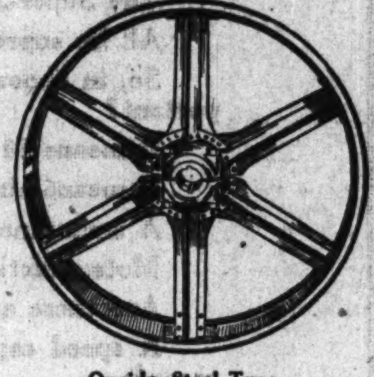
As the necessity for high speeds and unusual strains increased the Dodge Iron Center Wood Rim Pulley was developed to meet those severe conditions where rim velocities far exceeded recognized limits.

It was discovered that increased strength against centrifugal stress was not to be attained by increasing the thickness of the rim. Cast iron and wood had proved to be two great pulley materials; their combined use was necessary in the perfection of this product for use as main drivers and for that particular service which involves a constantly recurring shock load or "hammer blow."

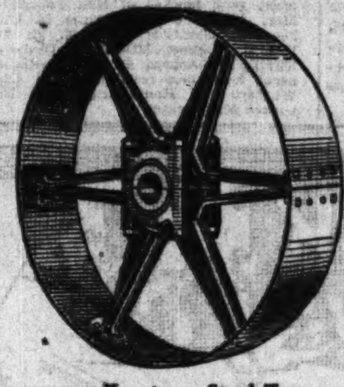
There is no pulley made which can be, and which is, balanced with the degree of accuracy which obtains in the case of the Dodge Iron Center Wood Rim Pulley. It invariably represents a conservative investment.

Addition of the Steel Split Pulley—1917

And now, in 1917, we announce the further addition of the steel type of split pulley as the final justification of the Dodge slogan, "A Perfect Pulley for Every Place."



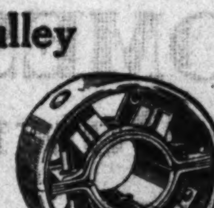
Oneida Steel Type



Keystone Steel Type

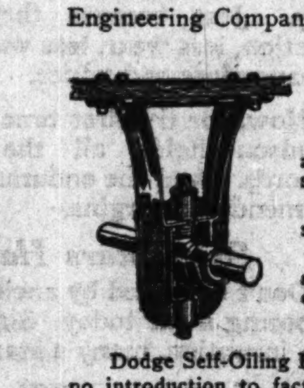
Our final satisfaction in this announcement is two-fold; first, in being the only pulley manufacturer in the entire world who may offer, without prejudice, the proper type of pulley for the work in hand; and, second, in the knowledge that we are furnishing in every case the highest development in pulley construction, whether of wood, iron, or steel.

"National" All-Steel Split Pulley



The National Steel Split Pulley becomes a part of the Dodge line through the purchase of the Oneida plants—It is made in 3 inch, 4 inch, 5 inch, and 6 inch diameters and from 3 inch to 6 inch faces inclusive. The "National" is made in both crown and flat face; it will be sold in the future by the Dodge Sales & Engineering Company, its dealers and accredited sales agencies.

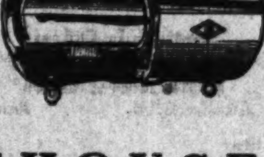
Dodge Hangers and Bearings



It is generally understood that a hanger must act in the capacity of an anvil, to absorb the shocks and blows of shaft vibration. Sufficient strength is essential.

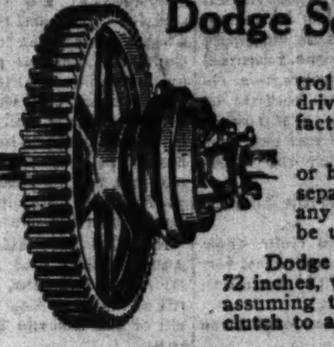
In the Dodge line of adjustable ball and socket hangers there is strength, durability and interchangeability.

Dodge hangers of the drop, post and bracket type are carried in stock by all Dodge dealers. It was possible during the tremendous increase of industrial equipment during 1916 to ship Dodge hangers in thousand lots of a single size out of stock.



Dodge Self-Oiling Bearings, either capillary or ring type, need no introduction to factory owners; their dependability and efficiency are so well recognized throughout the entire industrial field that their specification is practically universal as the most reliable "roadbed for power."

Dodge Solid and Split Friction Clutc

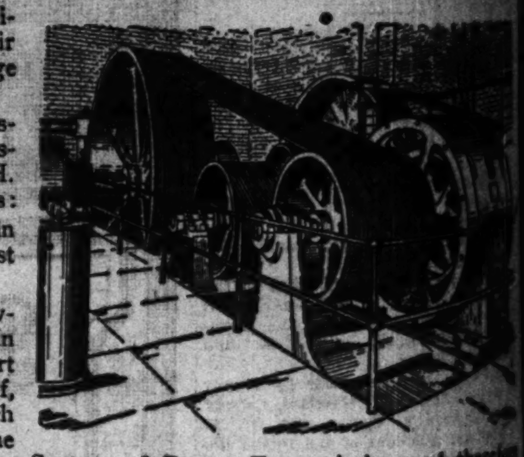


Dodge Friction Clutches, as the means of independ trol over machines, groups of machines, countersh drives, are in use in every important branch of industry. factor for economy and safety, there is no substitute.

Dodge Clutches are made for all kinds of service, or heavy loads, or for slow or high speeds. These clutches separate and distinct mechanisms in themselves, and are not any way a part of the pulley, sheave, gear or sprocket which be used in connection with them.

Dodge Clutches are manufactured in stock sizes from 10 inches 72 inches, with respective horsepower ratings of from 6 to 1,500, assuming that such a rating is sufficiently under the capacity of clutch to allow for an ample margin of safety.

Dodge American System Rope Transmissio



Dodge Rope Drives are now universally employed because of their wide adaptability for an unusual range of service conditions.

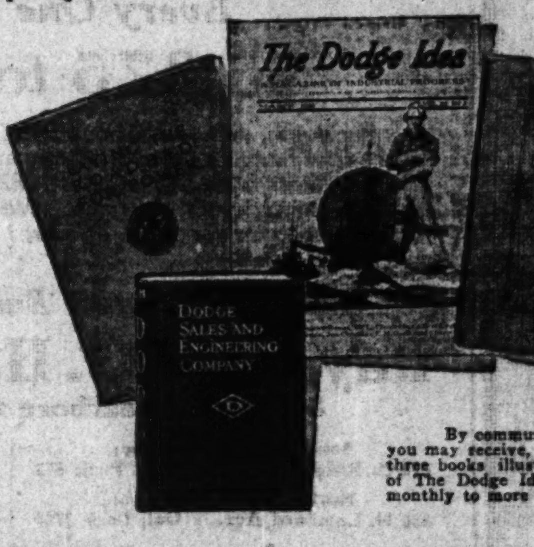
As a method of power transmission the American system of transmission devised by Mr. Wallace H. Dodge and Mr. W. B. Hosford offers:

First: As against belt drives in general, an appreciable saving in first cost of installation.

Second: An additional annual saving in depreciation of equipment. In belt drives the most expensive part of the installation is the belt itself, which is also the portion upon which the most wear occurs. Rope is the least expensive factor in the Dodge System of Power Transmission and therefo replaced at considerably less cost.

Third: Contrasted with electrical transmission, less than a quarter of the f cost, often less than a tenth; less cost for maintenance; and a system that the unsk millwright can master in a day.

Dodge Service is country-wide; with Branch Warehouses and Sales Ag in every important city of America, the buyer of transmission equipment is assured prompt and efficient service.



Further complet of the Dodge Line come, eventually inevitably; such tional progress is tirely dependent the further perfecti of men and metals, not upon our determ nation to so serve interests of industry large, that you feel justified, and, measure, oblig to specify Dodg Products for all ing power transmi requirements.

By communicating with the main office at Mishawaka, you may receive, without further obligation, any one or three books illustrated, or you may be placed upon the mailing of The Dodge Idea, a Magazine of Industrial Progress, monthly to more than 32,000 readers.

MAROONS SCORE TRIUMPH IN ILLINI MEET

DRIVE ON FLAG OPENS TONIGHT AS SOX LEAVE

Twenty-five Players to Report—Faber Signed, Walsh Is Through.

WHITE SOX ROSTER

PITCHERS—Reb Russell, Eddie Cicotte, Joe Benz, Jim Scott, Mel Wolfgang, Dave Danforth, Claude Williams, Speed Martin, Andrew Norman, Lyons, M. Lamers, Red Faber.

CATCHERS—Ray Schalk, Walter Mayer, Byrd Lynn, Wilbur Gray, John Walker, Joe Jenkins.

INFIELDERS—Chick Gandil, Jack Fournier, Fred Henry, Ted Jourdan, Bob Hasbrook, Eddie Collins, Zeb Terry, Buck Weaver, Fred McMullin, Bruce Hartford, Swede Risberg.

OUTFIELDERS—Joe Jackson, John Collins, Happy Felsch, Eddie Murphy, Nemo Leibold, Bruno Haas, R. C. Eldred.

BY JOHN ALCOCK.

Another winter of discontent for White Sox fans will end tonight. At 6 o'clock this evening Comiskey's de luxe special will pull out from the La Salle street station over the Rock Island for the training camp at Mineral Wells, Tex. Thereafter hot stove league gossip concerning the Sox will make way for live news fodder relating to the activities of the athletes themselves.

Red Faber, our last real holdout and probably our best right handed hurling member, drifted into Prexy Comiskey's office yesterday to talk contract. A few minutes of conversation with the Old Roman brought Red to terms and he signed without a quiver of the pen. He'll be on the special.

Many on Special Train.

About twenty-five players will be aboard the special. With Comiskey's personal friends, officials of the club, and the usual delegation of war scribes, the entire party will number close to seventy-five. Every luxury that can be provided aboard a special train will be at the disposal of the tourists. Two dining cars, a buffet-library car, an observation car, and five sleepers will make up the train. There also will be a noncutting barber and a bath for any one who forgets that item before leaving.

If all goes well the party will reach Mineral Wells on Tuesday. The athletes will be allowed that day to get used to the balmy climate of the south. Training labor will start on Wednesday, however, and there will be no letup for the athletes from the first tap of the gong until the baseball curtain rings down next fall. No games are booked with outside teams until March 17, when the regulars will tackle Fort Worth while the second team is combating Dallas.

Kid Gleason Arrives.

Nearly every train coming into Chicago will bring one or more players. The advance guard consisted of only five—Ray Schalk, Kid Gleason, Red Faber, Reb Russell, and Bob Hasbrook. Gleason has been here for several days. Secretary Grabiner's list of players for whom berths are reserved does not include the name of Ed Walsh, pitching star of the old days. It looks as if Walsh finally has decided to quit, although officials of the Sox club insist his name still appears on the Sox reserve list.

Secretary Grabiner announced definitely last night that Walsh will not go with the club. Big Ed has had numerous offers to take over minor league teams in recent years and may decide to become a minor magnate.

Twelve members of the team are to meet at the Texas camp. These are Joe Jackson, Jack Fournier, Jim Scott, Dave Danforth, Eldred, a recruit outfielder; Zeb Terry, Swede Risberg, Speed Martin, pitching rookie from the coast, Fred McMullin, Ted Jourdan, Joe Jenkins, Byrd Lynn, catcher, and Chick Gandil, whose presence on first base this year is expected to round the club into championship form.

"Tribune" Find on Trip.

Among the candidates who will make the trip on the special will be Andrew Norman, a Chicago amateur hurler who came into notice through THE TRIBUNE'S amateur tournament of last season. He is just back from a trip around the east with the winners in THE TRIBUNE trials. Other newcomers at the station tonight will be Pitcher Lyons, dug up from some [illegible] club; M. Lamers, another pitcher, who received a brief trial last fall; Bruno Haas, an outfielder who used to pitch for Connie Mack; a youthful catcher: Wilbur Gray, Notre Dame and Wichita; Fred Henry, Virginia league sacker; and Bruce Hartford, shortstop from Des Moines.

Here Are Nonplayers.

Comiskey's personal party, with the [illegible], will include: Charles A. Comiskey, Mrs. Charles A. Comiskey, Louis Comiskey, John Conahan, [illegible] Pranty, M. Rosenbaum, John [illegible], H. Grabiner, W. Veeck, G. H. Axelson, G. Robbins, M. [illegible], [illegible] Tearney, Al Tearney, E. Vollmer, [illegible] Flanagan, William Quinn, Joe Barry, Mrs. Keough, [illegible] E. Crazy Kennedy Detective

Words and Pictures By RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER 1.

I WAS seated in Crazy Kennedy's office one morning when the telephone rang. They always do.

"Well, Morrison," said Kennedy, when he had hung up, "here is a real mystery."

"Go ahead," I shouted.

"The gentleman who just called up," said Crazy, "is in a horrible fix. He has just boughten a new car and he can't start it."

"Impossible," I impossibled.

"He wants me," continued Kennedy, "to go where it is at, on the north side, and see what's the matter. And, as I think the case will prove most interesting, I would like to have you accompany me."

"On what?" I queried.

CHAPTER 2.

It was thirty-five minutes later when we arrived at the residence of Crazy's client. Sure enough, a brand new car was standing outside. Its owner was cranking like mad.

It Was Thirty-five Minutes Later.

"Are you Mr. Gish?" inquired Crazy, using the name the guy had given him over the telephone.

"What of it?" replied the other, and then recognized that he was addressing strangers. "I beg your pardon," he continued, "but this car is brand new and I paid $385 for it and I can't get it to start."

"Do you want it to start?" queried Kennedy.

"You said her," said Mr. Gish.

"Have you tried priming?" asked Crazy.

"I have tried everything," was Mr. Gish's repy. "I have primed her with gas and with ether, but ether one has done no good. I have dried the magneto and poured hot water all over the place, but she simply won't start."

CHAPTER 3.

"I think I know what your trouble is," said Kennedy.

He carefully examined the car from all angles. Then, without a word of warning, he drew an instrument from his pocket. It looked like a book.

"This," he said, "is the latest invention known to science. It is called the Statutes of Illinois. On page 673 I find this line: 'No car shall be run in this state without a state license.' Mr. Gish, I think our difficulty is solved. You have no license."

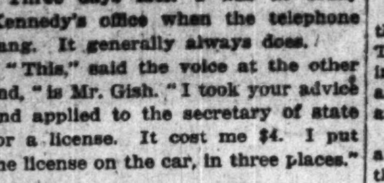
"Where can I get one?" queried Gish.

"You will have to apply to the secretary of state at Springfield," replied Kennedy.

CHAPTER 4.

Three days later I was in Crazy Kennedy's office when the telephone rang. It generally always does.

"This," said the voice at the other end, "is Mr. Gish. I took your advice and applied to the secretary of state for a license. It cost me $4. I put the license on the car, in three places."



The Telephone Rang.

"Does the car run?" asked Kennedy.

"No," replied his client.

Boston, Mass., March 3.—[Special.]—Nathan Hall of Boston, the second undefeated player in the National Amateur Billiard tournament, continued his good playing today by defeating Edward Rein of Chicago, 400 to 227 in twenty-five innings and making an average of sixteen, the highest average in the last two yeras of the national tournament play.

Hall's high run was 78 and in his string there also figured runs of 42, 36, 47, and 43. Rein's best was 48 and his average 8 2-25.

T. Henry Clarkson defeated E. W. Gardner, 400 to 278, in forty-two innings. Clarkson ran 41 in the fifteenth inning and 67 in the next stanza. Gardner averaged 6 13-21, with high run of 36. Clarkson averaged 9 11-21, and his high run was 67.

A. B. C. TOURNEY GETS UNDER WAY AT GRAND RAPIDS

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 3.—[Special.]—Eighty Grand Rapids business men faced the pins in the Coliseum building in this city shortly after 8 o'clock tonight, opening the seventeenth annual tournament of the American Bowling congress. Brief speeches by President George Curry of the Grand Rapids Bowling Tournament company and national officials preceded the first drives in the annual pin championship.

The count of entries shows 714 five men teams, 1,534 doubles, and 3,099 singles competing this year. This shows forty-two fewer quintets, thirty-two less doubles team, and a reduction of seventy-nine individual contestants from the record entries of former years. The cash loss in prize money is only $1,176. The loss in size is offset by the fact the meet includes the greatest number of cities ever taking part for the national bowling titles.

Loss in "Complimentary" Entries.

There are forty more visiting teams than rolled at Toledo's meet a year ago. The seventy-nine fives which are missing are ranked as "home clubs," usually figured as complimentary entries anyway.

The four champions, whose crowns are about to topple if the usual custom of the congress tournaments is followed are the Commodore Barrys of Chicago, five men titleholders for two years; Henry Marino and Frank Thoma, Chicago, doubles champs; Sam Schliman, Toronto, singles, and Thoma, who won the all-events. Few cases of victors' repeating for an A. B. C. championship the succeeding year are chronicled. The Barrys upset all A. B. C. form a year ago by repeating their victory of 1915 with a 2,905 total, two pins less than in the previous year.

Some Records Long Standing.

Records for the sixteen tournaments that have been held by the A. B. C. show the 3,006 of the Flor de Knispels of St. Paul, made at Toledo in 1913, high in the fives. Al and Tony Schwoegler's 1,304, made by the Madison brothers at Pittsburgh in 1909, stands as the best mark in the doubles. The 711 rolled by Wallace Pierce of Pueblo in the singles in 1907, and 1,972 by Ed Herrmann of Cincinnati, that won the all-events at Toledo's 1913 meet, are the other records.

No contests are expected over the leading offices in the annual election. President William Agnew of Cleveland is figured certain of reëlection. Secretary A. L. Langtry of Milwaukee and Treasurer Frank L. Pasdeloup of Chicago were elected for a term of ten years last year.

Archer Guest at Banquet; Off for Texas Tuesday

Jimmy Archer, holdout catcher of the Cubs, will be given a banquet at the Hotel Planters tomorrow night by local admirers. After the feed Jimmy will pack his duds and start for Texas on Tuesday with Ray De Long, a stockyards man who has extensive land holdings in Texas. Jimmy has purchased some real estate in the Lone Star state and wants to look over his property. While in the south Jimmy will engage in active training so as to be ready for work should he be able to patch up his differences with the Cub officials.

Cub Flingers Show Wares in Taming Angels, 7 to 3

Vaughn, Demaree, and Packard Fool Chance's Men.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 3.—[Special.]—Fancy pitching by three of the veteran hurlers of the Cubs had Frank Chance's Angels guessing tody. So the Cubs won the second combat of the spring series, 7 to 3, and were galloping all the way. Big Jim Vaughn, Al Demaree, and Gene Packard were the flingers who fooled the locals and their work was so classy that tonight the Cub stockholders are hearing the pennant flutter again.

Vaughn and Demaree were especially brilliant. Big Jim worked the first three rounds and shut out the coast leaguers, allowing only one hit. Big Jim hasn't signed his contract yet and his showing today should help him to get an extra $500 on his year's salary, providing he gets busy with the stockholders before their enthusiasm cools.

Demaree Shows Stuff, Too.

Al Demaree hurled the fourth, fifth, and sixth rounds, and, of course, Al is new to Chicago and wants to make good. Even with his ankle taped, he held the local boys to one hit and no runs in the three rounds, and besides that picked a guy off first base with his big league balk motion. Al also is in strong with the stockholders.

Packard wasn't so fortunate. You see, Gene signed his contract some time ago and is out here to limber up his arm regardless of the cost. Packard wants to be ready to fan 'em along in June, but he wouldn't cut loose at all today and never once tried to bend one over the plate. By the time he got to the slab the local fans were screaming for some action, so the local boys pounced upon Gene for a couple of runs in the eighth and another in the ninth. However, Gene should worry; he's signed.

Crandall Takes His Time.

Chance sent old Otis Crandall, the former truck horse of the New York Giants' pitching staff, to the slab. He labored six rounds just as one would expect a wise old owl to work. The Cubs swatted his loppy delivery, but Otis is preparing himself to set the Coast league on fire in July, so wouldn't work any harder than Packard. Bill Hogg, former Cub tryout, hurled the last three innings and the Chicagoans scored three times off him.

As on the previous day, young Harry Wolf displayed skill, vim, and courage at the shortstop job, with Chuck Wortman still limping on a blistered heel. If Chuck doesn't heal up his heel pretty soon he will lose his job. Wolf heaved one wild one to Saier in trying to nail a fast man at first, but he looked good even while making a wild throw.

Dillhoefer Looks Good.

Pickles Dillhoefer did the backstopping nicely and raced around for three of the seven runs. He poled one single that drove in a run and walked a couple of times. Steve Yerkes continued to be the second baseman, while Capt. Larry Doyle exercised his limb, broken last fall, on the side lines. Larry wants to be sure that busted bone is properly healed before trying any base sliding in exhibition games.

Although they boast that there are 700,000 persons in Los Angeles now, it didnt' look like it at the ball park. Only about 3,000 of them cared a durn about the Cubs, at least only about that many were present.

The second team departed tonight for Taft, Cal., to exhibit tomorrow, with Jimmy Sheckard at the helm. Elliott and Benton went as catchers, leaving Dillhoefer here.

Wilson Signs with Cubs; Archer Now Only Holdout

Art Wilson, who has been teaming with Jimmy Archer as the holdout catching staff of the Cubs, came to terms yesterday from Decatur, Ill. Art telephoned to Walter Craighead of Weeghman's office staff that he had decided to accept the contract offered him. Wilson promised to start west immediately and should reach the Cub camp at Pasadena about Tuesday. His appearance probably will gladden the heart of Manager Mitchell, who seems in a bad way for catchers.

SOX SELL NESS TO JOE TINKER

Jack Ness, the first baseman who refused to sign with the White Sox at the salary offered him, was sold yesterday to Joe Tinker's Columbus club of the American association. The announcement came from Tinker at Columbus and was confirmed at White Sox headquarters. Ness has insisted he will play semi-pro ball around Chicago rather than accept a reduction in pay. He may change his mind after a conference with Tinker, however. Ness is a Chicago boy. He is employed as starter for a taxi company on the north side.

Miss Towne Wins Title in Belleair Golf Meet

Belleair Heights, Fla., March 3.—[Special.]—Miss Emma Towne of Evanston won the woman's golf championship to-d[illegible]y defeating Mrs. G. K. Morrow, G[illegible]t Neck, the medalist, 2 and 1. Miss Towne was always ahead of her rival.

BY MAROON.

"Wisconsin night" was a success last night when the Badgers defeated Chicago, 25 to 16, in Bartlett gymnasium. For a few minutes the Maroons were off to a good lead, but when the Badger short passing combination finally got started the south side fans began to wonder why Dr. Meanwell's team was not out at the front of the conference race. It was the best game of the season played in Bartlett gymnasium and the Maroons were helpless before the fierce driving power and short, snappy passes of the Cardinals.

Gorgas opened the scoring with a pretty snap toss over his head and Townley followed suit with another corner goal and a free throw. Then Capt. George Olson got a corner on the ball and started a series of rushes that put Wisconsin in the lead. The visiting captain was the vortex of the passing game and fed Carlson and McIntosh. The Maroons trailed, 9 to 5, at the half.

Second Half Like First.

The second period was a repetition of the first, with Meyers and Olson featuring in the passing play. McIntosh brought his total to six goals and Chandler broke into the scoring column twice just before the final whistle.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Urbana, Ill., March 3.—[Special.]—Athletes representing the University of Chicago carried off the lion's share of honors tonight in the first annual relay games of the University of Illinois in the large armory. The Maroons led the classy field of athletes with a total of 26¾ points and won two out of the three relays staged for university teams.

The appearance of Michigan's team was a big boom to the games, which probably will be held every year. Wolverine rooters were out in force and never overlooked an opportunity to cheer the defenders of he Maize and Blue.

Chicago won the one and four mile relays. The two mile event went to Notre Dame, wtih the Maroons second. The college one mile relay was won by Wabash.

To Waldo Ames of Illinois went the individual honors. He won the 75 yard high and low hurdles and established new track records in both. He was the class in both events.

Crowd Fills Big Armory.

Long before the first event was scheduled, the big armory, with a seating capacity of 4,000, was packed to the doors. The building, one of the finest in the country, was decorated for the occasion, and the Illinois band furnished music during the preliminary stages.

The Michigan athletes were the first to appear on the track, and needless to state, they were given a great reception. It certainly looked good to see the block "M" on the front of their sweaters. Coach Farrell and his athletes were cheered from all sides.

Michigan's appearance in tonight's games was its first since 1906 in competition with conference colleges. Every athletic fan hopes the friendly relations, which were broken in the winter of 1905-'06, will continue.

Notre Dame Wins Two Mile.

In the first relay, a two mile event, the four athletes from Notre Dame won the verdict, but were forced to extend themselves from the start. Purdue led at the end of the first half mile, and Kansas at the end of the mile. Kasper then took up the going for Notre Dame and gave his teammate, Meehan, an advantage of fifteen yards on the final relay. Meehan maintained his advantage to the finish.

Getting away to a good start, Smith of Wisconsin won the seventy-five yard open dash by five yards from Heuring of Indiana, who took second place by a scant six inches from Casey of Wisconsin. The Badger footed the distance in :07 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the American amateur record.

Maroons Take Mile Relay.

Chicago won the mile relay by ten yards from Michigan. Dismond came from behind on the last relay, starting at least ten yards behind the last Wolverine, but he had the speed and endurance to overcome the handicap and win off by himself. Northwestern was disqualified because one of its runners ran into an official.

Ames of Illinois was an easy winner in the seventy-five yard high hurdles. He leaped the barriers in :09 3-5, which equals the track record, held by himself. He won by a good five yards.

Ames, of Illinois won his second race by taking the seventy-five yard low hurdles. He leaped the sticks in :08 2-5 for a new track record. Smith of Wisconsin was a close second. Third place went to Kirkland of Notre Dame.

Four Mile to Chicago Also.

Chicago scored its second relay victory by winning the four mile relay after a hard fought race with Illinois. The runners on each team alternated in the lead, but Tenney had more in reserve and on the last relay stretched out and beat Gantz to the tape by ten yards.

CORNELL ATHLETES CARRY OFF FIRSTS AT PHILLY EVENTS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 3.—Cornell athletes showed their form tonight by capturing four of the twelve events in the third annual meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America at the exposition building. Moakley's men won the three and twelve lap relay races, shotput, and broad jump and tied with Pennsylvania in the pole vault.

Pennsylvania won the graduate mile relay race, with Ted Meredith running as the anchor man. The Quakers also won the high jump. Yale carried off the 50 yard high hurdles and took the six lap relay. Harvard was the winner in the 50 yard dash, Princeton won the two lap relay, and Syracuse the medley race.

Massachusetts Tech made a strong showing, finishing second in the fifty yard dash and twelve lap relay. The tech athletes landed numerous places in the individual events. The three lap relay was a thriller, going to Cornell by a bare margain when Crim nosed out Scudder of Penn in a thrilling finish. Scudder collapsed across the line.

It was impossible to tell who won the meet, as total points were not kept, and events not counted on the usual basis of five points for first, three for third, and so forth. The officials were kept puzzling over the team victory after midnight.

In a meeting in connection with the intercollegiate events it was decided to hold the forty-second annual eastern collegiate outdoor track and field meet at Franklin field, Philadelphia, May 25-26.

Another Boxing Measure to Go Before the House

Another boxing bill will be presented in the Illinois legislature Wednesday by Big Tim Murphy of the stockyards district. The latest bill is a self-supporting measure. It calls for 10 per cent of the gross receipts to go to the state, and levies an assessment of $25 a year on referees and $5 a year on boxers competing in the state. All referees must be Illinois voters. A commission of five members is provided to oversee the sport, with $3,000 a year as each member's salary. Two commissioners would serve one year each, one two years, and the other two four years. The bill was drafted by Edward J. Glaser of Chicago.

Beloit Five Takes Title by Beating Lake Forest

Beloit, Wis., March 3.—[Special.]—Beloit won the "Little Five" conference championship by trouncing Lake Forest, tonight, 16 to 5. The home team's floor work baffled the visitors, who ringed only one field goal. Lineup:

JOHNNY COULON AGAIN OUT FOR TITLE HE LOST

Chicago Boy Making Good in Battle to Regain Bantam Honors.

BY RAY PEARSON.

They seldom come back, but judging by the recent performances of Johnny Coulon of Chicago, former bantamweight champion of the world, he is making good on what he set out to do several months ago. But perhaps the strangest part of the work in the ring of "Wee Johnny" is the fact that he is accomplishing something that he failed to do once before, and that he is succeeding shows that there is some reward for persistency and determination.

When Coulon was clipped on the chin and knocked out by Kid Williams of Baltimore, losing his title, some three years ago, there wasn't a follower of the game of fisticuffs who didn't say that Coulon was "through." But this bantam wasn't through. He waited for a year and roughed it in the Canadian woods in an effort to get ready to make his comeback. When he thought he was ready he faced the test, but instead of success he met failure, for he was far from the Coulon of championship days.

Tries Canadian Woods.

But this setback didn't stop the little Chicagoan. Once more he returned to the seclusion of the Canadian woods to harden himself for ring action, for he was determined not to give up his effort to regain the honors he had lost to Williams. So after another year of preparation Coulon started out again. He didn't even go to the trouble of signing a manager, but traveled to the Pacific coast, where four round bouts are permitted. And it was in these four round tilts that Johnny declares he "found himself."

He didn't win all these bouts, but was good enough to cop the majority of them, and this gave him the confidence he needed to start out on the "big time" in New York and other big eastern cities where boxing is legal.

His activity in the ring in New York shows two contests, and in both of them the popular decision went to him. In the first of these Gotham engagements he bested Joe Wagner, while in the second he trimmed a tough bird named Young Sharkey.

Signs Lewis as Manager.

That Coulon believed he is "back" is evidenced by his action in signing up a manager. Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, the Chicago left hook artist, is looking after his interests, and as Lewis is just about as wise a pilot as they make Coulon looks pretty certain right now to gain success as well as to pick up a lot of the stuff that makes the regular old mare go.

The writer is well acquainted with Coulon and is in a position to tip off a few things concerning the success that this bantamweight is achieving. There is a reason and it seems that Johnny has used his own noodle and discovered the way to win.

In the big days when he held the title Coulon could punch. His record doesn't show a great string of knockouts, but he did knock some of his opponents into the land of sleepers. However, Johnny packed a blow that was a punisher and many of his opponents in those days would have been tickled half sick to block his maulies.

Discards Punch for Cleverness.

Those who have seen the Coulon of today in action probably have noticed that he does not use that punishing punch. Probably they have reached the conclusion that he has lost it, but such is not the case. Coulon probably can hit just as hard as he did when a champion, but he is not doing it. He has sidetracked the punch to employ other tactics which roll up points in his favor instead of trying to knock his opponents into dreamland. And at the same time he is making a big hit with the fans of New York.

In his bouts in Gotham he showed all the old speed and pep along with cleverness and he went so fast against Wegner and Sharkey that he outpointed them so far there could be no doubt at the end of ten rounds as who was the winner. Doing that is enough for Coulon and he is satisfied that he has "come back" to stay and to regain the world's title, which is now held by Pete Herman of New Orleans.

His manager, Nate Lewis, always was a careful pilot. He was careful in the days when he was nursing Kid Herman of Chicago along in the lightweight ranks. He worked Herman up to a champion scrap with the famous Joe Gans and he has been carrying Charley White of Chicago along in the same cautious manner.

Charles Otis Beats Moore in Cushion League Game

Charles Otis of New York finished his road tour in the Interstate league by defeating John Moore, 50 to 42, in eighty-one innings at Mussey's Madison street room last night. Otis scored twenty-one points in his first twenty-four innings, then slowed up long enough for Moore to pass him and lead, 33 to 32. Otis again spurted, and by making eighteen points in his last eighteen innings won by eight points. His high run was 2, Moore's best being 4. Score at each tenth inning:

Rainbow Trout

THE RAINBOW TROUT.

When Gitchie Manito finished the first sunset he had some wonderful red paint left over, so he brushed it on to the sides of a trout, and that is why the sides of the rainbow trout are red even to this day. When writing about trout, you know, it is the customary thing to "horn in" an Indian legend, and never having heard one about the rainbow trout, we invented that one ourself. Not so bad, is it, for the first attempt of an amateur Indian legend maker? One also is expected to tear one's hair and rave around a little about the Beauties of Nature when producing Trout Literature—we'll resign first! Now, having settled that, let's get down to business.

Besides the typical form, Salmo irideus, common to the mountain streams of California, there are five subspecies of rainbows, as follows: The brook trout of western Oregon, which seldom exceeds a pound in weight; the McCloud river trout, used for stocking midwest and eastern waters; the Kern river trout, found only in that stream and which reaches eight pounds; the "Nisuee" of the upper Sacramento, and the golden trout of Mount Whitney, the Francis X. of them all.

In appearance the rainbow trout is a beautiful fish; in color bluish above, with silvery sides irregularly polka dotted on the back and sides, and with generous splashes of red along the median line. It is stockily built, except when young, being much deeper in proportion to length than other trouts, and its mouth is noticeably small. He can be distinguished from our brook trout (fontinalis) by these features and by the prominent red sides, and the fact that his spots are black, while those of fontinalis are red.

We mention these differences because on some streams both rainbows and brooks will be taken, and possibly the brown trout as well—the latter can be told by his almost square tail and the fact that his scales can be plainly seen without the aid of a magnifying glass.

The rainbow trout varies in weight in different parts of the country, depending on the amount and variety of food available—they differ from most game fishes in that they prefer crustacea, worms, and larvæ to minnows, and when they are present in quantities, Sir Rainbow will become aldermanic in size without losing his "pep." In the Ozarks, on the Au Sable, in Michigan, and in some streams of New York state, he is often taken up to five pounds, and an odd specimen is landed now and then that weighs ten or twelve pounds or more.

He is an active fish, likely to be found working all over the stream, although the idea that he does not prefer the well aerated and fast water is not quite founded on fact. He has one advantage over the brook trout—he can thrive in waters that have become slightly polluted through lumbering or manufacturing and in water that is too warm for fontinalis. For this reason the McCloud river variety is much used for restocking streams from which the brook trout has "exited."

Some of these McCloud river fish were planted in the Au Sable river, in Michigan, in the '80s and have done remarkably well—some say at the expense of the brook trout, but as the latter spawn in the fall and the rainbows in the spring, there has been no conflict for breeding quarters, and the Michigan fish commissioners are inclined to believe that the rainbow is not an enemy of fontinalis. The Au Sable, the Père Marquette, the Boardman, and other Michigan streams now furnish some fine rainbow trout fishing.

As a game fish the rainbow trout is a major leaguer. He rises readily to flies (large specimens more readily than will large brooks or browns), and he fights like the very devil himself for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and is a leaper from Leaperville. We recently heard an angler who has fished the world over say that the rainbow fishing in Michigan is equal to salmon fishing at its best. William C. Harris, an authority, says:

"I have taken them (rainbows) in Michigan and found them superior to any other fish of similar size in any waters." As a table fish they do not quite equal the brook trout, but are "fine eatin'" nevertheless.

For tackle one wants a sturdy rod for rainbow trout. Say one of ten feet, and six ounces or more, where the fish run heavy, although the old hand can use a lighter tool. Leaders should be of the very best quality, and flies on hooks numbers six, eight, and ten are about right. As to patterns, most of the standard flies will do the trick, as the rainbow is not as discriminating in this respect as are some of the other trouts.

PREP BASKET TEAMS FROM EIGHT STATES IN MAROON SCHOLASTICS

Prep basketball champions from eight states will meet at the University of Chicago March 16-17 to decide the middle western championship. Only sectional champions will be allowed to compete, so the pick of the district is assured. Pat Page plans to make the affair equal to the University of Chicago interscholastic, the biggest prep track meet of the nation. The best quintets from Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana will be entered.

Already reports from the sectional tournaments are pouring in and Pat and his committees are having a hard time narrowing the field to sixteen teams, a group that will not be bulky in the two day playoff for the title.

Chicago Titles Undecided.

The Chicago championships are not yet decided, but Evanston and New Trier are the top teams in the Suburban league, with Hyde Park, Wendell Phillips, Crane, and Parker still in the running for the city title. The winners of these two races will be invited to compete, and also the champion in the Lake Forest-Evanston-Loyola academy triumvirate, to arouse local enthusiasm.

From northern Illinois Waukegan, Freeport, East Aurora, De Kalb, and Harvey are still in the running. From the other end of the state will come Centralia, champion of "Egypt," and undefeated by any southern Illinois five.

Waite High to Compete.

Waite High of Toledo has won a chance to appear in the Chicago games, and Gary and Crawfordsville and possibly another Hoosier sectional winner will represent Indiana. Mechanic Arts High of St. Paul, champion of Minnesota, has been guaranteed expenses by Twin City business men, and Shattuck academy may be included in the Gopher delegation. From Wisconsin St. John's and Wayland are the military school champions, while Wittenberg is well on the way to the state high title. Webster Grove, Mo., is expected to be on hand with the championship quintet of St. Louis county. Jackson and Travers City, Mich., look like sectional champions from the Wolverine state, and Marquette is expected from the northern peninsula.

Dubuque College Beats Loyola Academy, 37-17

Dubuque, Ia., March 3.—[Special.]—Dubuque college defeated the Loyola academy basketball team of Chicago, 37 to 17. Dubuque used several subs in the first half, which ended with the score 13 to 10 in its favor. In the last half Loyola was completely outclassed. Walsh for Dubuque scored 19 points. Lineup:

Welsh to Meet Leonard in Gotham Ten Rounder

New York, March 3.—[Special.]—Grant Hugh Browne, promoter at Madison Square garden, today put over a match between Freddie Welsh and Benny Leonard. He signed the champion and the local knockerout for a ten round bout in the garden on March 19. Browne also has booked a ten round mill between Jim Coffey and Bill Knockout Brennan, the latter a Chicago heavy, for March 12.

MISSOURI PACIFIC IRON MOUNTAIN

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

Unnecessary conventions are a severe handicap in auction. The most simple rule for the discard is that it shows weakness in the suit played. To reverse the order of the discards naturally reverses this meaning.

The kindergarten class is usually taught to play second hand low, third hand high, to cover honors with honors, and that a discard of a seven or higher means strength instead of weakness, all these things to be abandoned with infancy.

The deal which follows illustrates the failure of the extra convention in discarding:

THE HANDS.

North:
S—K, 10, 2.
H—10, 7, 2.
C—K, J, 8, 2.
D—Q, J, 5.

West:
S—J, 9, 6.
H—A, J, 6.
C—A, Q, 10.
D—A, 10, 4, 3.

East:
S—8, 7, 4.
H—K, Q, 8, 5.
C—5, 4.
D—K, 7, 6, 2.

South:
S—A, Q, 5, 3.
H—9, 4, 3.
C—9, 7, 6, 3.
D—9, 8.

Score, 0-0. West dealt and bid one no-trump, which closed the bidding. North had the opening lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	2 C	4 C	9 C	10 C
2	H 2	H 5	H 3	H A
3	H 7	H 8	H 4	H J

West secured nine tricks.

West could see eight tricks in the deal and a ninth trick if he could establish his diamonds and have the adversaries continue the club suit. It was more than probable, however, that the opponents would switch and make four tricks in spades, thus saving the game. But at trick five the club discard by south gave west his opportunity. North could not continue his club lead, had no information as to his partner's suit, and was almost certain at trick seven to lead the suit which west did not lead at trick six. West, therefore, made his bluff lead of a spade and north naturally switched to diamonds. The first diamond looked very encouraging, and the second one gave west the game.

South could not discard a diamond at trick five because he was using his kindergarten convention. Had his discard merely meant the suit he did not want led, he could have thrown away his eight of diamonds and his partner would have given him a spade and saved the game.

The next deal shows how games are lost through failure to attend to small details:

THE HANDS.

North:
S—J, 6, 5.
H—J, 9, 4.
C—K, 8, 7, 5.
D—K, 9, 4.

West:
S—K, 10, 3.
H—A, K, 10, 2.
C—A, Q, 3.
D—A, Q, 5.

East:
S—9, 8, 7.
H—8, 3.
C—J, 10, 6, 4.
D—10, 8, 6, 2.

South:
S—A, Q, 4, 2.
H—Q, 7, 6, 5.
[illegible]
D—J, 7, 3.

Score, 0—0. Declaration one no-trump by west. North had the original lead.

West secured ten tricks.

West played perfectly throughout the deal and the result was remarkable. North, however, played very badly, although his major error was a common one.

The lead of the knave of hearts at trick four was all right, but north should instantly have switched to the jack of spades, because south played his lowest heart on the knave, warning north to discontinue the suit. South would not play his lowest card under such circumstances if he wanted his partner to go on.

Just why north discarded a diamond at trick seven is not clear, but it gave west a very pretty opportunity. Strangely enough, the very worthless dummy took as many tricks in the deal as the north and south hands combined.

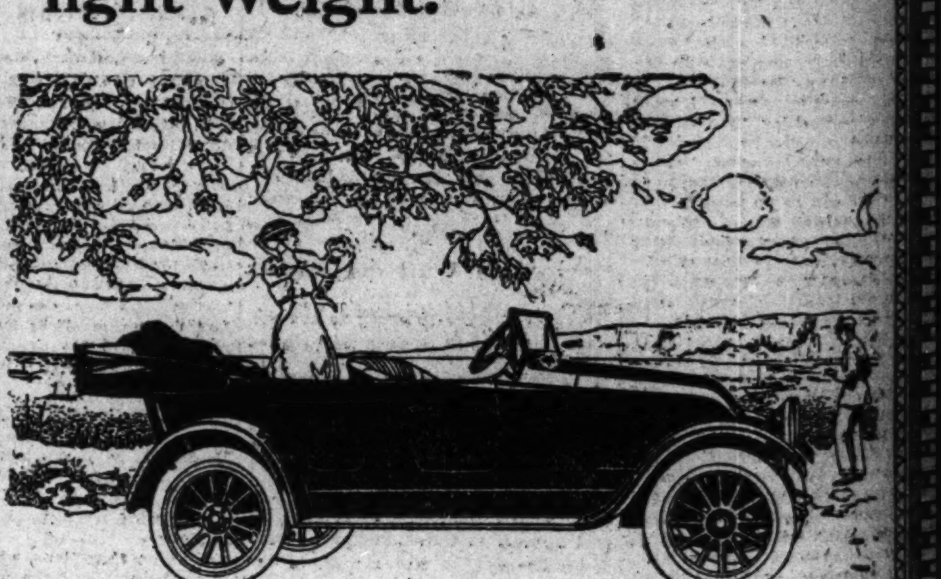
Philly Racquet Teams Bump Boston Players

Philadelphia, Pa., March 3.—Philadelphia defeated the Boston first and second teams in an intercity racquet match here today. Boston's first team, comprising Percy B. Haughton and Phillip Stockton, were overwhelmingly beaten by George Brooke and John McGlinn in three straight games, 15—7, 15—10, 15—13. Boston's second team scored only two of the five games of the match.

Killifer of Phils Signs.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 3.—Catcher William Killifer today signed a contract with the Philadelphia Nationals. Pitcher Kantlehner, who came to the Phillies from Pittsburgh last fall, was released to Indianapolis.

Don't take our word for it—Reason it out yourself why experience demands light weight.



There are two ways you may get first-hand information as to why the trend today is towards light weight.

One way is to buy a heavy car and find just how expensive the upkeep is. The other way is to know the kind of car the man who discards a heavy car is looking for.

Then you will understand the whys and wherefores back of the popularity of light weight.

Invariably the search for a fine light-weight car leads to the Franklin—the only light-weight car with proven records of unusual economy for gasoline, tires and oil.

A Franklin Owner sticks to the Franklin Car, not alone for economy, but because scientific light weight carries with it safety, reliability and comfort.

Again we say—don't take our word for this. You are probably a car owner yourself—or, perhaps, are acquainted with several motorists and can verify the truth of this statement.

We merely suggest that you go thoroughly into this matter of scientific light weight before investing in any car—including the Franklin.

GLEN VIEW GUNNERS DEFEAT SOUTH SHORE IN RESHOOT OF TIE

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Glen View Golf club won [illegible] to first honors in the second shoot [illegible] year of the Country Club league in a fifty bird shootoff on their own [illegible] yesterday. They totaled 216 to [illegible] pigeons for South Shore. The two teams tied in the second competition of the league this year on Feb. 24, with totals of 434 for the five high men.

As a result of Glen View's victory yesterday a triple tie deadlocks [illegible], South Shore, and Glen View with [illegible] points each. Chicago Yacht club, fourth member of the circuit, is last with two. The clubs will hold two more shoots this year.

South Shore Loses Sweepstakes.

A sweepstakes between members of the four clubs in the league was shot in connection with the fifty target shootoff yesterday. This resulted in South Shore club men getting the lowest score of the birds, for which they were [illegible] to pay dinner checks for the field. The [illegible] bird event was shot at distance handicaps. In the fifty target shootoff the contestants were at sixteen yards. Scores:

Women Shooters High.

Mrs. H. C. Snodgrass and Mrs. R. C. Millen, competing at the Lincoln park traps, averaged higher scores than the field of men shooters yesterday. The twenty-five bird events and a dozen pair of doubles were shot, but murky weather kept scores down. Mrs. Millen cracked twenty clay birds at sixteen yards and the same number at eighteen yards. Mrs. Snodgrass broke nineteen at sixteen yards, eighteen at eighteen, and thirteen at the maximum distance of twenty yards. High scores:

25 birds, 16 yards—H. Otter, 23; J. B. Crawford, 23; R. R. Palmer, 22; C. G. Burmeister, 22; Mrs. Millen, 20; Mrs. Snodgrass, 19.

25 birds, 18 yards—J. Ryan, 25; W. [illegible] 24; H. Otter, 23; C. Burmeister, 2[illegible]; R. Millen, 22; Mrs. Millen, 20; G. [illegible]; Mrs. Snodgrass, 18.

NEW PRESIDENT NEEDED TO SAVE PLAYERS' FRAT

Union and Magnates May Come to Terms if Dave Fultz Steps Out.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Whether or not the failure of the baseball players' so-called strike results in the disbanding of their fraternity depends largely on the players themselves. The best chance for its continuation lies in the retirement voluntarily of President Fultz, whose attitude of antagonism toward the club owners has not prevented the organization from gaining numerous concessions of benefit to the players. These "demands" have been granted because they were recognized as reasonable, not through any fear of President Fultz or his organization. The "demands" that have been refused were admittedly unreasonable by the majority of the intelligent players.

Fultz's last attempt to compel the major leagues to coerce the minors into a concession that would have put some of the smaller circuits out of business was bound to fail.

Magnates Object to Fultz.

Although the club owners and the various league executives are on record as refusing to recognize the fraternity as a body and determined to deal with the players individually, that attitude is the result of the antagonism Fultz has inspired. While I have no authority to speak for any one and, in fact, am writing this a thousand miles away from any source of inside information, it is my firm belief the club owners would favor the recognition and existence of a players' organization if properly officered and conducted.

The choice of any experienced player, active or retired, in whom the athletes and the club owners could have confidence would renew friendly relations between the fraternity and the capitalists of the game. This is no attempt to suggest the proper individual for the job. There are plenty of them if the players will exercise wisdom in his selection.

He need not know a thing about law, if only he is on the level. In fact, long experience has demonstrated that the law as administered by the average court of justice, and baseball don't mix worth a darn. The national commission has been known to violate some of the sacred canons of civil law in order to do justice in a baseball case, especially when a smart crook has tried to put something over on a ball player or a club owner.

No Place on Commission.

Actual representation on the national commission, long sought by the fraternity, is not a probability, and is of doubtful wisdom, but there is no reason why the players cannot obtain for the asking a voice in all cases that involve the rights of players. Such a player as the fraternity needs for its president would be welcome to go before the national commission at any of its meetings and state his views personally or to present a case in writing at any time. He would find himself welcome because there would be mutual confidence existing.

If some retired major leaguer were made president of the players' organization and made his headquarters in Cincinnati, for instance, he could be in daily touch with the chairman of the national commission, and need not even employ a stenographer to prepare his briefs. He could deliver them orally by simply walking into the front door of the commission's offices and asking to see Garry Herrmann.

Strife Hurts Game.

The attitude of the players toward the "supreme court," as fostered by President Fultz has been harmful to the sport and to the players. They have been made to believe they could not obtain justice without demanding it with sufficient show of force to compel a hearing. A concrete illustration came to my personal knowledge recently.

A player of no great reputation was complaining about a raw deal that had been given him. I asked if he could prove his statements either in writing or by witnesses. He could produce written proofs, so I asked why he had not presented his case to the commission. He believed it would do no good, as he had heard the commission never gave a player a chance.

Finally I asked him if the next time he was in Chicago he would go with me to Ban Johnson's office and tell his story to that member of the commission. He promised half heartedly and I had to urge him later to keep his promise. He thought it useless and feared it might do him harm by prejudicing his club owners against him, although the club to which he then belonged was not implicated in the matter at all.

Wins Case Without Fight.

When he finally was persuaded to tell his story President Johnson merely asked if he would make affidavit to the truth of the facts he had stated and, without asking for the written proofs, presented the case to the national commission, which decided in the player's favor on the strength of his sworn statement.

Junior Baseball League to Meet on Tuesday Night

Chicago's amateur baseball leagues are lining up their clubs. The Chicago Junior Baseball league, the largest organization in the city, will hold its first meeting Tuesday night at the Briggs house, the league's headquarters. Last year 100 teams were affiliated, and the enrollment this season promises to be even heavier. Several men prominent in local diamond circles will speak at the meeting. Managers of teams are invited. The meeting will be called at 8 p. m.

RED SOX EARLY BIRDS START FROM BOSTON FOR SOUTHERN CAMP

Boston, Mass., March 3.—The first squad of the Boston American league club left today for the training camp at Hot Springs, Ark. The party, which included Harold Janvrin, Olaf Henriksen, Fred Wilder, and Trainer Charles Green, was joined by Manager John J. Barry at Worcester. Several players will be picked up en route.

Thirteen Reds Start South.

Cincinnati, O., March 3.—Thirteen members of the Cincinnati Nationals, in charge of Manager Christy Mathewson, left today for the training camp at Shreveport, La. They will be joined en route by Pitcher Fred Toney and Catcher Ivy Wingo. The other players will go direct from their homes to the camp. Seventeen days will be spent at Shreveport.

Tigers on Way South.

Detroit, Mich., March 3.—Five members of the Detroit American league club, with club officials and newspaper men, left tonight for the training camp at Waxahachie, Tex. Several players will join the party at St. Louis. Coveleskie, James, and Boland, pitchers, and McKee and Yelle, catchers, composed the local squad.

Tigers Leave for Texas.

Detroit, Mich., March 3.—The Tiger squad headed for Waxahachie, Tex., spring headquarters tonight. Only five players—Coveleskie, James, and Boland, pitchers, and McKee and Yelle, catchers—traveled in the first contingent. At St. Louis Dauss, Cunningham, Dyer, and Jimmie Burke will join the party. The others will report later. First practice is scheduled for Tuesday.

Browns and Cards on Way.

St. Louis, Mo., March 3.—The St. Louis American and National league teams departed on the same train tonight for training quarters. The Americans are bound for Palestine, Tex., and the Nationals for Hot Wells, Tex., near San Antonio. Doak and Betzel of the Cardinals were the only regulars missing.

Offer Army Semipro Parks; Capt. Kenney Helps League

Capt. Franklin R. Kenney, U. S. A., chief recruiting officer in the Chicago district, yesterday accepted a position on the advisory board of the Chicago Baseball league, the new semi-pro circuit. He will act with Charles W. Murphy and Jake Stahl, fellow committeemen, whenever the independents require his assistance. Several years ago Capt. Kenney, then a lieutenant, organized the local United States army team, composed of the best players in the service. The soldiers made quite a showing, but were compelled to disband when Mexican developments became serious. The league committee then informed Capt. Kenney that every park in the circuit was at his disposal for use as a drill ground or for any purpose he might deem advisable. This offer was accepted. The parks, situated in different sections of the city, would be of immense value for training purposes. The league's by-laws and constitution will be tentatively drafted at a meeting of the park owners at the Hotel La Salle this afternoon.

What!! Tax a Golf Course? Court Will Decide in April

BY JOE DAVIS.

A case of much interest to the golf clubs of Illinois and to many in other states is now before the Supreme court of Illinois. When the village of Forest Park in August, 1916, passed an ordinance regulating and licensing golf grounds and tried to impose a license fee of $750 for a period of one year on the Harlem golf course, Mrs. Mary A. Condon, executrix of John Condon, obtained an injunction in the Circuit court of Cook county.

Judge Jesse A. Baldwin, in overruling the demurrer and allowing the injunction, ruled that the game of golf is a commendable form of recreation and is not an "exhibition," "show," or "amusement," in the sense in which those words are used in the statute. He also pointed out that the only amusements recognized by the Supreme court as being within police power are theatrical amusements and horse racing.

Expect Decision Next Month.

From this decision the village of Forest Park appealed to the Supreme court, and a decision is looked for at the April term of the court.

Arthur M. Cox of Judah, Willard, Wolf & Reichman, representing the appellee, in defining the scope of the ordinance, points out that it clearly applies to, and evidently is intended to apply to, all golf grounds or links, whether operated by a club or association, or by an individual, and whether the right to use the links is restricted to a limited membership or whether the right to indulge in the recreation is extended to persons who pay a daily fee for the privilege, as in the case of the Harlem club.

It is clearly an attempt to license for the purposes of revenue, golf courses of every kind, and if the ordinance is valid an ordinance similar in character could be enacted by any village or city in Illinois, and possibly in other states.

160 Courses in State.

There are approximately 160 courses in this state and with the exception of those of a public character all would be liable to contribute to the upkeep of the village boards. Moreover, it would be possible for the village board to fix the amount of the fee and make it considerably higher than that fixed by the village of Forest Park. Many clubs would be unable to stand such license fees.

Mr. Cox makes a strong point when he asserts that the effect of such ordinance would interfere and restrict that recreation and instead of promoting the health and wellbeing of the people, a thing every enlightened modern government is endeavoring to do, such ordinances would have the contrary effect.

Mr. Cox is a devotee of the ancient and honorable game, but modestly admits his chief claim to skill arises from his Scotch ancestry.

Surely, Some Regret.

In championing the cause of the game he regrets it is impossible to call on aid from the chief executive of our nation, a former chief executive, the chief justice, and associate justices of the Supreme court of the United States, statesmen, jurists, ex-judges, barristers, attorneys general, counsel, solicitors, and attorneys.

What a flood of eloquence they could liberate. We might also throw in as reserve forces John T. McCutcheon, Clare Briggs, and Ring Lardner.

After citing a number of cases bearing on amusements on which decisions have been rendered, Mr. Cox says the amusements enumerated are so dissimilar to a harmless recreation, like golf, which, to use the words of the late Judge Gary, furnishes "an entertainment as innocent as Arcadian simplicity ever enjoyed."

Not Within Its Power?

Further, he asserts that the general assembly when it passed "an act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages" in 1872 could not have intended it to apply to golf, which was not known here at that time, and that in seeking to tax the Harlem club for golf the village of Forest Park is giving the act an application never dreamed of at the time it was passed.

Mr. Cox has driven his arguments effectively, possibly more so than he could drive a golf ball. He has made his final putt and so has the village of Forest Park. The cards are in the hands of the court.

Olin to Be Headliner at Next Coliseum Show

John Olin, who won a referee's decision over Joe Stecher in a wrestling show down east, will appear at the next Coliseum mat show on March 12. A strong opponent will be secured for Olin. Charley Cutler and Mike Yokel will be on the card.

Holthoefer Beats Lawrie for Trophy at Curling

H. J. Holthoefer won the cup presented by Capt. Ratigan of the Seventh regiment to the Chicago Curling club, defeating Robert Lawrie, 11 to 9. Holthoefer's rink won the team competition for the cup and then played down to decide the individual winner. Holthoefer defeated Bob Wood, 11 to 8, and J. McLean, 11 to 9, and then won from Lawrie.

Fourth division—Rangers at Atlas; Sellers at Primrose; Fram II. at Union; Conroy at Praha.

The match between the Corinthians and Pullman professionals has been called off on account of wet grounds. International Harvesters will play Lincoln Park at Forty-eighth avenue and Sixteenth street. All games start at 2:30 o'clock.

EVANSTON HIGH AND LAKE VIEW GET EVEN BREAK

Suburbanites Take Senior Track Event, but Lose Junior.

BY OTTO ENGEL.

Evanston High and Lake View shared honors in a pair of dual meets at Patten gymnasium yesterday, the suburbanites taking the senior event, 53 to 37, while the Ravenswood preps carried off the junior affair, 39 to 28. The prowess of Figus has much to do with Lake View's showing in the senior events, as he won three firsts out of four. Young, Lake View, was another star with a first, second, and two thirds, good for ten points, but the consistent Evanstonians picked up enough points to win with their well balanced performers.

Evans and Rawlins of Lake View totaled ten units apiece in the junior meet, and these two point winners ran in the relay, proving the main factors in the victory. Brandt of Evanston was best in the field events, taking the shot put and triple jump and landing second in the high jump for a total of thirteen points. Summaries:

SENIOR MEET.

50 yard dash—Won by Young, Lake View; Lee, L. V., second; Wilson, Ev., third. Time, :05 4-5.

BADGER SKATERS DEFEAT PURPLE IN HOCKEY GAME

Wisconsin Beats Dentists in Series by Landing 5 to 3 Victory.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

In a tense game of alternate rallies Wisconsin last night won its second victory over the ice hockey squad of the dental school representing Northwestern university, capturing the series of three games. The score was 5 goals to 3. The game was played at White City ice rink.

Each team counted once in the opening half. With the final half drawing to a close Moran and Grieve stirred a select crowd of forty Badger rooters by working the ball in dashes to the Northwestern goal, and each scored a goal. A band and a couple hundred supporters rooted for the Purple, whose defense was a feature. Lineup:

Wisconsin [5].		Northw'n [3].
Pribnow	Center	Gunnarson
Stanbury	Left wing	Ballard
Moran, Dohr	Right wing	Gardiner
Grieve	Rover	Layng [capt.]
Evans	Cover point	Lockwood
Fee	Point	Wright
Johnson [c.]	Goal	Hurton

Goals—Moran [3], Pribnow, Grieve, Ballard, Layng, Gunnarson. Referee—Allen, Winnipeg.

Set Two New Records in New England Meet

Boston, Mass., March 3.—Two meet records were made at the New England A. A. U. indoor track championships tonight. Henry F. Mahoney of the Boston Athletic association lowered the time for the 1,000 yard run to 2:19 4-5. The second record was made by another B. A. A. runner, when J. W. Ryan led a fast field over the line in the senior two mile run in 9:40 4-5.

The other senior champions are T. L. Preble, Boston A. A., 60 yard high hurdles; T. F. Burke, Holy Cross, 600 yard run; J. C. Lawlor, B. A. A., 16 pound shot put; A. R. Doyle, Holy Cross, 300 yard run; Walter Whalen, B. A. A., high jump.

Doran Offers His Yacht to U. S. Naval Forces

Commodore Robert L. Doran of the Columbia Yacht club has tendered his services and the use of his yacht Katherine to the United States naval forces in case of war. His boat is of a type that could be used for patrol duty along the coast in case of emergency. He believes that of the sixty or seventy yachts about Chicago that qualify for patrol duty at least thirty-five or forty will be offered to the government if war comes. He also asserts that at least 250 of Chicago's amateur tars will volunteer for the navy if necessary.

ZIMMERMANN'S LETTER.

It does not help American pride any to entertain even the suspicion that the Zimmermann note was intended to come into the possession of the American government. We do not believe that it was, but the suspicion that it might have been forces itself forward.

There are superficial aspects of naivety about it which do not suggest even ordinary diplomatic procedure. It went forth like an innocent lamb, into a strange world, and came to grief at the first turn of the road.

We presume that the suspicion is unjustified, but it is with considerable chagrin that we admit the suspicion at all. To be obliged to consider for a moment that Germany raised a pumpkin head to alarm a nation and deter it from war is to be obliged to consider what opinion may be held of the United States.

It is not flattering to think that any nation could consider a project which would involve the recovery by Mexico of her "lost provinces." That joke lacks a laugh. It hurts. It reveals a conception of American weakness which has no jest in it—and the thorned satire would be found in a German intent to have this little warning come to American knowledge, an intent based upon the belief that a suggestion of such a danger would alter American policy.

No matter what the intent may have been back of the Zimmermann document, it is a significant warning to the American people. If Germany in seriousness attempted to form an alliance against the United States she was following the sane rule which ought to govern a nation in dealing with an enemy. If we call it treachery we make ourselves foolish to the mirror. If we indulge in an emotional demonstration of rhetoric about it we belittle ourselves. It would be the proper and practical thing for Germany to do if it could be done. To mouth our indignation and not to act would be to reach the nadir of American folly.

And that is some nadir.

THE SIXTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

Last night the village trustees voted to buy a fire engine.

This extraordinary step was decided on after it was learned that a fire had started in the lumber yard. There is a high wind and the fire is threatening to spread over the town.

The engine will be delivered to the village authorities in not less than three months. A volunteer fire company will be organized when it arrives.

Nearly three years after the European conflagration began congress has passed a half billion naval appropriation. It takes about three years to build a battleship.

The president, it is reported with every evidence of accuracy, does not regard measures for an adequate army as necessary at this time.

Does this express responsible government in the world's greatest republic?

REAL POLITIK AND SENTIMENTALISM.

Our government announces that it wants nothing more for the United States than it wants for all humanity. That is not true. It could not be true, but it impresses Americans as a truth.

Germany stays close to the idea that it wants a great deal more for Germany than it desires for any other organized section of humanity. Its place in the sun represents material advantage for which Germany is willing to fight.

If we were deluded merely as to ourselves the damage might not be so great, but when we are deluded as to Germany and Japan, for instance, the danger is very great. Germany and Japan are two nations which form policies upon realities. Americans try to form policies upon emotions and illusions.

The danger of a conflict between a nation which recognizes its material needs and one which imagines itself superior to them may be greater than the danger of conflict between two nations which accept realities as realities. In the latter case the dangers of misunderstanding are eliminated.

To people who become emotional before they give themselves a chance to be thoughtful, the real politik of the Germans is almost as hateful as schrecklichkeit. To the German mind a nation which says that it is not seeking and will not seek its material advancement is either hypocritical or too timid to make a sacrifice and take a benefit.

If Americans understood the forces which have made this a great republic, they would not fail so completely to understand that danger may come to it from other nations which completely understand how these forces work, recognize their existence, and are entirely willing to employ them if the opportunity is presented.

The damage we do the nation in ignoring reality and indulging in sentimentalism, obscuring our motives for the sake of a noble glow, is found in the failure to guard ourselves against danger.

If we were not so engrossed in the contemplation of our own virtues and so devoted to the pleasures of hating real politik and its methods we would take precautions. Loose thinking, failure to perceive and think at all, put us in a fool's paradise.

If the German nation is governed by material ideas of advancement and gain, that is a fact to recognize rather than hate. We hate it and at the same time try not to recognize it. At least we refuse to adjust ourselves to the fact or be warned by it or guided by it.

If Japan is a nation which keeps its practical needs in consideration, it is not our business to be morally horrified that such ideas can prevail, but to see that they are not applied against us.

A war of self-interest need not be ignoble. It may represent the noblest sort of sacrifice—that of the parent for the child. How any American who knows how the people beginning as a fringe on the Atlantic seaboard of this country went across mountains and plains and pushed all opposing peoples, white and red, out of their way, can fail to understand real politik is astonishing.

CONSCRIPTION AND DEMOCRACY.

A defense system which in a democracy employs universal military service is free from the objection that preparation is provocation. The pacifist assumption is the contrary. It does not suit the pacifist purpose to consider the facts.

The American republic is not ruled—and it is difficult to imagine how it could be ruled—by a military caste. Where could the caste get its power? Would it be powerful politically? Could a few brigadiers, colonels, or captains, with noncommissioned officers as precinct workers, carry a congressional district? Would they have any influence with the politicians who can carry districts? A war party in the United States would be as popular as Billy Sunday in a brewery.

Under universal service the army and the people would be one. The army would have no incentive to war which the people would not have. Military proficiency would not be military professionalism. A corps of military professionals is needed in the universal system, but it does not control the system. Certain officers must make it their profession constantly to study the operations of war, but their influence is absorbed by the influence of a militarily trained civil life.

The man who is a reserve officer, but who is in civil life as a lawyer, physician, or business man, is no more anxious to break down his civil pursuits, his domesticity, and his pleasant daily routine than he would be if he were without the training which would make him available as an officer if he were needed. He has no more desire to go to war. He simply is fitted for emergency if it comes.

Men trained and regimented, with their arms waiting them and with knowledge of the use of arms, are not the more willing to cease being carpenters and lawyers, brickmasons and grocers, clerks and teamsters, merchants and farmers than they would be if they were not trained and regimented.

Opposition to universal military service will not accept the fact that popular opinion in a nation which cannot support a dominant military caste is not changed by changing the citizen from a condition of ignorance in the use of arms to a condition of knowledge.

This change does not involve a change in the desire of the citizenship and consequently it does not involve a change in public opinion. For that reason in a democracy the adoption of universal service is not a provocative.

If a powerful, politically powerful, military class sought to impose universal service upon this country the pacifist might say that the purpose was to obtain the strength with which to undertake military enterprises for the sake of military ambitions.

An autocracy controlled by dynastic egotism might conscript unwilling subjects and force them into wars. This is the conception of conscription which makes it odious in the opinion of a democracy which hates compulsion and which has not yet been able to see that when a democracy compels it merely compels the least willing elements in its composition to do what it expects the best in its organization to do in time of need.

By not compelling and by not instilling in the minds of its citizens the idea of compulsion where there is unwillingness to face an obligation, it increases the burdens of the very men whose sacrifices it honors, but whose efforts it will not make effective or support.

It asks its best men and women to do extraordinary things in the very worst circumstances for their own security and calls this procedure just.

THE COLOMBIA TREATY.

There may be no intent to nail Roosevelt's ears to the post in the demand of the administration that Colombia be given, as salve for its injured dignity, $15,000,000 as payment for the loss of Panama. It would be extraordinary to pursue such a policy for so long a time. Roosevelt cannot be hurt by such proceedings, but the United States may be.

Colombia has no more claim upon the United States than a blackmailer would have. A compromise will be a compromise with a nation which tried to defeat the honest purposes of the United States. This nation was patient in its endeavors to deal in generous fairness with Colombia. The answer to that endeavor was expressed in duplicity and greed.

By compromising we not only suggest that such methods are the proper ones to use in dealing with the United States, but we should supply a country, already rated as hostile, with money to use against us in further hostilities.

If our $15,000,000 built submarine bases for an attack on the canal, we could consider it a very wise expenditure of our money, indeed.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel.]

A survey of American education does not disclose much evidence of a controlling desire to promote patriotic service.—Dean James E. Russell.

An excellent reason why that education should be supplemented by the term of compulsory military training that the Chamberlain bill proposes for every service-fit American youth on reaching the age of 19.

On that point, says an American whom we all delight to honor—Gen. George W. Goethals:

"Universal military training will do this for the United States: It will raise the moral and physical tone of the nation, it will develop the individual, it will create a sense of duty and responsibility, it will instill respect for lawful authority, and give birth to a feeling of nationalism instead of sectionalism which still exists. Finally, by training the son of the millionaire alongside the son of the laborer, it will make democracy a living thing."

For many an American college bred youth that six months of intensive training on a democratic, manhood equality footing will be of far more physical, moral, social, and disciplinary value than his whole college course; and if he has imbibed any nonsense of snobbery and effeminacy from his college course six months in the training camp will take it out of him. Getting together on an equal footing for public service, the "son of the millionaire" and the "son of the laborer" will, unless one or other is born with an incurable kink, reach a mutual good understanding and a sense of human brotherhood "under the skin" that will serve them and the community through life. And it will help make a nation of us by developing what we so largely still lack: the national consciousness.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

LADY ANGELA FORBES, after all the extraordinary vicissitudes she has undergone, may be congratulated on having secured for her pretty daughter, Marigold Forbes, one of the greatest catches in the matrimonial market in the person of Capt. Edward Robert Compton of the Scots Greys, twice wounded in the present war and eldest son of the late Lord Alwyne Compton, for he is next heir to the honors and vast estates of his unmarried cousin, the Marquis of Northampton.

He is also in the line of succession to the great wealth and estates of his mother's father, the late Robert Vyner. The latter left them to his widowed daughter, Lady Alwyne Compton, directing that at her death they should go to her younger son, Clare Compton, a midshipman in the royal navy, now on active service, on the understanding that he should assume the name and arms of Vyner in lieu of those of Compton. In the event of his death all the Vyner property will go to the young man's elder brother, Capt. Edward Compton of the Scots Greys, the future Marquis of Northampton.

Lady Angela Forbes is a sister of the Dowager Duchess of Sutherlnad and of the late Lady Westmoreland, as well as a half-sister of Lady Warwick and of Lady Algernon Gordon-Lennox. She is often confused with Lady Helen Forbes, who has achieved some note with her pen. Whereas, however, Lady Helen is a sister of Lord Craven and her husband is Ian Forbes, late of the Gordon Highlanders, Lady Angela is a sister of Lord Rosslyn and the divorced wife of Col. James Forbes of Newe.

It is only fair to say that the dissolution of the marriage between James Forbes and Lady Angela was entirely due to monetary troubles and to the quarrels and difficulties resulting therefrom. Lady Angela has little or no idea of the value of money, and it is perhaps owing to this that she has failed in so many of her undertakings, including that of a flower shop in George street, Portman Square. The words "My Shop" were inscribed over the doorway. Lady Angela has not married again, and, though no longer the wife of James Forbes, meets him frequently on the most friendly footing in society.

Prince Paolo Camporeale, who, according to cable dispatches from Rome just received, is implicated, along with several other members of the senate, in the impeachment of Senator Mangille for treason, has all along been strongly pro-German, and was the object of a hostile demonstration on the part of his fellow legislators in the senate at Rome two years ago owing to his failure to stand up with the others to receive the address from Prime Minister Salandra announcing that Italy had decided to join the powers of the triple entente against Germany and Austria.

It is therefore not surprising that the prince, who is also Duke of Adragna, should be identified with so notoriously a pro-German as Senator Mangille, president of the Italian Commercial bank, which was created prior to the war with German capital in order to promote and develop Italy's economic dependence upon Germany. There are seventy-four distinct charges of treason against Mangille.

Prince Camporeale possesses a greater amount of interest for people on this side of the Atlantic than the others concerned in the affair owing to the fact of his having an American wife. He spent a number of years in the United States as secretary of the Italian legation at Washington and while here contracted a marriage at Burlington, N. J., with Florence, daughter of John Binney of Boston, divorced wife of Thomas Kingsland of New York.

Owing to his stay in New York and to his having married an American, the prince, who is a man of diminutive stature, has always been regarded at Rome as an expert about American affairs, and took a leading part in securing from his government its participation in the world's fairs of Chicago and of St. Louis.

Brother of Princess Buelow, whose husband was the former chancellor of the German empire and the kaiser's ambassador at Rome at the outbreak of the war, Camporeale's youth was of a stormy description. As an attaché and secretary in the Italian diplomatic service he was not precisely a source of satisfaction to his chiefs. In fact, his escapades, especially while stationed at Tokio, were of such a nature that he would undoubtedly have received his walking papers had it not been for the fact that he was the stepson of old Marco Minghetti, the celebrated Italian statesman and premier.

Like his sister, Princess Buelow, Camporeale has through his mother a strong strain of English blood in his veins, for Donna Laura's maiden name was Acton, and she was a member of that historic English house of Acton which is one of the oldest in Shropshire. It figured prominently in the reign of Edward III., received a baronetcy from Charles I. and for the last 300 years has always had foreign affiliations.

John Acton was admiral in chief of the imperial German navy in the early part of the eighteenth century and his nephew, Joseph Acton, was a general in the service of the king of Naples and became his prime minister.

This Gen. Joseph Acton had a son named Charles, who became admiral of the Neapolitan navy and who left an extraordinarily numerous family. Four of his sons, William, Ferdinand, Emeric, and Gustave, attained flag rank as admirals, either in the Neapolitan or Italian navy, and two of them served in turn as Italian ministers of marine.

Their only sister was the late Donna Laura Minghetti.

She was engaged in her early girlhood to the late Lord Granville, but she jilted him for the sake of Prince Domenico Camporeale, and thereupon he married instead a relative of hers, the widow of Sir Ferdinand Acton, daughter and heiress of the last Duke of Dalberg and grandmother through her first husband of the present and second Lord Acton of the English diplomatic service.

DYSPEPSIA.

A SURVEY of letters received at this department does not indicate that the American is a dyspeptic. Two generations ago the classical American was long-legged and bony. He was nervous and suffered from dyspepsia. The general saying was that he ate fried food and drank raw whisky and, therefore, had indigestion. By reason of his indigestion he became nervous, irritable, and crochety.

I do not know that the classical picture was correct. In that day we were drifting without any effort at statistical inquiry and whatever the European said about us we had to stand. We had no knowledge of the facts. If we were a thin, dyspeptic, and nervous people it is just as likely as not that the order of events was the reverse of what it was said to be or that we were nervous—therefore, we were dyspeptic; therefore we were thin.

The American of this generation is overweight. The cartoons drawn by our overseas cousins represent the typical American as having "fair round belly and good capon lined." However it may have been in the middle of the last century, dyspepsia is not the most frequent complaint among Americans today. Possibly a good part of this reduction is due to a better knowledge of what is not dyspepsia.

The stomach is one of the few organs in the abdomen capable of causing symptoms. In consequence, there are stomach symptoms caused by such widely unrelated causes as constipation, appendicitis, kidney disease, ulcer of the duodenum, cancer of the liver, gall-stones, disease of the gall bladder, and disease of the pancreas.

In olden times it was not customary to discriminate between these different causes. Every complaint which caused stomach symptoms was called dyspepsia and some form of dyspepsia medicine was taken for it. Of those who write to this department about dyspepsia it is evident in a majority of cases that the cause is elsewhere. At that, however, there are cases of dyspepsia or difficult digestion.

The stomach is a large dilatation of the digestive tube located just beyond the point where the tube enters the abdomen. The food is broken up and mixed with saliva in the mouth. It passes across the air tract in the region called the pharynx located at the back of the mouth. From here it passes down the esophagus into the stomach.

The stomach is located on the left side of the abdomen high up, under the ribs and well above the navel. Its right end is about in the middle line. Its length is from ten to eleven inches, its greatest diameter four and one-half inches, and its capacity is one quart. These are the dimensions of the stomach of a full grown person. The stomach of a newly born baby is not as large as a hen's egg and it holds about two tablespoonfuls of milk.

That part of the stomach lying to the left and near the opening through the diaphram is called the cardiac end. The portion to the right is called the pyloric portion. The strong circular muscle which encircles the tube at its right end is called the pyloric sphincter.

The stomach consists essentially of two functionary structures—a strong muscle and a lining in which are the stomach glands. Some other structures present are to serve the more important structures. The left end of the stomach is called the cardiac portion—that to the right. It is well to know this division, since the work of the two portions is somewhat different.

The short, sharp curve reaching from the region on the left where the esophagus enters to the pyloric ring on the right is known as the lesser curvature. The large border which swings to the left from the esophagus to form the left border then curves to the right and downward, and then on to the right and upward to the pylorus is known as the greater curvature.

The stomach is rather firmly fixed at the esophageal entrance and also at the pylorus. It is suspended between these two fixed points. If the stomach sags or is displaced, it distends downward and slightly to the right by a pouching process. The fixed points at the esophagus and at the pylorus—and in some measure the entire lesser curvature—remain in their proper positions.

The function of the stomach is to break up the food, physically, to put some of it in solution, some of it in suspension to start the moistening dissolving process generally and to begin digestion. The principal digestive work is to convert proteins into peptones. This is done by the simultaneous action of two substances secreted by the stomach glands—hydrochloric acid and pepsin. The object of the hydrochloric acid is to acidulate the stomach contents in order that the pepsin may convert the albumin into peptones. This is the first step in digestion of porteins.

In addition to acids and pepsin the stomach glands secrete rennet—a substance which causes milk to coagulate. This is a preliminary stage in the digestion of the protein of milk.

The more important function of the stomach is its mechanical work. In it the foods are mixed together and to a certain extent solid particles are broken into smaller pieces. In this work the stomach is complemented to the teeth. The birds, having no teeth, swallow their food unbroken, and the great, thick walled stomach called the gizzard breaks it up, macerates it, and starts to digest it.

In animals which possess teeth the motor function is less important and, therefore, the stomach wall is not as thick as the gizzard wall, but, nevertheless, the muscle is the more important part of the stomcah wall in the human subject.

In the digestion of starches and sweets the stomach has little part. Starch digestion which has been started in the mouth is at a standstill while the food is in the stomach. It is resumed and completed in the intestines. Sugar passes through the stomach unchanged. Fats are prepared for absorption in the small intestines. They pass through the stomach unchanged.

When water is drunk, instead of emptying into the great stomach cavity, it runs in a groove along the lesser curvature of the stomach from the esophagus to the pylorus. When milk is drunk, it is coagulated in the stomach and its digestion is begun by the gastric juice.

Proteins—for example, lean meat—are started on their digestive changes by the gastric juice, but the process is completed in the small intestine.

When food is undergoing digestion in the stomach it lies in the great cavity toward the cardiac end. As it finishes the stage of stomach digestion it is moved over toward the pyloric portion. It is pushed against the pyloric muscle and then pushed back again until such time as it is in condition to pass into the small intestine, whereupon the pyloric ring opens and permits its discharge. The emptying never takes place at once. It is always intermittent, just as is swallowing.

The length of time which food remains in the stomach varies. Water passes through in a few minutes. If the stomach be not distended, if the food be well broken up, and if it be easily digested, the load is emptied into the intestine in two or three hours. After the food has been passed into the intestine a small residuum—less than an ounce—of juice, mucus, and a little gas remain in the stomach.

Hunger is due to rhythmical contraction of the stomach muscle. Appetite is due to a desire for food greatly modified by memory of taste and smell. In other words, the stomach is largely responsible for hunger, the mind for appetite.

These are about all the essential points for stomach digestion. They sum up about as follows—the food stays in the stomach longer than in any other twelve inches of the intestinal tract except in the large intestine. The stomach starts the digestion of one food element only. Other food elements are not digested. Its contents, being acid bacteria, do not multiply or thrive therein. There is little absorption from the stomach. The food is mixed in the stomach.

On the basis of these facts there is not much ground for dyspepsia. There is not much more reason for expecting digestion to go wrong in this ten inches of the digestive tube than for expecting the process to go wrong in some ten inches of the esophagus or of the small intestine.

The usual symptoms of dyspepsia may be and usually are due to trouble in some other part of the tube. Belching may be due in part to dyspepsia. Some air is swallowed with the food. If the stomach is irritable this air may be belched up. A small amount of gas may be produced by bacterial action, and especially by yeast action in the stomach. Some gas may pass from the small intestine into the stomach and be belched up. But much the greater part of the gas belched up is air that has been swallowed, not with the food but as a separate act. However, some discomfort in the stomach or referred to the stomach from the gall bladder, duodenum, or appendix is generally responsible for the desire to swallow air.

A sense of distension or pressure after eating is probably the most frequent symptom of dyspepsia. This symptom may result from overdistension of the stomach or from weakness of the muscle wall. It may be and usually is due to constipation and the consequent distension of the large intestine with gas and intestinal content.

In the space between the navel and the ribs is packed a considerable part of the large intestine, some of the small intestine, a part of the liver, the gall bladder, and the stomach. A distended large intestine crowds the stomach. The feeling of distension may be due to trouble with the gall bladder or even appendix trouble.

Another symptom of dyspepsia is nausea and vomiting. These symptoms sometimes mean dyspepsia, particularly in alcoholics, but three times out of five they mean trouble somewhere else than in the stomach. Nausea and vomiting may result from trouble in the gall bladder, the duodenum, other parts of the intestine, or in the appendix.

Another somewhat infrequent symptom of dyspepsia is pain. The possibility, however, is that pain in the stomach is due to disease in the gall bladder or duodenum. If it is due to disease in the stomach the probability is that the disease is not dyspepsia but is ulcer or cancer.

A chronically coated tongue is usually given as a sign of dyspepsia. It is just as liable to be a sign of constipation or trouble anywhere in the intestines.

Most of the persons who think they have dyspepsia have something else. Some have cancer, some ulcer, some duodenal ulcer, some gall bladder infection, some chronic appendicitis, some constipation, some are merely nervous, and some suffer from periodic overeating. In these the condition is not continuous. It merely follows a debauch.

PROBABLY FIBROMA.

L. W. D. writes: "I had a medical examination two years ago and was told by the doctor that I had a small growth in the womb. I have been to the doctor again within the last week and he said that it is just the same size. Do you think it will grow in later years and should I have an operation? Will an operation prevent child bearing in after years? I am a woman of 25 years and married, but have never had a child owing to my condition of health."

REPLY.

A small tumor which, at the end of two years, had not increased in size is probably a fibroma. Fibromas generally get larger later in life. Fibromas can be removed by X-rays given off from a hard tube. They can be cured by operation. Neither small fibromas nor operations for small fibromas nor X-rays for them will prevent child bearing.

INTERNAL BATHS.

T. V. D. writes: "Please tell what is meant by an internal bath."

REPLY.

WATER MAINS FOR OLYMPIA AVENUE.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will sewer and water mains be put in Olympia avenue in the neighborhood of Avondale avenue?
READER.

An estimate for a water main for Olympia avenue, near Avondale avenue, has been prepared, and if there is no opposition the water main may be laid this coming season. There are no proceedings under way to sewer Olympia avenue. In order to obtain sewerage for the property in question I suggest that the property owners file a petition with the board of local improvements of the city of Chicago.
GEO. E. McGRATH,
Supt. Bureau of Sewers.

LAYING WATER SERVICE PIPES.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Does the city make stub connections from the main line water piper in the street to the curb or house? When will cement walks be laid on One Hundred and Fourth place, between Racine avenue and Morgan street? Is Carpenter street to be opened from One Hundred and Third street south? In subdividing a tract of land must streets and alleys be allowed for and what is the width required?
MRS. O. D.

The city does not lay water service pipes at the time the water main is built. The water service pipe [or water stub] can be constructed by private contract, however, at any time after the water main has been laid. Special assessment proceedings will be instituted for laying water service pipes as soon as conditions warrant. An ordinance was passed on Oct. 10, 1916, for a cement sidewalk on One Hundred and Fourth place, between Racine avenue and Morgan street. This work will be done during the following summer. There are no proceedings under way for opening Carpenter street from One Hundred and Third street south. If this improvement is desired a petition to that effect, signed by owners of some of the property fronting on the proposed street, should be presented to this board, which will then take action. When the owner of a tract of land desires to subdivide it he presents a plat of the proposed subdivision to the map department, which must be approved by the superintendent of maps. The subdivision must provide for sixty-six foot streets and sixteen foot alleys before it can be passed on by the superintendent of maps.
M. J. FARRELL,
President Board of Local Improvements.

TUNGSTEN LAMPS FOR LAKEWOOD AVENUE.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why are there no lights on Lakewood avenue, between Arthur and Loyola avenues?
SUBSCRIBER.

Plans have already been made for the installation of three tungsten street lamps in Lakewood avenue between Loyola and Arthur avenues.
WILLIAM G. KEITH,
Commissioner of Electricity.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Winfield, Ia., Feb. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A owes B [illegible] and takes advantage of the bankruptcy law. At the final settlement B gets nothing, as it took all of the assets to settle claims for taxes, rent, and court costs. Is B's claim still good if A ever has any property?
A. J. I.

No. Bankruptcy discharges all [illegible] debts. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WIFE TAKES ALL PERSONALTY.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A family consisting of husband, wife, and one child own a tract of land, title in husband's name. If child should die first and then the husband, without leaving a will, who would inherit the land, the wife or husband, brothers and sisters?
F. E. B.

Wife entitled to all personal property and one-half of real estate, together with a dower interest in one-third of other one-half.

VOLUNTEERS IN WAR.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Isn't it possible to advocate preparedness without hurling insults broadcast at the men who in the past have come to the defense of their country as volunteers? The editorial, "Raising an Army," is especially an arraignment of our volunteer soldiers. It says among other things, "A system certain to go to pieces in battle." I would like to call the writer's attention to Valley Forge, to the men who died with Davy Crockett, the men who marched with Sherman, to those who stormed San Juan hill and braved the jungles of the Philippines. The most of these were volunteers, and the writer would have a hard time proving that they "went to pieces under fire and hardship." I would like to ask him just where he thinks our country woud be were it not for the volunteers.

Give us preparedness, yes, but also give the honor and credit that is due them to the boys who in the absence of preparedness did their best, and what that best was the history of our country shows, far better than the slurring word of those who in the time of need would probably hide behind their unpreparedness as an excuse for not putting their precious lives in danger.
VIOLITTE JACKSON.

MONROE AND WILSON DOCTRINES.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Permit me to congratulate you heartily for the finest editorial I have read in an American newspaper yet, "Our National Danger." It is a pity that there are not more editors in this country who see the extreme dangers that this country will have to face if war is resulted.

If this country should get into conflict with Germany and join the allies, who want the United States to "take the chestnuts out of the fire," as they wanted Greece to do, then this country leaves the wise doctrine of Monroe to adopt the "Wilsonian doctrine" of regulating the world. Then I pity not only the United States but the whole western hemisphere, whose protection President Monroe wanted the United States to undertake.
GEORGE B. TRIANTAFILLOU.

SCOTCH 'EM!

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This is a day of plain speaking—of calling things by their real names. If a man takes property belonging to another without that other's consent he is a thief, if he deliberately tells an untruth he is a liar, and if he attempts to block the efforts of this country to defend its honor he is a copperhead.

Apostles of socialism like Emma Goldman, Debs, Haywood, Kennedy, and Mr. Howe arise in vociferous minority and demand that the great majority obey their wishes under threat of violence. These anarchs are so fanatically opposed to war that they threaten to go to war, to light the fires of a bloody revolution in order to prevent this country defending its life and honor.

If America would avoid the socialist hell which has destroyed Mexico it must crush the head of every snake that is raised to hiss its hatred of our American institutions.

TO PUNISH AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the interests of automobile owners the writer believes you should give considerable prominence to house bill No. 264, introduced in the state legislature by Representative [illegible], providing that no person shall buy, sell, receive, or conceal any motor vehicle with the manufacturer's serial number destroyed; and also house bill No. [illegible] which deals with the felonious taking or selling of motor vehicles.

Radical legislation and its rigid enforcement is required by the ease with which automobiles can be taken and the marks of identification upon them destroyed so that even experienced police officers and auto mechanics can hardly identify the property.

Automobile owners should get in touch with their representatives and state senators and urge the passage of these or some similar bills.

MILLIONS WHO WON'T FIGHT.

Manchester, Ia., Feb. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial on "Copperheads" is about as unfair as anything could be. Apparently your idea of patriotism is the same as that of T. R., who is more patriotic to the allies than he is to the United States, and who evidently believes the only meaning of patriotism is in taking a sword or a rifle and to fight.

Whenever you can persuade the American people that they will be fighting for their country and not for the allies or central powers, then perhaps you can find more backing for your hysterical policy. Until then you will find some millions of us who want peace—who want to be neutral.

WAR WITH GERMANY

By Edward Goldbeck

The following article by Mr. Goldbeck is timely and instructive as showing the views in reference to our international crisis now held by the bulk of our German-American population.—Editors "Tribune."

UP to the last moment—i. e., the declaration of war—to criticize the policy of the administration is an inalienable right of the citizen and in many cases it is an imperative duty. The theory that after the severance of diplomatic relations with a foreign country loyalty commands silence is unsound. As the president is only the first servant of the nation, it is all important for him to find out what the nation wants. He will never be able to inform himself as to the will of the nation if everybody thinks himself in duty bound to "stand behind the president." At least, it is senseless to call this country a democracy if we lay down such rules of conduct.

Up to the last moment, the moment of war being declared, those who think as I do will go on repeating in public and in private that war with Germany under the present conditions and on the motives put forth up to now is unnecessary, unjust, unwise, and unpopular.

WAR with Germany is unnecessary. A war is necessary when the honor of a nation is insulted and satisfaction refused or when its vital interests are threatened or damaged to such a degree that the situation seems unbearable. Neither of these reasons is existent. About a month ago Ambassador Gerard proclaimed at an official banquet in Berlin that the relations between Germany and the United States were better than they had ever been since the beginning of the war. The administration did not contradict this statement. So the conclusion is cogent that about a month ago neither was our honor insulted nor were our vital interests threatened. What has happened in the meantime? Germany has declared a war zone. Does this declaration insult our honor? Hardly. After the sinking of the Sussex the president threatened to break off diplomatic intercourse with the German empire unless the German imperial government should "immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels."

The German government agreed to this demand with the understanding that "unless the unlawful practices of its enemies against the commerce of neutrals and between neutrals and Germany in noncontraband articles should cease within a reasonable time the German government cannot consider itself as bound by this agreement." The unlawful practices which the German note mentioned did not cease and so it was natural that Germany should return to the unrestricted submarine warfare and declare a war zone.

Germany's pledge was conditional and, as the conditions were not fulfilled, she revoked it. But, even if she had broken her pledge, our honor would not be insulted. Nor have we received the mission from heaven to punish every lawbreaker. This idea is Quixotism pure and simple. Germany has not the slightest intention of insulting us.

Are our vital interests threatened or damaged to such a degree that the situation must be called unbearable and war must be considered the only remedy? It is certain that we shall not sell as much in foodstuffs and ammunition as we have done up to now. With hunger riots in all the greater cities of the east it is perhaps not unpatriotic to say that the less foodstuffs we sell the better it is. And the shortage of freight cars would not have become a calamity if we had not sent thousands of freight cars to the belligerents and if our great steel concerns would turn out freight cars instead of shells. If our ammunition export dwindles the readjustment to normal conditions will be easier and the "prosperity" which we enjoy now is a very questionable boon anyhow. The salaried men and the poorer classes do not get very much out of it. To claim that the German naval blockade damages "vital interests" of ours is preposterous. "Vital" means issues of life and death. It may be vital for some speculators, but the average man has not very much pity for victims of this kind.

War with Germany is unnecessary and an unnecessary war is a crime and a blunder.

THE war with Germany would be unjust. England declared a war zone by the notorious admiralty announcement of Nov. 2, 1914. The weapon to be used in that war zone was the mine. The mine can give no notice, save no crew nor passengers, and make no distinction between neutral and belligerent vessels. But we did not think for one moment of severing relations with Great Britain. Prof. John W. Burgess, in his book "America's Relations to the Great War," characterizes our attitude in the following words:

"After the British declaration closing the North sea had been communicated to the neutral powers and put into quite vigorous operation the government of the United States sent its protest, or rather remonstrance, of Dec. 26, 1914, to the British government. This is a document not calculated to fan American pride into a consuming flame. Its flattery to Great Britain is without foundation in truth and passes the limit between courtesy and servility. Its cry for relief is a wail of weakness. And the threatened resistance to further encroachments upon our trade with neutrals was expressed in the form of a timid suggestion that our people might not continue to feel so friendly and benevolently toward the British cause. It is needless to say that the British government did not pay the slightest attention to these feeble and debilitated utterances, except, perhaps, to take them as an encouragement to proceed even more vigorously in the work of destroying our foreign trade in part and acquiring it in part for British merchants."

The fact is that from the beginning of the war we have not been neutral for one minute. English and American magazines have frankly acknowledged that President Wilson threw the whole weight of the United States in the scale of the allies. That is why the war with Germany must be called unjust. We have never given Germany fair play.

BUT the war with Germany is not only unjust, it is unwise. War is business and must have a business aim. "Woe to the statesman," Bismarck said, "who cannot show a reason which holds good after the war is over!" The patriotic excitement vanishes and people want to know why thousands had to suffer and to die. There was a sufficient reason for the civil war or for the war of 1870-'71, but what can we get out of a war with Germany? The question must be put in the most trivial, the most commonplace way, because war in the long run is a trivial, commonplace business. Do we yearn for German territory in Europe or for German colonies? We would refuse them, if they were offered us as a gift. Do we want to extort money from Germany? We are so rich that our bankers cannot sleep from the nightmare of the gold plethora; we resemble King Midas, who turned into gold whatever he touched. We are so rich that the poorest amongst us are starving. A crushed Germany would not be able to pay any indemnity that could tempt us. So a war with Germany has no tangible aim. It has but one aim—to help England.

The argument is this: If we help England now England will have to help us in a possible war with Germany or Japan. In other words, because we want an ally in a possible war we are rushing into a sure war. Seen this way, the war with Germany is a preventive war. It has to come, the wizards say, so it is better to fight it out now with England's help than later alone. But even the cleverest statesman can never say that a war "has to come." It is arrogant and sinful to say that. We are too short sighted to make prophecies like that. But we can foresee what will happen in case of war with Germany. Japan will use this opportunity to settle the immigration controversy in her favor, and if we are stubborn and refuse to give in we shall face a war with Japan while we are in war with Germany.

If we do give in our western states will compel us, as soon as we have licked Germany, to tear up our treaties with Japan and the inevitable consequences will follow. A war between the United States and Japan will be the greatest imaginable blessing to England. It tallies beautifully with the traditional English policy to grasp the trade of two dangerous competitors while they are fighting and exhausting each other. There is no reason why England should change the policy which she followed with regard to Europe only because this time the competitive nations dwell in other hemispheres.

While we would battle with Germany Japan would go on establishing the Asiatic Monroe doctrine in China and we would not be able to intervene efficiently and to protect our own interests. Mexico could do whatever she pleases, Cuba would bother us—in short, we would have lost all liberty of action, and why? Because we stick to a formalistic view about the submarine warfare, a view which we shall have to give up the moment we enter war ourselves.

THE war is unwise, because we are not prepared for it. We know it, and the world knows it. To rush into war in such a condition is courting disaster. Most people think that even after war is declared there will be no war. But that is a mistake, a terrible mistake. Sir Edward Grey said in those days of decision in 1914: "England will hardly feel the war." The prophecy turned out to be tommyrot. If we have to fight Germany we shall have to fight her as if our existence was at stake. A nation who tries to wage war in a half hearted way lives in childish illusions and will be overrun sooner or later. If we had universal military service such ideas would be impossible. The only sensible policy to my mind is to prepare with the utmost energy for any emergency, to make universal military training and service a fundamental American institution, to avoid entangling European alliances, to keep out of war as long as it is possible to do so with honor and if we have to fight then to fight as hard as possible. Washingtonian isolation, founded on the spirit of true patriotism and supported by universal military service, that should be our motto.

The system of alliances brought on this war and the system of alliances prevents ending it. Don't you think that France would be glad to get out of it? And so would Austria. France knows that she could get a very advantageous peace at this moment, but she is going on for honor's sake. She feels bound to her pledge. Sooner or later patriots will ask the question whether a nation is obliged, or even entitled, to commit suicide for "honor's" sake. We are so luckily situated that we can rely on ourselves. We don't need any alliances. We have money, we have men, and all we need is the spirit. People say: Isolation is impossible in our days. Economical isolation certainly is impossible, we all know that, but this truism does not mean or prove that we are too weak to protect ourselves and need alliances. And so I repeat: To fight Germany for the purpose of getting England's help in a possible later war is unwise.

WAR is unpopular. Ask your relatives, your friends, your acquaintances, your enemies; they will all tell you that the nation wants peace. Peace with Germany, with Japan, with England—peace! The nation is not in a heroic mood. Frankly speaking, I do not think that this psychological phenomenon is satisfying in all its aspects, but here it is and must be reckoned with. Moreover, a war with Germany is unpopular with the German-Americans, the Irish-Americans, and many Anglo-Americans.

If there were a moral issue it probably would be different. If we could say, in imitation of England: "If submarine war is not wrong, nothing is wrong!"—the nation might be united. But nobody—except a few cranks—says that, and therefore it must be stated without any circumlocutions that the nation is not united. Reporters are hustling around to question prominent citizens about their loyalty and of course everybody says that he is loyal, but that does not mean that they are for war. Thousands are wearing a flag or hanging it out of the window, but how many of them would volunteer? "Let George do it!"—that is the real mood of the nation.

Congress is restive. Why? Because the senators and congressmen feel that the nation does not want war and that our representative institutions would have to undergo a terrible assault if in this case they would not "represent" the pepole. The agitation for the national referendum is no mere pro-German artifice, no trifle to be waived away; it has come to stay. I shall say a few words about its advantages and drawbacks in my next article.

THURSDAY was the eightieth birthday of William Dean Howells. There comes to me a memory of an afternoon in New York when the gray of the twilight in the streets was forgotten in the untarnished blue of the upper sky that colored a window high up over the roofs of the lesser dwellings and beyond the lusty screeches and shrieks of the city voices. Against that clear blue was outlined a fine head, eyes that smiled all the time, and a face that was undated, sophisticated, kindly, gentle—there before me sat the dean of American literature, a man who had found fame before I was born, who had lost with the years none of his skill, and who would live long after the voices of the city which came up to us, like faint echoes of reality, had ceased their complainings of today.

He was a cordial, pleasant, middle aged man, loath to talk of his own writing. "I always like to ask questions rather than answer them," he said, "because I have already said everything about myself there is to say." He was eager in his questions of his Chicago friends. "Do you know Miss Edith Wyatt?" he asked especially. "I think that she writes with a rare charm of style, a fireside glow and warmth and leisure of manner which is almost never found among young American writers today." [Miss Wyatt's "Great Companions" (Appleton) has just been published.]

He talked of his life in New England in the summer, of his winter months in St. Augustine, Fla., of the days when New York had talked the language of the waste places, but somehow he never talked of himself. I remember thinking, "To live as he has lived, to spend a youth in the hot fire of creation, to go to Italy in the romantic guise of a consul before twenty-five strikes its ominous knell of being a quarter of a century, to edit a magazine like the Atlantic Monthly, and to spend one's years giving increasingly of oneself to the world and to be in one's old age undated, unaged, merely gentle and sophisticated, unscarred by the scratching claws of life—that is a life worth having lived."

The list of books which Mr. Howells has written includes seventy-three volumes of poetry, biography, fiction, and drama. Probably the best known of his novels is "The Rise of Silas Lapham" (Harpers). The latest is "The Leatherwood God" (Century). Until this year a critical volume devoted entirely to William Dean Howells has never been written. Alexander Harvey, associate editor of Current Opinion, is at work on one now, which will be published very soon by B. W. Huebsch.

"The literary world of Japan has suffered a great loss in the death of Prof. Natsume at the early age of 49," writes the Tokio correspondent of the Dial. "He was, perhaps, the most quoted writer in Japan, although that characterization might be disputed by Yone Noguchi. He was unusually well informed in European as well as Japanese and Chinese literature. He has been variously called 'the Dickens of Japan,' 'the Meredith of Japan,' and 'the Thackeray of Japan.' He achieved unique fame in this land, where ornamental titles are held in such high esteem and are much sought after, by declining the degree of doctor of letters which the government bestowed upon him. His first work, 'Botchan,' is one of his most famous and is an autobiography in novel form, like 'David Copperfield.' His masterpiece is called in Japanese 'Waga Hai wa Neko de Aru,' or, in simple English, 'I Am a Cat.' It has been, in part at least, translated into English."

"Essays in War Time" (Houghton Mifflin) is a volume which the reader who likes the music of a memorable prose style with his meals of thoughtfulness cannot afford to miss. Havelock Ellis, the greatest social hygienist of his generation, applies in "Essays in War Time" the experience which has gained for him his undisputed first place, and he does it in such a remarkably pleasant literary manner that the essays seem more critical than tract-like. Mr. Ellis, you know, was a writer of things literary before he became a social scientist, and his books of literary criticism are rare contributions to that subject, which is too often an autopsy, too seldom the clinic of a living spirit.

Henry E. Legler, the public librarian, tells in "Human Welfare Work in Chicago" (McClurg) how the public library got its start. "Shortly after the great fire of 1871," he says, "Thomas Hughes, author of 'Tom Brown's School Days,' and others started a movement in England with an appeal to authors, publishers, scientific societies, and literary institutions which resulted in a donation of several thousand books toward the formation of a free library in Chicago. This collection was stored in the 'tank' part of the temporary city hall building, known as the 'Rookery,' at Adams and La Salle streets."

In "Wilt Thou Torchy" (Clode) the firebrand office boy makes the success of his affairs of the heart that he always makes of the Corrugated's business. Ten years ago Sewell Ford introduced Torchy into a story, and for those ten years Torchy never has lost his personality, has never been dull, and, apparently, has never bored his creator. Torchy has no rival in American fiction. He has appeared twice a week for ten years. The nearest approach to his record is J. Rufus Wallingford's, who has been with us since 1908, but who appears only once a month. The world's record in fiction is, of course, held by Sherlock Holmes. He solved his first mystery in 1887 and kept Great Britain free of criminals continuously until 1905, and was resurrected in 1914, in "The Valley of Fear," which was a souvenir of Conan Doyle's visit to America.

A correspondent asks what the highest priced printed book in the world is. In finding out I came upon some interesting stuff about the increase in the price of rare books. It, the highest priced printed book, is the Gutenberg Bible, which is now in the library of Henry E. Huntington. In the eighteenth century the volume belonged to Otto H. von Nostitz, who is said to have got it from a library in Mainz. From him a Mr. Horn had it. It is next heard of as sold in 1825 by the London booksellers, Messrs. Nichol, to a dealer named Arch, who sold it to Henry Perkins, a wealthy brewer, for what would be equivalent in our money to $2,520. Nearly half a century later, in 1873, it was bought at the Perkins sale for Lord Ashburnham. At the Ashburnham sale in 1897 Bernard Quaritch bought it for $20,000. Robert Hoe got it from Quaritch, and at the recent Hoe sale it was bought for Mr. Huntington for $50,000. In less than a century the book gained twenty times in value, and in the last sixteen years it has advanced 150 per cent. Why buy steel?

Sinclair Lewis, who jaunted off a year and a half ago to take his ease and see this land of the free and spend all of his time being literary, has finally returned to New York just in time to be present at the debut of his third novel, "The Job" (Harper's).

Heinrich von Treitschke's "Politics" (Macmillan) will in a few generations be the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the great war. "Inspired by Von Treitschke, a nation——" the histories will read. Until recently we have had to take the word of German scholars who could compass the devious vocabularial ways of the famous Berlin professor. Blanche Dugdale and Torben de Bille have translated "Politics," and it appears now in English in two volumes with an introduction by the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour and a foreword by A. Lawrence Lowell. The appearance of the treatise in English recalls a paper which Nicholas Murray Butler wrote a few months ago, descriptive of his first visit to Europe, thirty years ago. In Berlin he attended lectures at the university, and, among others, "there were the Monday evening popular discourses by Von Treitschke, who was at the very height of his influence and power. To listen to these discourses was for the first few moments distinctly disagreeable, since Von Treitschke's deafness left him without any power to control his voice. It was not long, however, before one forgot the utterance in the vividness and vigor of what the man was saying. That at the end of a generation his social and political philosophy was to shake the whole world with the evidence of its power was little dreamed of in those days."

"My Second Year of the War" (Dodd-Mead) will be a palliation of your keen disappointment if you didn't get to hear Frederick Palmer when he was here. The book is not a collection of Mr. Palmer's war corresponding. It was written at the end of the campaign of last summer, and it not only gives a detailed description of the martial machinations but it tells of the inevitable methods of the next great attack. With "My Year of the Great War," it forms a complete record of Mr. Palmer's reactions as a correspondent to the master madness of our times.

"Short Rations" (Century) is a collection of the articles which Madeline Z. Doty wrote about conditions in Germany when she was sent there a few months ago by the New York Tribune and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. If you remember the straightforward chronicles of awesome things which she made you will be grateful for their permanence in book form.

A friend of the Tabloid writes from New York: "Some time ago a Chicago paper (no, it was not THE TRIBUNE), made a catty remark about authors not doing their bit. They failed to mention that E. Temple Thurston was not only doing his bit but that he had disposed of his home, turned the proceeds over to the government, and had gone to work in the war office. He did not choose his job, he took what was given to him, and he's probably doing better than his critic would under the circumstances. There, I feel better after saying that." Mr. Thurston's new book, "Enchantment" (Appleton), will be published soon.

After a silence of three years Robert Hichens speaks again fictionally in "In the Wilderness" (Stokes). Mr. Hichens has been on active military duty ever since the war began, except for three weeks when he was ill and went to the Sahara desert to get himself mended. He is a night patrolman for the London special constables corps, a member of the volunteer fire brigade, which is called out whenever Zeppelins are expected, and head of a squad of twenty of the force for defense in case of invasion. "In the Wilderness" was written when he wasn't policing.

"Plays and Players: Leaves from a Critic's Scrapbook" (Stewart & Kidd), is a volume of criticisms of plays and papers on acting, playmaking, and other things dramatic. Walter Prichard Eaton has here collected notes and critiques on plays which were produced as far back as 1910. One section is devoted to American plays, one to foreign plays acted on our stage, and one to Shakespearean revivals.

THE QUIET SECTOR

By Robert Herrick

PARIS, Jan. 22.—As I have said in a previous article Faverolle (please remember this is not the real name: the industrious intelligence department of the imperial government, which is our most faithful reader, might stir up trouble for my host if I gave the right name, by causing an aviator to drop a few bombs on his house in the usual Kolossal manner)—Faverolle is considered a secteur de repos, to which troops that have had a more strenuous life elsewhere are brought for rest. After the Germans were driven back across the river in the autumn of 1914, they stuck fast in some old quarries on the hills, and the French stuck their heels into similar quarries, so that the line in this sector has practically not changed many feet for two years. For that very reason it presents some interesting and instructive features in the development of trench war, and also in the use of those old quarries for concealing men and cannon.

I do not approve of tourist parties to the trenches: it seems to me that the soldiers who are obliged to give their lives there have a right to resent the curiosity of civils, who come from time to time to see their misery and exclaim, piloted by immaculate young officers from the general staff. Nevertheless, when the colonel proposed taking me up into the advance lines of his sector I could not resist. I wanted to see how trench life close to the Germans had changed in the sixteen months since I visited the front about Verdun. So armed with several hundred cigarets for the soldiers, I put on a blue steel casque, hung a gas mask and a pair of powerful glasses around my neck, and prepared for a long and tiresome hike through the mud.

OUR path wound upwards from the little ruined village of F. along a road made by the engineers for the small railroad that serves this sector. Below us we could see the disemboweled village straggling along its one valley road, and in the distance the blue gray fields through which wound the river, still farther away the opposite hills from which came from time to time the report of a French gun. All about the hillside the soil had been crevassed and torn, destroying the little gardens and fruit patches which had previously covered the slopes. In a number of more sheltered corners were grouped the graves of dead soldiers, for this was one of the bloodier battle grounds of late September, '14.

On the way up we stopped to look at some of the many trench mortars that this war has developed. I have often wondered, in passing through the rooms of museums where old armor and guns are preserved, at the ingenuity of our ancestors in the matter of deadly weapons with which to kill one another, but this war will easily hold the world record for murderous inventions. The equipment of any sector in the 300 miles of the western front reveals a prodigious assortment of mortars, howitzers, trench guns, bombs, machine guns, etc., etc. What else have the men and their officers to do in the many idle hours of "calm" days than to think up new contrivances for annoying the enemy? As these have been described over and over again and as they interest me but slightly I shall not mention them again.

There is really no longer any distinction between first and second lines of trenches, or rather the only distinction to the eye of the ignorant civilian is between large fields of organized defense. For instance, in this sector there is a mile and a half of highly organized trench ground between the chateau and the extreme advanced post opposite the Germans, in which are included subterranean forts, shelters for men and officers, several separate fields of barbed wire entanglements, and the like. It is really all the same, closely linked up by telephone, cross trenches, boyaus, etc. Then back of this field of defense, on the other side of the river, is another less developed field, and so on. (Thus may be realized the difficulty which the allies encounter on the Somme and will without doubt meet for many miles back of the present "first line" when they resume their offensive presently.)

The last line before one comes to the famous "no man's land" is not a line at all, but an irregular checker board of trenches with spurs running out to observation and listening posts. It is more properly called a "firing line," and this sector was not meant to be held in case of bombardment: the men would withdraw to their caves in the old "second line," letting the enemy bang to pieces with his heavies the front trenches, and in this rear position are also positions for firing and machine gun emplacements. It is a warren, a maze, where in spite of frequent signs even the officers of the sector are likely to lose their way.

WE arrived at one of the large quarries on the top of the hill, which makes an admirable shelter for hundreds of soldiers. Great columns of masonry have been built under the stone vaults to support the roof against the heaviest bombardment, and here in the recesses of this primitive cave the men live and sleep when not engaged in work outside. They are lucky to have these old quarries to shelter themselves, for in spite of the "sweating" walls of soft sandstone, they make fairly comfortable quarters. Filled with the dusky blue coated men whose forms it was at first hard to recognize through the smoke of fires, the place reminded me of Wagner's caves for Mimi's men. They were eating or playing cards or moving about in that vague way that groups of soldiers always display, as if they were too uncomfortable to sit still for long. They are well fed and receive many presents from home, some of which must be money from the amount which they spend at the regimental "coöperative" in the village, chiefly on wine and tobacco. But life in the cold, damp, dark cave must become, especially in winters, fearfully boresome to young men.

No less boresome must be the perpetual work to be done in rebuilding trench walls that have been battered down during the night or in executing new works, which, I fancy, are sometimes undertaken to keep the men from thinking too much about themselves. I came across several such working parties digging out caved-in trenches that had been bombarded the night before. We had to crane our bodies and crawl over the light soil among the soldiers at the risk of getting shot by some attentive German a few hundred feet away. This war, primitive in its caves, is alsc disgustingly like mine or sewer digging, a cruel lot of back breaking hard work.

A THIRD characteristic of this trench fighting is its Indian quality, which one finds when finally after a lot of muddy walking, one gets down into the observation and listening posts where it is incumbent to whisper and not show your head if you don't want to receive some soft of missile from the German who has his eye at a hole seventy or eighty feet away from you. From one of the round steel boxes in which observers are placed you can peep across the raw, desolate, hideous intervening field on to the German trenches which are as silent as death—too silent. They straggle irregularly up and down the rolling fields and over the hills as far as your glasses permit you to see, just as the French lines from which you have come straggle. A few patches of stripped tree trunks may vary the landscape or a couple of marooned farm wagons in the little valley below, but there is always a desolate roofless gray village in their lines just as there is Faverolle and its like on the other.

The real "front" is always, wherever I have seen it, the most terrible commentary on human futility that can be found—desolation and waste. This is a "quiet sector" —it almost never gets into the communiqué's—nevertheless there are at any moment flying bombs, shells, bullets, and the steam riveter rattle of machine guns.

It is a quiet sector and yet every night parties of soldiers must go forth to crawl about in that desolate waste strip between the lines, to listen and look and see what is going on "over there." At night the real activity starts in! This appeals well enough to the deviltry of the youngsters who man the front trenches—satisfies the Indian in every young man. It is dangerous work, for the Germans are always abroad doing the same thing and almost constantly one side or the other sets off flares to see what is going on, when every movement must stop until the light dies down. . . .

The colonel wanted to see some new machine gun position which involved a detour out to the shoulder of the hill where I had the usual thrill of bobbing up my head to take a hurried look at the enemy's nearest hole, which was about fifty feet off. And then we began the crooked descent into the valley where the ground is so soggy that neither side can make a move of any sort, so that it is given over to the care of some "territoriales" —"good fathers of families" as the colonel described them. They looked rather sad, those good fathers of families, and I don't blame them: they might be safe down there in the valley, but they were very wet and uncomfortable, forced to live in huts dug in the trench walls.

And then we went back to the château through the park where the gathering winter twilight was broken by the exchange of shells over our head, the usual teatime warming up of the artillery. Back on the hill down which we had just wound our way could be heard the cursed chatter of the machine guns. Somebody thought he saw something moving somewhere—that was all.

IT was a very quiet little sector, yet it gave me food for thought. How can the German Fritz be made to believe that he is fighting a "defensive war"—"saving the fatherland" and all that? Why the hardy little Frenchmen stick it out in the dirt, mud, filth, cold, discomfort, and danger is evident enough! "They" are over there and the French soldiers will stick it out until "they" are "booted off" the land where "they" have no earthly business to be. The sentiment and the resolution that inspire the French are utterly reasonable and command any one's respect unless one has lost all sense of reality in pacifist palabra. To defend oneself from assassins and bandits that camp on your land is as natural and as honorable as to fire an impudent thief out of your room.

But for the German? It may be easy enough to convince a lot of schoolmasters in Berlin and Bavaria that you are fighting a holy war of self-defense when from the beginning your armies are camped on other peoples' territories, but how is the soldier at the front, who is doing the fighting, convinced? He knows what is obvious to any child's intelligence when one has been near the trenches that under modern conditions the defense is enormously strong, practically impregnable. If the Germans are convinced, as they seem to be, from the highest to the lowest, that the world is full of deceitful enemies who want to take from them German land, why don't they wall themselves in by a good trench line and go about their business? Why didn't they in the summer of 1914 instead of upsetting the entire world with their holy war of self-defense? They would have quickly perceived that the rest of the world had no interest whatever in their precious Germany and they could have played at war within their trenches as long as they wished without doing the least harm.

Reverse the positions and put the French armies in trenches across the Rhine sixty or seventy miles from Berlin and not a French soldier would stick, no matter what his officers said to him about the necessity of defending his fatherland. I can hear them talk—"Dis donc! Tu parles! This MY patrie? Not by a thousand Sundays. I am going to demenager your camp this very minute—good-by, Fritz, and good luck to you! If you want to fight me you will have to find me nearer home." And off the poilus would stream as fast as they could make it to their own frontier.

Fritz must have a psychology all to himself to be so easily persuaded that for thirty months he has been defending his sacred rights to his own fatherland. And there are many signs that at last Fritz is awaking to the cheap trick which his ambitious rulers have played on him, and rubbing his eyes is asking himself—"Well, what am I doing here?" Which may be why the kaiser feels so nobly about peace.

SHARP ADVANCE IN GRAIN LIST; PRODUCT SOARS

More Gains Made Under General Buying—Trade Active.

Bullish enthusiasm ran riot in the grain trade yesterday and sharply higher prices were recorded. May wheat closed with a net gain of 4c, while new crop months were up 2¾@2⅞c. Commission houses in general bought wheat, and the active interest displayed by houses with seaboard connections led the trade to believe that some of the buying was for foreign account. Outside interest in the market was largest witnessed in weeks, much of it no doubt stimulated by the strong cash wheat situation and comparative cheapness of bread as against other foods. Fancy hard winter wheat sold here yesterday at $2.04½, while ordinary grades of No. 2 red and No. 2 hard were quoted 9@10c over May prices.

A report issued by B. W. Snow, showing farm reserves of wheat as only 98,000,000 bu, with but 39,000,000 bu remaining for export during the next four months and for carry-over into the new crop, was the basis for much of the buying. The trade looks for a bullish government report on farm reserves on next Thursday.

Belgian Purchases Large.

There were no indications of a large export demand yesterday, but it is understood that the wheat purchases by the Belgian relief recently have amounted to about 4,000,000 bu and that further orders were in the market yesterday for this account. A belief that legislation will be enacted that will soon allow American vessels to resume sailing was also a bullish influence. No material improvement in the railroad situation was reported; in fact, some of the big local elevators were forced to shut down again because of inability to move grain.

New crop months were relatively weaker than May, due to the fact that general snows were reported in the southwest. The precipitation was said to be heavy in parts of Kansas, while light snow fell in Nebraska. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 221,000 bu, compared with 1,266,000 bu a year ago. Paris wheat was 3c higher and flour 6c higher. Primary receipts totaled 674,000 bu, against 1,223,000 bu a year ago. Minneapolis stocks decreased 90,000 bu for one day. Local shipping sales were 65,000 bu, including 30,000 bu No. 2 hard in store at May price.

New High for May Corn.

Corn had a further bulge, May selling up to $1.07⅞, highest price on record for future contracts, although cash corn sold at $1.13 last fall. Resting spots were 1⅝@2⅞c higher than previous close. There was general commission house buying of corn, with free taking of profits by local and eastern longs. Snow's report showing farm reserves of corn only 785,000,000 bu, smallest in fifteen years, and the continued advance in hog values encouraged much buying. Considerable demand was based on the theory that corn is too low in price as compared with wheat.

Cash corn was 1@4c higher, with local shipping sales 15,000 bu. Argentina again reports more favorable advices on corn crop there, but offerings from there are light and tonnage scarcity is pronounced. The railroad congestion continued to hold the market in check. Clearances for the day were 117,000 bu. Primary receipts were 814,000 bu, against 822,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 1,854,000 bu, while 858,000 bu were shipped.

Oats Active and Higher.

Oats were also active and strong, closing 1⅛@1½c higher. Buying was general in character and stimulated largely by the advance in wheat and corn. Cash oats were 1@2c higher, with local shipping sales 50,000 bu. Clearances from the seaboard were 57,000 bu. Country offerings of oats to arrive were larger at the advance. Snow estimates farm reserves of oats at [illegible],000,000 bu. London oats advanced 6d. Primary receipts totaled 827,000 bu, against 500,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 2,076,000 bu, while 1,496,000 bu were shipped.

Provisions were again sharply higher and advanced to new high levels. May pork reached $33.30 and May lard $19.07½. Local longs and packing interests led in the buying. Free buying of lard against export business was reported. Hog prices were sharply higher and foreign situation is strong. Hog receipts west for the week totaled 583,600 head, against 649,000 last week and 593,000 a year ago. Liverpool spot lard was 6d higher, with hams and bacon unchanged. Local meat shipments for the week totaled 19,8[illegible] lbs, compared with 18,211,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 7,420,000 lbs, against 6,920,000 lbs last year.

Firm Market for Rye.

Rye ruled strong, with No. 2 closing $1.55 bid. Receipts, 1 car.

Barley was firm; malting quoted $1.07@1.27, and sold $1.0[illegible]@1.22; feed and mixing quotable $1.00@1.12, with sales at $1.10@1.12; screenings were quoted 50c@$1.00, and skimmings 70@75c, with former selling at 56@87c. Receipts were 23 cars.

Timothy seed was steady; March, $5.60 bid and $5.80 asked; September, $5.90 bid; cash lots quoted $3.00@5.50. Clover seed ruled easy; cash lots quoted $12.00@18.25 and spot prime $19.50 nominal.

Flaxseed closed 1¼c higher, with cash quoted $2.77½@2.83½ nominal. Minneapolis was 1½c, Duluth 1¾@2c, and Winnipeg 1⅛@1¼c higher respectively.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 14 cars; corn, 68 cars; oats, 102 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 23 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 51,000, and for all next week, 175,000 head.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Reports that purchases by the British commission in Cuba within the last week had aggregated about 100,000 tons at 4c f. o. b. Cuba, imparted a generally firm tone to the market for raw sugar here today. These purchases, which were the largest reported by the British government in Cuba so far this season, attracted considerable attention. In some quarters it was thought possible that they might indicate a change of policy and a withdrawal of British orders from local refiners. The only business reported in the local market today were purchases by refiners of 50,000 bags of Cubas for April shipment at 4½c cost and freight, equal to 5.52c for centrifugal. Prompt and nearby positions were reported available at that price, but in the absence of fresh business the spot market was nominally unchanged on the basis of the last sale at 4⅜c cost and freight, equal to 5.30c for centrifugal and 4.52c for molasses. No change was reported in the market for refined sugar. All but two refiners were still reported out of the market with the list prices in force ranging from 7.00@8.00c for fine granulated. It was reported, however, that the strike situation had greatly improved and that some of the refiners would be working on a normal basis next week. Sugar futures were steady to firm early on the reported sales of raws in Cuba to the British government, but later eased off under realizing for over the week end. The close was unchanged to 5 points net lower, with sales of 10,650 tons. March, 4.50@4.53c; closing, 4.50c; May, 4.55@4.60c; closing, 4.58c; July, 4.59@4.63c; closing, 4.62c; September, 4.65@4.70c; closing, 4.66c.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The cotton market showed renewed strength today, making new high ground for the movement on continued covering by foreign or domestic trade shorts, and an improved demand from Wall street and commission house sources. May contracts sold up to 17.51c, or 30 points above last night and $25 per bale above the low level reached on the break of Feb. 1. That delivery closed at 17.48c, with the general list closing very steady at a net advance of 23@31 points. Port receipts today, 12,326 bales, and for the season 5,904,447 bales; exports today, 124 bales; for the season, 4,098,062 bales; stock, 1,279,831 bales. Futures:

STREET EYES WASHINGTON.

New York, March 3.—Advices from Washington appearing to dispose of the prospects of an extra session of congress and a report that the state department held that ships carrying munitions had a right to arm were received with undisguised satisfaction in the financial district today.

The stock market during the brief session was stronger and more active than on any previous day of the week, especially in the final hour, when the entire list bounded forward under lead of United States Steel, the coppers, shippings, and some of the standard rails.

United States Steel made an extreme gain of 2 points at 108½, with 1@2 for shares of the same class, and 3¾ for Bethlehem Steel old stock at 130¾.

Utah, Anaconda, and American Smelting featured the metals at advances of 1@2½ points, oils, motors, equipments, and shippings rose 1, 2, and even 4 points, and American Woolen, Industrial Alcohol, General Electric, and American Beet Sugar trailed along more moderately.

Rails Show Fair Gains.

Canadian Pacific, New York Central, St. Paul, Chicago and Northwestern, and Norfolk and Western advanced 1@2 points on small dealings, with a fair demand for minor rails.

Weakness in Barrett company issues was attributed to the announcement of a new stock issue, the common shares making a gross decline of 8½ points. Studebaker was heavy at the outset, but made up the greater part of its loss on hurried short covering.

General news of the day included January statements of the Reading system and the Chicago and Northwestern railway, the former showing a decided decrease in profits from operations and the latter disclosing a substantial net gain.

Trading in bonds was unusually light and irregular. With the exception of registered 3s, which gained ¼ per cent, virtually all other government bonds and Panama issues were lower by fractions to a point on call during the week.

Mercantile paper, 4@4¼ per cent. Sterling 60 day bills, 4.71; commercial sixty day bills on banks, 4.71; commercial sixty day bills, 4.70⅝; demand, 4.75⅜; cables, 4.76 7-16. MARSHALL FIELD & CO. REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale shipments of dry goods are well ahead of the corresponding period a year ago. Road sales for immediate delivery are about equal to the same period last year, while road sales for spring and fall delivery show a marked increase over the same week of 1916. Customers have been in to market in about equal numbers. Collections are largely in excess of the same week a year ago."

Hogs at Chicago yesterday sold 15@25c higher than on Friday and topped at $13.90, "singers" and heavy butchers making the price. The bulk sold at $13.60@13.80 and the general market was highest on record. Receipts were posted at 13,000, of which shippers took 3,000. Several of the smaller packers staid out of the trade, but there was sufficient demand to take all the offerings at the prices.

Final quotations made hogs 80@90c higher than a week ago, while pigs showed an advance of $1.00@1.25. The average price of all hogs here this week was $13.35, the highest on record, and compared with $12.65 last week, $8.85 a year ago, and $6.70 two years ago. Receipts for the week were 165,700, the lightest since last October.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 2,800; Swift & Co., 4,400; Wilson & Co., 700; Hammond, 300; Western Packing Co., 500; Independent Packing Co., 500; Brennan Packing Co., 700; Miller & Hart, 300; butchers, 1,800; shippers, 3,000; total, 15,700; left over, 2,500.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle values at Chicago this week finished practically unchanged from a week ago. Receipts for the period showed considerable decrease, but the demand reflected the effects of a fairly general boycott against the high cost of meats and buyers' needs were materially curtailed. The market finished the week steady, with prime beeves quoted up to $12.15, while the bulk of the good to choice killers ranged from $9.60 to $11.25. Cows and heifers were unchanged, with steers, while calves closed $1.00 to $1.50 lower than a week ago.

Receipts at seven western markets for the week, 146,900, against 165,700 the preceding week, 138,700 a year ago, and 120,800 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 1,580,000, against 1,364,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep and yearlings finished the week unchanged to strong, as compared with a week ago, while lambs were 10@25c lower. The weakness in the latter was largely due to the excessive weight carried by the arrivals at a time when packers wanted only lightweight animals. The general market was in good condition at the finish, however, and traders were optimistic of the future. Lambs topped the week at $14.60 and sheep at $12.50.

Laclede Gas.

C. W. L.—The Laclede Gas Light company controls the entire gas business of St. Louis and its net earnings have shown a steady increase for years. Gross in 1916 was $4,509,242, about 1½ per cent less than in 1915, the decrease being due to lower rates for gas put in effect last August. Net after depreciation was $2,486,695, an increase of 10 per cent. Interest charges on $20,000,000 of bonds and $3,250,000 of debentures were $1,162,500, and the dividend on $2,500,000 of preferred stock was $125,000, leaving a balance of $1,199,195, equal to 11.2 per cent on the $10,700,000 of common stock. The regular 1¾ per cent quarterly dividend was paid on Jan. 2 last, and 10 per cent extra. The reduction in rates was voluntary, the rates not being subject to regulation. It is expected to result in such an increase of business as to offset the decrease in price.

Investments at Home Safest.

The rights of property are probably more secure in the United States at the present time than in any other country of the world, and the small investor can do better by keeping his savings under the protection of his home government than by sending them abroad.

It long has been the policy of the United States not to aid its citizens who invest in foreign enterprises. Hundreds of millions of dollars of American money were put in Mexican mines, plantations, electric plants and railways. When a revolutionary government came and confiscated much of this property the United States merely told its citizens to get out of Mexico at once. In so far as the property has not been destroyed it may be restored to the owners at some time, but the average recovery from these investments is certain to be small.

Revolutions are possible only under weak governments, but they are not the only dangers incurred by investors in foreign enterprises. The strongest government may impose a confiscatory tax or enact laws intended to hamper the operations of outsiders and favor its own citizens. In such an event the investor would have no recourse whatever.

While these considerations apply more particularly to the undertakings of private corporations, public securities also, such as foreign government and municipal bonds, are, other things being equal, much less desirable as permanent investments than home issues.

Brief Answers.

A. B. Z.—Packard Motor company preferred shares are closely held. They are listed on the Detroit exchange, but no recent sales have been recorded there. Last month a New York broker offered twenty-five shares at 101.

A. A. C.—Common stocks are not "safe" investments. They are subject to change in market value and dividend rate as earnings vary.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The market for coffee futures was quiet today and irregular, but small fluctuations were attributed chiefly to evening-up accounts for over the week-end. The opening was unchanged to 1 point lower and May contracts eased off to 7.64c, or 2 points under last night's close during the morning. It seemed, however, that recent liquidation has left the market in a steadier position and after selling at 8.03c early, December rallied to 8.05c on covering. The close was net 3 points lower to 2 higher. Sales were estimated at 29,000. Closing bids: March, 7.49c; April, 7.57c; May, 7.65c; June, 7.72c; July, 7.79c; August, 7.85c; September, 7.90c; October, 7.95c; November, 8.00c; December, 8.06c; January, 8.12c; February, 7.18c. Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7s, 9¾c; Santos 4s, 10⅝c. Offerings of Santos 3s and 4s were reported in the cost and freight market at 9.70c American credits. The official cables reported no change in the Rio market. Santos futures were unchanged to 25 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 24,000; Jundiahy, 13,000; Santos cleared 9,000 for New York.

[illegible] merinos were often 15 per cent up. [illegible] a shortage of future supplies caused the keen demand during the sales and virtually all the available quantity, 91,000 bales, was sold. Licenses to export cross breds have been stopped. It is believed a few cargoes are going to America, but no decision has been reached regarding America's supply of Australian merinos.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Cotton goods were steadier today with signs of an increasing demand. Yarns and linens were firm and burlaps easier. There was a good demand for hosiery. Wool markets were firm with a rising tendency.

—is the cost of selling open accounts excessive?

Our charge for buying active accounts is usually less than a Wholesaler's or Manufacturer's cash discount.

You may not realize the great reduction in rates we have made during the past two years, and may believe that our charges and our profits are excessive. We, therefore, submit results of our business for 1916, as follows:

Accounts purchased during 1916 . . . . . $35,[illegible]
Gross income . . . . . [illegible]
Operating expenses . . . . ($257,067.03)
Interest on borrowed money . 105,136.97)
[illegible]
Net income for the year . . . . . $290,[illegible]
Average Capital, Surplus and Profits . . . $2,122,[illegible]
Average borrowed money . . . . . 2,018,651.[illegible]
Average Cash employed . . . . . $4,141,[illegible]
Per cent. gross profit on volume . . . . . [illegible]
Per cent. net profit on volume . . . . . [illegible]
Per cent. net profit on average capital, surplus and profits . . . . . [illegible]
Per cent. net profit on average cash employed . . 7.01%

You must concede that a net profit of only about 4/5 of 1% on volume, 13.68% on average investment and 7.01% on average total cash employed, is only fair.

That our customers prosper is shown by the fact that 27.4% of the total number of customers on our books today, have had their commercial ratings increased since they began business with us, and 77.4% of the same now have first or second credit ratings.

The account business is a semi-banking business and the above profits are no larger than those of many Banks and Trust Companies.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW BIG GAIN IN DEPOSITS

Excess Reserve Suggestive of Steadiness in Money Market.

Owing to an increase of $57,900,000 in deposits and only a small increase in cash, the New York bank statement showed a decrease of $3,025,670 in the excess reserve. The loan expansion amounted to over $50,800,000 and the greater part of this was shown in the expanded deposit item.

The figures probably represented special transactions during the week. The excess reserve, however, at $164,427,270 continues to suggest steadiness in the money market. The figures follow:

Union Carbide New Stock.

In a call for the meeting of stockholders of the Union Carbide company, to be held on April 3 at Richmond, Va., it is announced that the shareholders will be asked to vote on the proposition to increase the capital stock from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000. There is no doubt about the recommendation of the board of directors being followed. Nothing is said in the call as to how the new stock is to be distributed.

Following this announcement Union Carbide shares advanced on the local exchange from 190½ to 198 and closed at 198 bid. The market is of the opinion that the stock will be distributed as a dividend. However, there is no official declaration on the subject. If the entire $20,000,000 be issued at par to shareholders, the rights with the market at 198 would be worth $39 a share. If the stock be distributed as a dividend the rights will be worth $81 a share.

U. S. Steel Outlook.

There has been considerable odd lot buying of United States Steel on the prospective reporting of a $500,000,000 surplus for the last year. Whenever the stock nears par specialist advices reflect semi-investment absorption.

It is estimated in some quarters that about three-fifths of the entire steel productive capacity of the country for 1917 is contracted for, with negotiations under way suggesting that probably three-quarters will soon be closed. Should the United States government go into the market it would result in the entire capacity being employed for at least twelve months, according to some sources in the trade.

Railway Steel Spring's Year.

The annual report of the Railway Steel Spring company for the year ended Dec. 30, 1916, shows net earnings of $2,765,807, available for the common stock. This is an increase of $1,347,579 over the preceding year. The profits were equal to 13.7 per cent on the common, compared with 3.00 in 1915.

In the annual report to shareholders President F. F. Fitzpatrick says the plants of the company were operated to their fullest capacity in 1916 manufacturing the company's regular line of production, of which a considerable volume has been sold for export. The board of directors set aside $1,000,000 from earnings for the year for improvements and retirement of bonds. In addition a fund of $1,000,000 was reserved for depreciation.

J. E. Baker Wins Back Wife Who Divorced Him

Jesse E. Baker and his divorced wife, Mrs. Adelaide L. Baker, who has lived in Keokuk, Ia., since October, 1914, will make another venture at matrimony. Baker obtained a license yesterday to remarry his former wife. Mrs. Baker obtained a divorce in 1914 on grounds of cruelty. She was given the custody of their two children.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company will issue $2,500,000 additional 7 per cent preferred stock, bringing the outstanding issue of this class up to $5,000,000. The new preferred will be offered common shareholders at par to the extent of 25 per cent of their holdings. The company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent and an extra of 2 per cent on the common; also the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred. Last December an extra dividend of 5 per cent on the common was declared. Dividends are payable April 2 to stock of record March 21.

William N. Jarnagin was elected president of the Central Manufacturers District bank at a meeting of the board of directors, succeeding M. A. Taylor, who resigned. John W. Gorby, who was cashier of the bank, was elected vice president, and Frank Webb, formerly assistant cashier, was promoted to cashier.

The February production of the Inspiration Copper company totaled 10,250,000 pounds, against 11,600,000 in January and 10,400,000 pounds in December.

The proposed sale of Barrett company additional preferred and common stocks is to provide funds for new construction and for new working capital. Under the terms of the stock increase about $5,500,000 will be raised. A special meeting of stockholders has been called for March 16 to increase the authorized preferred shares from $5,000,000 to $12,500,000 and the common from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000.

A special meeting of stockholders of the B. F. Goodrich company will be held on March 14, immediately following the annual meeting, for the purpose of authorizing a reduction in the authorized preferred stock from $27,300,000 to $26,400,000. This retirement of the preferred issue is in accordance with the bylaws of the company.

According to Wall street gossip there is divided sentiment around the street relative to the position of the motor stocks. It is declared that if the United States actively enters the war the manufacturers of trucks will provide large revenues for their companies.

WIRE PRODUCTS ARE PUSHED UP

New York, March 3.—The American Steel and Wire company at the close of business today announced an advance of $4 a ton in the price of all wire products, effective at once. The new schedule makes nails $3.20 a keg, plain wire 3.15 cents, barbed wire, painted, 3.35 cents, and galvanized barbed wire 4.05 cents a pound. Wire nails now are the highest since December, 1899, and other products are at the highest point in twenty-five years.

Energetic buying of ship plates and marine shapes has further preëmpted mill capacity through 1918 and even into 1919. The orders for ships placed by the Cunard line have been increased to fifteen boats, calling for 135,000 tons of plates and shapes. Eastern shipyards placed orders for about 15,000 tons of plates and shapes other than for the Cunard boats. Japan was in the market, securing 25,000 tons of ship plates.

In Foreign Stock Markets.

LONDON, March 3.—The money market finished the week easy despite the shifting of war loan funds and payment of the first installment of the loan, amounting to about £45,000,000. Discount rates were easy. Idle conditions prevailed on the stock exchange, where the only transactions were a few in home funds at firm prices and an occasional purchase of colonial bonds and rubber shares. Foreign rails were weak. American securities after adjustment to parity finished dull. Bar silver, 37 5-16d per ounce; money, 4¼ per cent; discount rates, short bills, 5½ per cent; three months, 5¼ per cent.

PARIS, March 3.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 61f 65c. Exchange on London, 27f 82½c. Five per cent loan, 87f 95c.

Reserve Bank Resources Grow.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Total resources of federal reserve banks increased more than $25,000,000 during the week ending March 2, according to the weekly statement of the board, made public today.

NEGROES ILL AFTER EXODUS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 3.—More than 2,000 Negroes, who recently migrated here from the south, are ill and 700 are dying of tuberculosis in Philadelphia hospitals, according to a report made public today by Director Krusen of the housing committee.

AN otherwise exceedingly dull week's market was boosted into the sensational class by the sale late in the week of the Karpen building, southwest corner of Michigan boulevard and Ninth street, to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana for $3,500,000. The transaction also included the sale of the fee simple and leasehold interest of the land on which it stands, 132x241 feet. The fee simple was purchased from the First Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the estate of Otto Young, for $1,000,000, and the building and leasehold interest from Karpen Bros., for $2,500,000.

Apart from the importance of such a large investment by the company in Chicago property, the transaction has the distinction of being the largest single transaction in the history of Chicago, the sale of the Fine Arts building at 408-22 South Michigan boulevard in March, 1915, for $3,000,000 by the corporation of the Fine Arts building, controlled by the Studebakers, to Charles A. Chapin being the previous top figure. The sale of the Karpen property was negotiated by W. A. Merigold & Co.

Will Be Permanent Home.

The building was purchased for a permanent home for the oil company, this step being taken because of the difficulty experienced in securing sufficient space to meet its rapidly growing requirements in the two buildings where it now has offices.

The company occupies two floors in the Edison building and two floors in the Marquette building, but was unable to obtain the space it needed. For the present it will occupy the unoccupied part of the Karpen building, which, however, is fairly well rented.

The building is a twelve story and basement fireproof structure of the best type of construction, the exterior finish being of light colored brick, while the interior is handsomely finished in marble. Previous to its construction its former owners secured a permit for a nineteen story building, and the foundations were made strong enough to sustain a building of this height.

Add Seven Stories Later.

It is announced that seven stories will be added as soon as business conditions justify it. It is devoted to stores, shops, and offices, and is one of the most substantial and attractive structures in the downtown district.

The land on which it stands forms a part of a series of extensive purchases made along that part of Michigan avenue by the late Otto Young several years before his death. It was leased by the First Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the Young estate, in 1911 to the Karpens for a term of ninety-nine years at an annual rental of $10,000 for the first two years, $30,000 for the next fifteen years, $33,000 for the succeeding ten years, and $35,000 for the remaining seventy-two years of the term. The average annual rental is $33,535, which, capitalized on a 4 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $836,375, which is at the rate of $6,263 a front foot and $26 a square foot.

Operations of the Karpens.

The operations of the Karpen brothers—Solomon, Isaac, and Adolph—in Michigan avenue property form one of the most interesting chapters in Chicago real estate history. Convinced years ago of the prospective bright future of property on this thoroughfare, they began their operations with the purchase of the leasehold interest in the old Richelieu hotel property, located just south of the present site of the Stratford hotel. This was acquired following the panic of 1893, following bankruptcy proceedings in connection with the property, at an annual rental of $1,430, which seems positively absurd now in view of the present value of the property.

A little later they acquired the Masury property adjoining on the south for $450,000, which they later sold to the McCormick estate for $1,100,000. They also acquired the old Victoria hotel property in the same block, which also became a part of the site of the McCormick building, the transaction netting the Karpens a big profit, in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. They also acquired a leasehold interest in a small plot of ground which now forms a part of the site of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company's building, which they sold at a handsome profit. Then confident of the future of property farther south on the avenue, they acquired the leasehold interest in the land at Ninth street which they have now sold, with the building erected by them, to the Standard Oil company at a handsome profit.

City Ice Company Gets Property.

H. F. E. Heinss has conveyed to the City Ice and Supply company the property at the northeast corner of East End avenue and Seventy-fourth place, 330x440 feet on the south and 560 feet on the northeast, a nominal consideration being given.

NEW M'NEIL AND HIGGINS PLANT

Eight Story Structure of Wholesale Grocery House Which Will Be Ready for Occupancy on May 1.

McNEIL & HIGGINS CO.

The new home for the McNeil & Higgins company, one of the oldest wholesale grocery houses in Chicago, will be ready for occupancy on May 1. The building is eight stories high, with basement, at 251-315 East Grand avenue, faces Fairbanks court, and covers ground 400x100 feet, back to the Northwestern tracks.

The company will have about 800 feet of railroad trackage facilities, 150 feet of which run between the building and a blind alley, which permits the company to load and unload cars either directly in the warehouse or from wagons, thereby saving the cost of taking the merchandise into the warehouse if the same is to be shipped from cars.

The company will have tunnel connections, and arrangements have been made to obtain railroad receipts in its own building for all goods shipped out of the city. Two large concourses are cut into the building from East Grand avenue for city shipping and receiving of goods.

The architect is C. A. Eckstorm, and the building will cost about $400,000. The deal was consummated by Bechtel & Adcock, real estate brokers, with Ogden, Sheldon & Co. representing the Chicago Dock company. This will give the McNeil & Higgins company one of the most complete, up to date wholesale grocery plants in the United States. The transaction evidences the drift of wholesale concerns to this part of the city.

MEDIUM PRICE FLAT PROPERTY SHOWS ACTIVITY

Less Costly Buildings Move After Period of Quiet.

While there was a fairly free movement of apartment property in the aggregate last week, there was a marked scarcity of transactions of any particular magnitude, the week's business covering the medium and cheaper priced properties, which for the two preceding weeks did not cut much of a figure in the market.

A notable north side deal was the sale by Martin Anderson to Peter Hoedler of the high grade twelve flat structure of four and five rooms at the northeast corner of Arthur and Bosworth avenues, Rogers Park, on a lot 58x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a farm of 277 acres in Newton county, Indiana, subject to $11,000. The deal was negotiated by John C. Bowers & Co.

In Oakwood Boulevard.

Record was made of the acquirement by George S. Pines and Edward R. Newman, attorneys, from Gustav Carlson of the flat property in Oakwood boulevard seventy feet east of Drexel boulevard, lot 140x100 feet, south front, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000. The building contains twenty-four apartments of four and five rooms and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $8,250.

The high grade three apartment building now nearing completion at 421-23 East Sixtieth street, overlooking Washington park, has been purchased by Walter Page of Evansville, Ind., from Barnett Bros., builders, for a reported consideration of $37,500, subject to incumbrances amounting to $32,500.

Thomas Stenhaus has conveyed to Gregory T. Van Meter the property at the northwest corner of Fifty-sixth street and Drexel avenue, lot 100x135 feet, improved with a twelve apartment building of six and seven rooms, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $12,500. J. E. Ehrenhalt negotiated the deal.

H. T. Fay a Purchaser.

The new high grade three flat building at 5718 Kenmore avenue in Edgewater on a lot 50x150 feet has been sold by Axel B. Swanson to Henry T. Fry for a reported consideration of $45,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the ten room residence at 4324 Clarendon avenue. The apartments of eight rooms and three baths rent at $175 a month. Howard S. Evans of Broomell Bros. was the broker.

S. Montgomery Smith sold to Frank Ransford the property at 4401-11 La Crosse street, at the northeast corner of Montrose avenue, lot 133x48 feet, west front, with twenty-one flat building, for an expressed consideration of $50,000, subject to incumbrance of $30,000.

William H. Banford has sold to Sarah L. Phelps the six apartment building in Palmer square, fifty feet north of Palmer avenue, east front, 50x100 feet, price not disclosed, but the property is subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. Mrs. Phelps has given in part payment the property in Lawrence avenue, 225 feet west of North Washtenaw avenue, north front, 25x125, price withheld, and 48x125 feet in Burling street, forty-seven feet south of Belden avenue, east front, consideration nominal.

Pay Cash for Equity.

Stefan Schneider has sold to Ben Fitzner the fifteen apartment building, 3501 and 3503 Lexington street, southwest corner St. Louis avenue, 50x125, price withheld, subject to $10,000. The buyers paid cash for the equity. Frank J. Silfka of W. F. Kaiser & Co. negotiated the sale.

Mrs. Sarah V. M. McCarthy has sold to Max Provus the four story eight apartment building at 1106-10 North Dearborn street, between Maple and Elm streets, lot 40x150 feet, the building occupying the entire lot and having a gross annual rental of over $5,000. The purchase price is said to have been $40,000. S. A. Crowe Jr. of Crowe Bros. & Co. represented the purchaser and M. L. Freiberger the seller.

Other Flat House Sales.

There was filed for record the transfer of the new twenty-four apartment building in North Shore avenue, 156 feet east of Glenwood avenue, lot 121 feet north front by 151x239x192 feet, by C. C. Hile to Albert E. Lake, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $80,000.

The six apartment building, with 50x134 feet of ground, south front, in Rosemont avenue, 256 feet west of Greenview avenue, has been conveyed by W. N. Junker to William R. Brand, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $16,225.

Record was made of the sale by Jessie F. Leeds to Thomas Muiry of the apartment property at the northeast corner of Ellis avenue and Thirty-ninth street, lot 66x170 feet, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000.

Real Estate Transfers.

PHONE COMPANY LEASES 1 FOOT AFTER ODD DEAL

The Chicago Telephone company figured in a unique and somewhat complicated transaction, involving 1 foot and 11 inches of land in West Washington street, 140 feet west of Franklin street, the transaction being in connection with the construction of a ten story operating building to occupy 140 feet of frontage.

The property was first conveyed by the company to William W. and Edward B. Quinlan for $7,187 and then leased back by the Quinlans to the company for ninety-three years at an annual rent of $360. The transactions were made necessary because of certain provisions contained in a lease by the company from the Quinlans of the 40x180 feet at 311-15 West Washington street. In the event of building the company was required to construct a substantial foundation on the line between the Quinlan holding and the 100 feet to the west belonging to the company.

When the foundations were put in it was discovered the center of the party wall was 1 foot and 11 inches on the company's property, hence the sale and lease back, the latter to expire at the same time as the one on the forty feet originally lased from the Quinlans.

PAPER BAG CO. LEASES PLANT

Alex Friend & Co. have recently negotiated the following leases:

For N. Z. Graves corporation to the Continental Paper Bag company the five story and basement building at 436 North Ada street for a term of years, at an annual rental of $8,500. The building is served by switch track of the Pennsylvania railroad.

For the Western Newspaper Union company to Rosenthal Bros. the corner store of their building located at the southwest corner of Adams and Desplaines street, for a term of ten years, a unique feature of this deal being the fact that this is the fifth of a series of leases negotiated by this firm through these brokers during a period covering more than twenty years.

For George Beidler to the Valvoline Oil company the two story and basement building located at 108-110 North Clinton street, near Washington boulevard, for a period of years, at a term rental of $36,000.

Apartment Property in Prairie Avenue Sold

Record was made of the sale by Robert A. Gray to William O. Carr of the high class six apartment building 4515-17 Prairie avenue at a consideration of $18,000. L. Maher of Chatain & Co. was the broker.

Loan by Central Trust.

The Central Trust company is trustee in a loan of $90,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Rose V. Shuman on the property at 4617-25 Sheridan road, 124x121, west front, with flat improvements.

MINOR TRADING IN APARTMENT HOUSE HOLDINGS

The more important of the minor transactions in flat properties included the sale by Swan Isaacson to Peter Hoeffner of the six flat building at 662-64 Buckingham place, lot 50x133 feet, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $9,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the residence property at 4615-23 North Ashland avenue, lot 97x170 feet, with eight room dwelling at a reported valuation of $12,000. John W. Dunklau of R. G. Ludwig & Co. was the broker.

Carl Challa has sold to Frank M. Stressenreuter the property at the northwest corner of Morgan and Seventy-first streets, 60x114 feet, with flat improvements, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

The flat property at 5600-02 Marshfield avenue, lot 50x125 feet, has been conveyed by John Zimmerman to Joseph S. Robbins, consideration nominal, subject to $14,775.

Lena Brenner has sold to Harry Entin the property at the southwest corner of Ridgeway and Barteau avenues, lot 50x125 feet, east front, with flat improvements, consideration nominal, subjust to an incumbrance of $16,000.

The apartment house property, southwest corner of Greenview and Belle Plaine avenues, 100x162, has been sold by Louise Unzicker to Lisette Thomas, the consideration nominal, subject to $29,000.

OUTSIDE DEALS SUFFER SLUMP

As stated elsewhere there was little doing in outside business property, the week's showing being a particularly bad one.

Murray Wolbach has sold to Isador Brody the property at 4347-49 West Madison street, lot 50 feet, north front, improved with a three story building containing two stores and four flats, for a reported consideration of $27,500, taking in part payment the property at 735-37 South Western avenue, improved with a building containing two stores and four flats, subject to $8,000 incumbrance. Sol Steinberg was the broker.

The property at the northeast corner of Madison and Leavitt streets, lot 50x125 feet, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by A. O. Jackson and others to Cooper Kirk, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000.

Samuel B. Goldberg has purchased from M. C. Lipman the leasehold interest in the property at the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Spaulding avenue, 82x125 feet, the consideration being nominal. The ground is under lease for ninety-nine years from April 1, 1911, at an annual rental of $1,000.

SHERIDAN ROAD SALE REVEALS RISING VALUES

G. A. McKinloch Buys Vacant Property Near Surf.

A transaction in Sheridan road vacant of much interest because of the sharp advance in values shown in a year was the purchase by George A. McKinloch, president of the Central Electric company, from John S. Holmes, of the property in Sheridan road, 100 feet north of Surf street, east front, 97x142 feet, comprising a part of the old Sercomb homestead.

A nominal consideration is given, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000, but the actual figure is said to have been $55,000. Mr. McKinloch is said to have no immediate plans in connection with improving the property, which is said to have been purchased as a speculation.

In part payment Mr. McKinloch conveyed the residence property at 1712 Prairie avenue, lot 50x170 feet, with residence improvements, also the property at 1150-52 East Forty-seventh street, fifty feet west of Woodlawn avenue, lot 50x100 feet, south front, improved with a four story eight apartment building known as the Astoria. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. represented both parties to the transaction. Mr. Holmes purchased the property about a year ago for $45,000.

John E. Northup to Talk Before the Realty Board

John E. Northup, former assistant state's attorney and special prosecutor of election frauds, will be the speaker at Tuesday's weekly luncheon of the Cook county real estate board at the Hotel Sherman, his subject being "A Live Wire." It was announced at last week's luncheon that the Real Estate Advertiser had arranged to give the street numbers in connection with its regular weekly publication of the ransfers.

Senate Fines Detractor.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 3.—Willard Carver, president of the Carver Chiropractic college, was this afternoon found guilty by the state senate on charges of contempt and sentenced to ten days in the county jail and fined $500. Carver ran an advertisement in a local paper headed "Was the Senate Bought?"

VACANT SALES FURNISH WEEK'S BEST FEATURE

New Business District on Near North Side Is Again Active.

Sales of vacant, some of them involving important improvements, were the most conspicuous feature of the week's market.

The new near north side business district furnished an interesting transaction in the sale by F. S. Burch & Co. of the vacant property at the southwest corner of Ontario street and Fairbanks court, 135 feet on the former and 136 feet on Fairbanks court.

Title was taken by Phillip Folwell of Philadelphia, and while the consideration was not disclosed, it is said to have been between $80,000 and $90,000. The deal was negotiated by Edwin J. Bowes Jr., representing the purchasers, and J. J. Harrington & Co., who represented the sellers.

Plans are being prepared by Marshall & Fox for the construction of a three story concrete-steel construction building, the cost of which will be between $150,000 and $200,000. It will be occupied by the Automat Vending company for its manufacturing and commissary headquarters.

American Radiator Buys.

The American Radiator company purchased from F. B. Sanders the 75x125 feet in Crosby street, 175 feet southeast of Oak street, east front, the 58x125 feet, east front, 275 feet southeast of Crosby street, and the 115x112 feet at the southwest corner of Larrabee and Crosby streets, a nominal consideration being given in each instance. It was stated the property, which adjoins the present warehouse of the company, was acquired for future possible requirements, there being no plans looking to its immediate improvement.

The property bounded by Avondale, Menard, and Maynard avenue extended and the Chicago and Northwestern railway right of way, comprising a tract of about five and one-half acres, has been conveyed by Edith R. Lundy to John E. Van Natta, a nominal consideration being given, the transfer being subject to two trust deeds. It is said that property in that vicintiy is valued at about $2,500 an acre.

Forest Preserve Deal.

Record was made of the transfer by Mrs. Augusta Lehmann and others to the forest preserve district of Cook county of a tract of twenty-seven acres at the intersection of the Desplaines river and the "Soo" line in the town of Cicero for an expressed consideration of $23,357.

A. L. Mulkey has conveyed to Daniel Condon the property at the northeast corner of Chestnut street and De Witt court, 100x110 feet, consideration not disclosed. Mr. Mulkey took title to this land some time ago, the announcement being made at the time that he contemplated the construction of a large apartment house.

The vacant property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Ainslie streets, 33x150 feet, has been purchased by Herbert W. Duncanson from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, consideration nominal.

West Side Vacant.

W. D. Kerfoot & Co. have closed the sale of 100x125 feet of vacant on the west side of Halsted street, between Wood and Blackhawk streets, for Mrs. Susan Arden Robbins of New York City to Godlip A. Buresh of Chicago, who is said to have no immediate plans for the improvement of the property. The sale is of interest for the reason that it closes out all of the Robbins holdings in Elston addition in which the Robbins family have been large owners for many years. In 1855 Allen Robbins was one of the first of those who laid out Elston addition to Chicago.

Leases and Loans.

THERE was a fairly good representation of leases and loans in the week's business, although the number of downtown leases was not large.

One of the most important of these covers about 3,000 square feet of floor space on the second floor of the new part of the Borland building, La Salle and Monroe streets, which has been leased to Perry, Price & Co., stocks and bonds, for a term of five years from April 1 at a reported annual rental of about $9,500.

Peck & Peck of 586 Fifth avenue, New York have leased from Francis A. Hardy the store at 4 North Michigan avenue in the Tower building at the northwest corner of the avenue and Madison street for a term rental of $34,400. The lessee firm has two stores in Fifth avenue, New York, one at Palm Beach, and one in Newport. Oliver & Co. represented the lessees and Gilbert Scribner Mr. Hardy.

The W. K. Cowan Furniture company has leased from Leslie R. Harsha the four story mill, sprinkled building on a lot 125x125 feet at the northeast corner of Kinzie and Lincoln streets, together with the four story reinforced concrete building adjoining on the north, which Mr. Harsha has just completed. These buildings are equipped with power plant, dry kilns, etc., being particularly well adapted for a furniture factory. The lease is for a term rental of $54,000. Hart & Whetston were the brokers.

The Emerson Shoe company of Rockland, Mass., has leased from the Leiter estate the store at 206-08 West Monroe street for a term of years at a reported annual rental of $2,000. The space will be used as the western stock department of the company, of which T. H. Harper is sales manager. Edwin D. Wurmser of the office of Roy S. Stein was the broker.

Record was made of the lease by W. D. McJunkin to John Cologer and Constantine Debelakos of the store at 2005-07 Irving Park boulevard, for a term from Feb. 20, 1917, to April 30, 1928, at a term rent of $24,749.

The Standard Trust and Savings bank is trustee in a 6 per cent bond issue loan of $140,000, under the Torrens system, to Harry L. Hagerman, secured by the fifty-eight apartment building to be erected on 270x125 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Wesley and Harrison, and the southwest corner of Clarence and Harrison streets, Oak Park. The loan matures in three to ten years and the value of the land and buildings is placed at $215,000. George H. Nelson & Co. negotiated the loan.

Thomas A. Oakley gave to the First Trust and Savings bank a trust deed to the property, 120x270 feet, on the north side of Thirty-seventh street, between Ashland and Racine avenues, in the Central Manufacturing district, to obtain $125,000 for nineteen years at 5½ per cent.

Greenebaum Sons' Bank & Trust company is trustee in a serial bond issue loan of $65,000, one to six years, on the new plant of the Elgin Motor Car corporation at Archer avenue and Sixty-first street in Argo.

Taxpayers Start Final Rush to Avoid Penalties

Taxpayers who have delayed payment of their special assessments are joining the annual rush to the city collector's office. The books close on March 10. After that date all current unpaid assessments are returned delinquent to the county collector, who is authorized to sell property for nonpayment of special assessments. Additional clerks have been assigned, and City Collector Charles J. Forsberg will keep his office open all day Saturday, March 10.

Non-Speculative Farm Mortgages
In these uncertain times the farm mortgage offers an ideal investment for those investors who are anxious to safeguard their funds and at the same time receive a maximum interest return. Farm mortgages are not subject to the vagaries of the stock or bond market. Large investors, especially insurance companies, are purchasing all the good farm mortgages they can secure.
Each mortgage we offer has its independent productive farm as security. During our 32 years' experience of lending money to the American Farmer we have not permitted a single client to suffer loss. Send for free booklets on the subject.

Use the Safe Polish

You are right to refuse any other than the tried-and-true cleaner and polish for your highly prized possessions. It doesn't pay to take a chance with your beautiful piano, a dear old heirloom, or any choice bit of furniture. You, too, like more than a million other women, can depend for safe and certain results on

LIQUID VENEER

Endorsed by the National Housewives' League

It isn't a mineral oil, so it can never soften, darken or discolor a brilliant finish, nor spread a greasy film to catch dust and soil clothing. If that has happened, Liquid Veneer will remedy the damage—but begin with it and let Liquid Veneer keep all your furniture and woodwork as beautiful, clean and brilliant as new. It's true economy—both in the using of it and the refinishing cost it will save. The ideal way to use Liquid Veneer is with our new L-V Dust Cloth—you can get one free with a 50c bottle on any Friday. Ask your dealer, or write us, enclosing top of 50c package.

Saves Washing!

Spray your car with Auto Liquid Veneer. Cleans and polishes in 10 minutes for 5 cents. Preserves the finish. Removes dust, light mud and road tar. Send $1.25 for complete outfit, enough for twenty cleanings.

FIFTY YEARS devoted exclusively to the corset industry, designing for and fitting thousands of women, has resulted in the creation of

Sylvia Corsets

FEW WOMEN HAVE PERFECT FIGURES. Corset makers make corsets which serve to accentuate imperfections. SYLVIA CORSETS—made under my new, original and copyrighted system of fitting by models—are made on the lines of the ideal figure and YOUR FIGURE IS MADE TO CONFORM TO THOSE LINES. This system has revolutionized the old method of cutting and making corsets to measurements.

TO ALTER A CORSET AFTER ITS COMPLETION often destroys the original lines of the garment. My new system of fitting eliminates the necessity of making alterations.

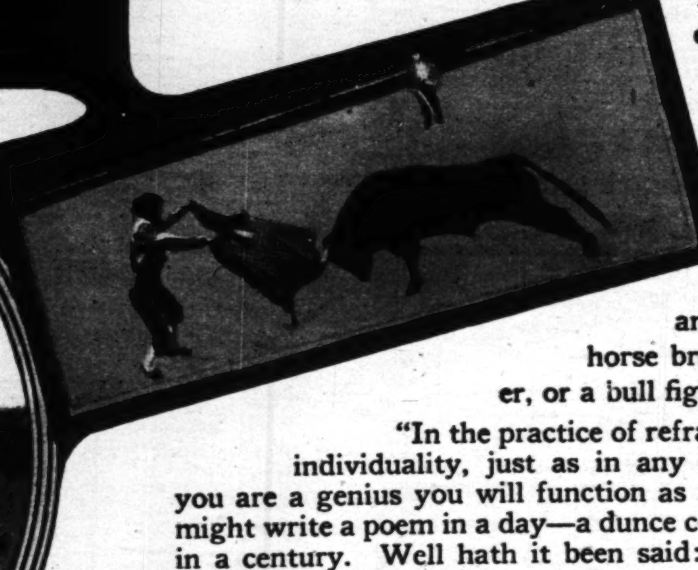
J. H. Ostrander, famous refractionist and optician, pays his respects to the Belladonna family. A 40 minutes' talk compressed into three minutes for the benefit of 3,000,000 busy Tribune fans and friends of these charming colored pages, interesting, punchy, instructive.

"Since my photo appeared some months ago in the Rotogravure Section of The Chicago Sunday Tribune, together with a photograph of, and hearty indorsement by, Sir Thomas Lipton, K. C. V. O., of London, England, I have received innumerable letters asking about my fees, my methods of fitting glasses, whether or not I used dangerous drugs, etc.

J. H. OSTRANDER

"My examination fees are seldom more than $5.00. My methods are the methods of the horse breaker, the bull fighter, and the lion tamer; namely, quick thinking, quick decision, and rapid manipulation. The horse breaker's maneuvers the first minute after mounting generally tell which is the master. And so, in testing the eyes of strong, healthy school children or adults under 35 years (especially if they are hyperopic), the operator must think, decide, and act with lightning rapidity to get results before the ciliary muscles grow tense, for often, inside of two minutes, these bucking bronchos, these wild bulls—the ciliary muscles—have become tense, excited, uncontrollable, and woe to the operator who has not acted with the speed of the whirlwind, has not lassoed them, who is not master of the situation before this happens. The man who possesses this master stroke will often do in thirty seconds that which the stupid operator (even with the aid of drugs) cannot do in thirty days. If you have not thrown your lasso with strength and precision, and if these muscles have gained the lead, have stampeded—'good night.' The patient must then suffer the discomforts of having the eyes poisoned with atropine until paralyzed. The operator may now take his time, but his results will be the results of the eye paralyzed and not the normal eye—a condition they were never in before and never will be again. Why fit a paralyzed eye for sober, normal work?

"I am not saying that atropine should never be used as a remedial agency. I am not even saying that there might not be rare, very rare, occasions for its use as a mydriatic. I am speaking against its common, every-day use in fitting glasses, against its use as a getter of fees, as an impression maker. I am speaking against the use of a deadly drug as a necessary aid to clumsy, stupid operators.



"If the horse breaker could paralyze the horse, if the lion tamer could paralyze the lion, and if the bull fighter could paralyze the bull, anybody could be a horse breaker, a lion tamer, or a bull fighter.

"In the practice of refraction you express individuality, just as in any other calling. If you are a genius you will function as a genius. A poet might write a poem in a day—a dunce could not write one in a century. Well hath it been said: 'Blessed is that man who has found his work.'"

You, too, can have the charm of "A skin you love to touch."

You can begin tonight to actually bring to your complexion the greater loveliness and charm you have longed for.

Don't say, "It's useless to try to change the skin itself,"—it changes every day in spite of you. Old skin dies and new skin forms. This new skin will be just what you make it.

Begin the following Woodbury treatment tonight and this new skin will become so healthy and active that you will see a marked improvement in a week or ten days.

Dip a cloth in warm water and hold it to the face until the skin is softened and damp. Now take a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and go over your face with the cake itself just as a man does with a shaving stick. Then dip your hands in warm water and with the tips of your fingers work up a lather from the soap left on your face. Rub this cleansing, antiseptic lather thoroughly but gently into the pores of your skin, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

If your skin is thin, or rather sensitive, substitute a dash of ice water for the application of the ice itself.

Take five minutes for this treatment every day at your most convenient time. Use it persistently, and your skin will take on, gradually but surely, the clearness, freshness and charm of "A skin you love to touch." A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this "skin you love to touch" treatment. Get a cake today and begin tonight to get its benefits for your skin.

This painting in exquisite soft colorings is a most beautiful conception of "A skin you love to touch." The artist is Z. P. Nikolaki, the popular illustrator. We have been extremely successful in reproducing this painting so perfectly that it is difficult to tell the reproduction from the original. Send your name and address with 10c in stamps or coin and we will mail you a copy, 15x19 inches, in full colors; also a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough for a week's treatment. Write today! Address, The Andrew Jergens Co., 1904 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, O.

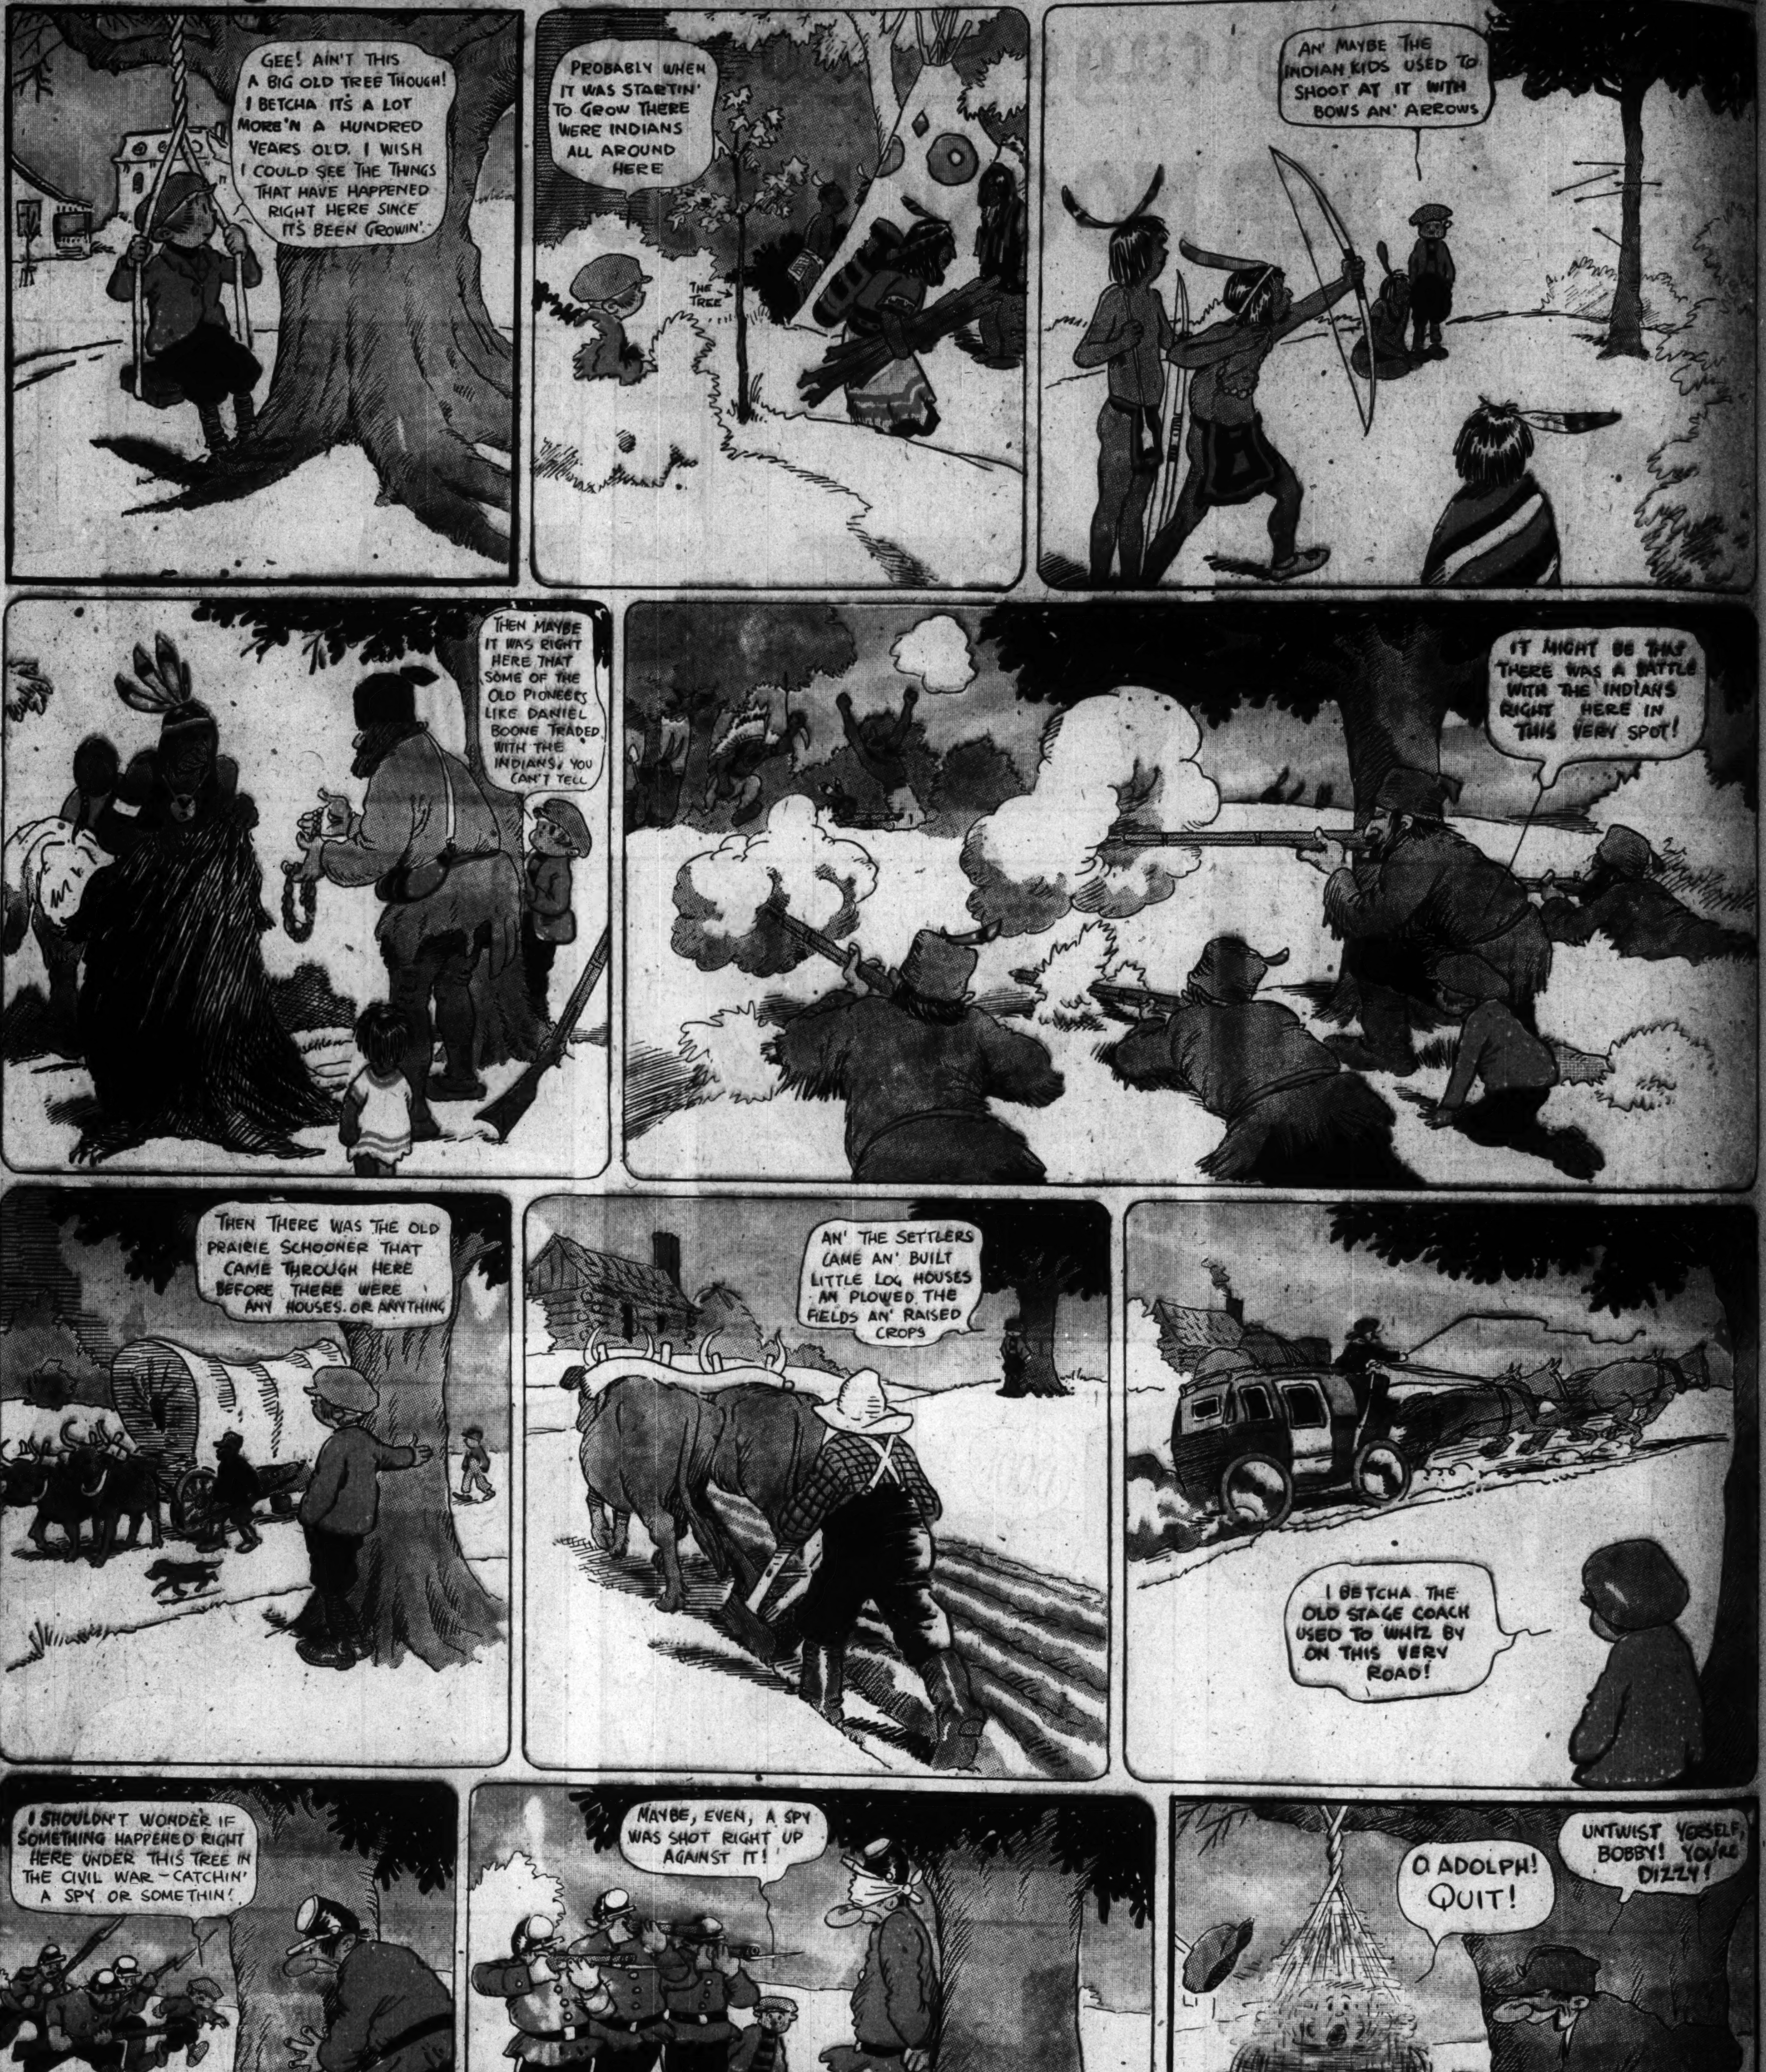
IMAGINES THE OLD TREE HAS BEEN A WITNESS OF STIRRING EVENTS.

ALL RIGHT, KIDS, THE LETTERS TELLING WHAT TO DO WITH ADOLPH HAVE BEEN COMING IN. ONE OF YOUR SUGGESTIONS WILL BE ACTED OUT HERE, IN A WEEK OR TWO. WATCH!



GEE! AIN'T THIS A BIG OLD TREE THOUGH! I BETCHA IT'S A LOT MORE'N A HUNDRED YEARS OLD. I WISH I COULD SEE THE THINGS THAT HAVE HAPPENED RIGHT HERE SINCE IT'S BEEN GROWIN'.
PROBABLY WHEN IT WAS STARTIN' TO GROW THERE WERE INDIANS ALL AROUND HERE
THE TREE
AN' MAYBE THE INDIAN KIDS USED TO SHOOT AT IT WITH BOWS AN' ARROWS
THEN MAYBE IT WAS RIGHT HERE THAT SOME OF THE OLD PIONEERS LIKE DANIEL BOONE TRADED WITH THE INDIANS, YOU CAN'T TELL
IT MIGHT BE THAT THERE WAS A BATTLE WITH THE INDIANS RIGHT HERE IN THIS VERY SPOT!
THEN THERE WAS THE OLD PRAIRIE SCHOONER THAT CAME THROUGH HERE BEFORE THERE WERE ANY HOUSES, OR ANYTHING
AN' THE SETTLERS CAME AN' BUILT LITTLE LOG HOUSES AN PLOWED THE FIELDS AN' RAISED CROPS
I BETCHA THE OLD STAGE COACH USED TO WHIZ BY ON THIS VERY ROAD!
I SHOULDN'T WONDER IF SOMETHING HAPPENED RIGHT HERE UNDER THIS TREE IN THE CIVIL WAR—CATCHIN' A SPY OR SOMETHIN'.
MAYBE, EVEN, A SPY WAS SHOT RIGHT UP AGAINST IT!
O ADOLPH! QUIT!
UNTWIST YERSELF, BOBBY! YOU'RE DIZZY!

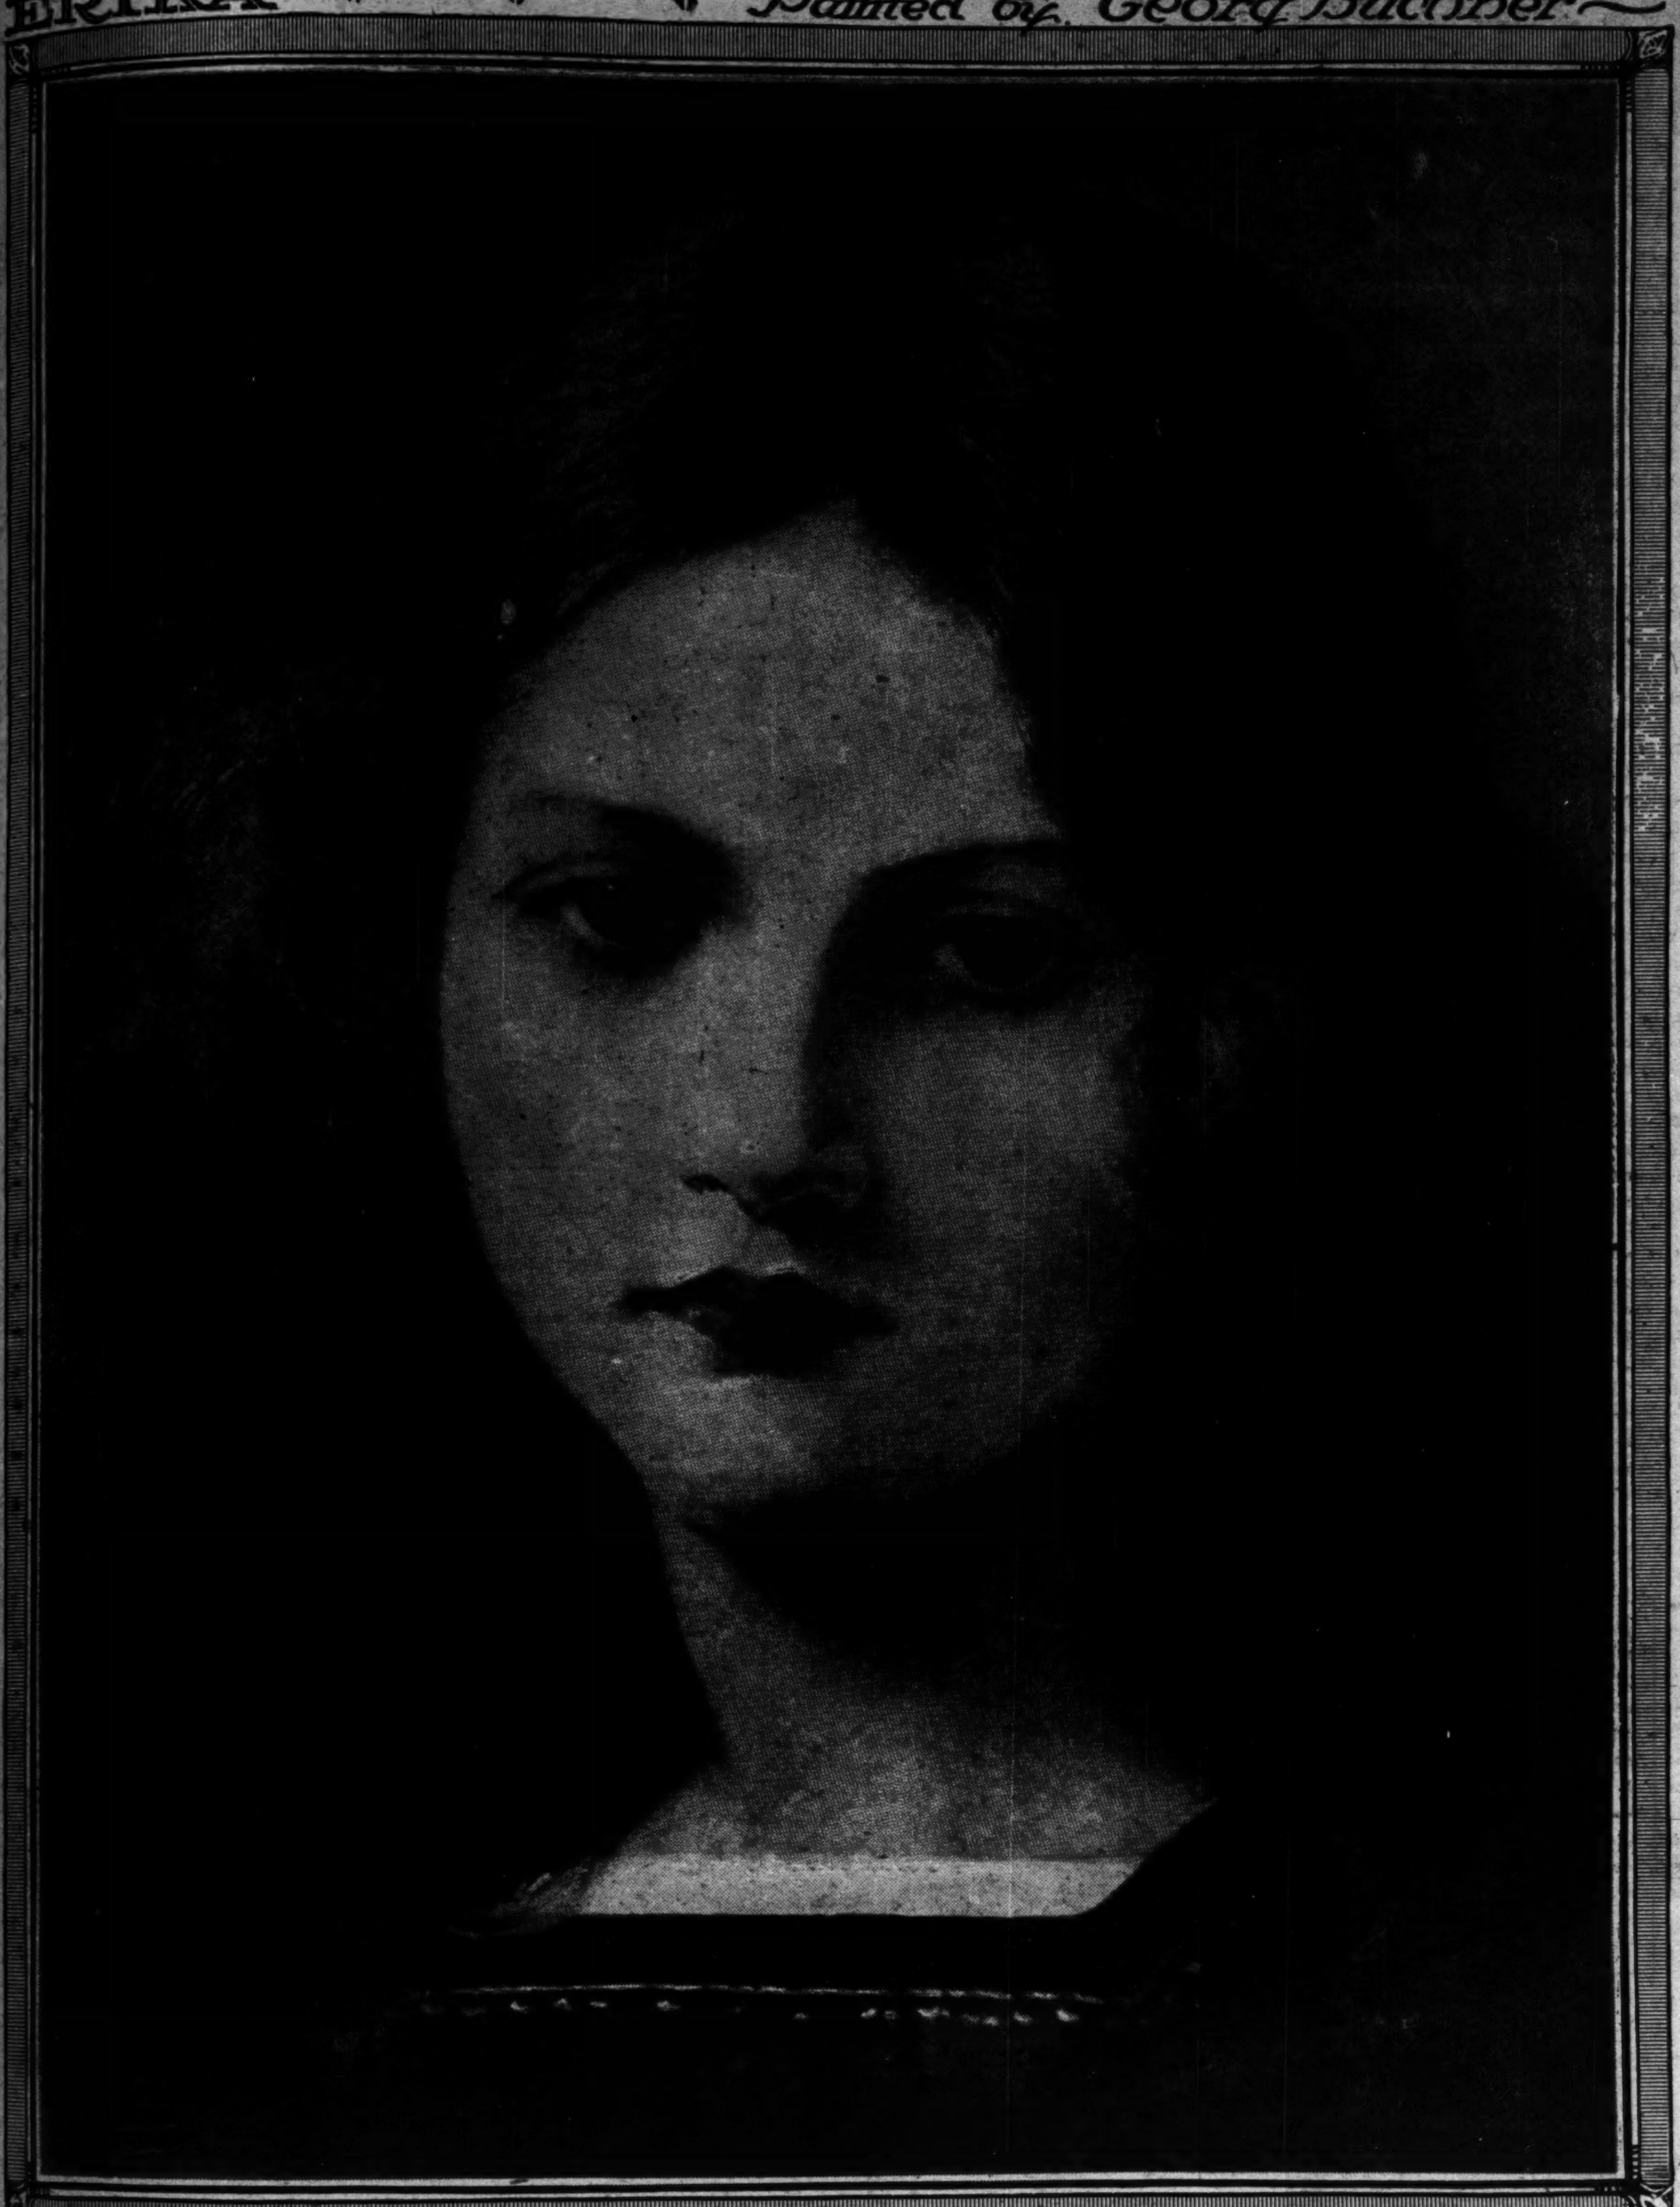
ERIKA ✥ ✥ ✥ Painted by Georg Buchner



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"Erika," by George Buchner. Born at Ampfing, Bavaria, in 1858.

THERE is much of the virginal beauty beloved of the old Venetian masters in this painting by the Bavarian Buchner. A brilliant and impressive colorist in all that he does, he brings out in this instance the Titian red of the gold hair, the soft gleam of the fresh young skin, the strain of haunting desire in the dark eyes which look out questioningly on a world which, for all they know, contains only peace and happiness and a divine, pervading good.

Buchner possessed the diverse, versatile qualities of an artist of conspicuous talent. He had a distinct taste for the picturesque and yet withal a tender, touching sweetness. He comes from an old Bavarian family and studied first at Freising and later industrial art at Munich.

At the time of the secession in Munich, when many of the artists of the old school broke away and established new ideas in art, Buchner joined the advanced group. One of his first big successes was a spectacular painting called the "Ex-voto." Besides this he made a big name for himself in the illustrating he did for the Fliegende Blätter.

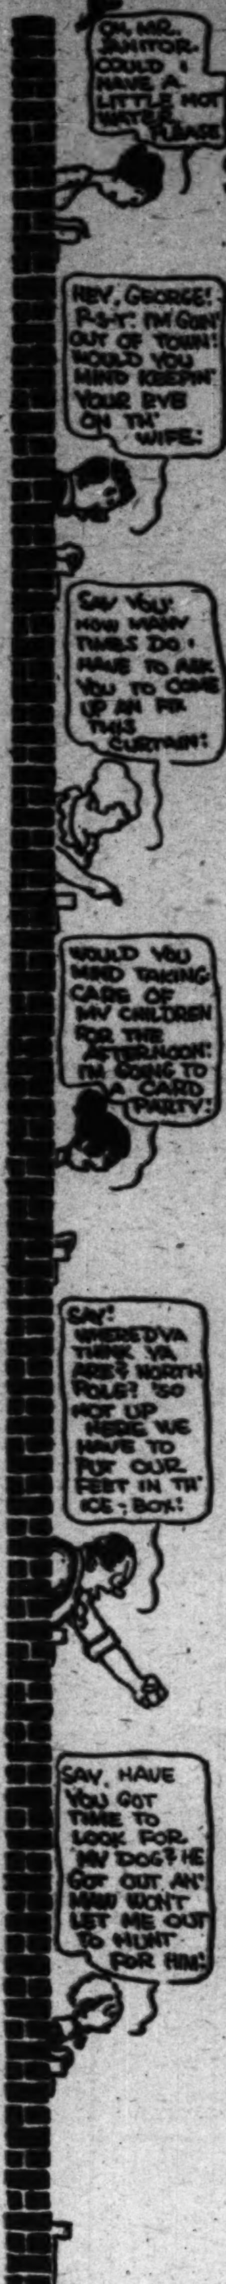
He was successful from the beginning of his career in the character studies he did of Bavarian country life, and the sunny happiness of his own disposition and the well ordered passing of his days is reflected in the great majority of his work.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

Putting the Gurgle into the Steam Pipes

by ONEY FRED SWEET

"It Was a Cold Night Outside and the New Janitor Was Sticking Close by the Furnace."



OH, MR. JANITOR. COULD I HAVE A LITTLE HOT WATER, PLEASE
HEY, GEORGE! P-S-T! I'M GOIN' OUT OF TOWN! WOULD YOU MIND KEEPIN' YOUR EYE ON TH' WIFE:
SAY YOU! HOW MANY TIMES DO I HAVE TO ASK YOU TO COME UP AN' FIX THIS CURTAIN!
WOULD YOU MIND TAKING CARE OF MY CHILDREN FOR THE AFTERNOON? I'M GOING TO A CARD PARTY!
SAY! WHERED'YA THINK YA ARE? NORTH POLE? 'SO HOT UP HERE WE HAVE TO PUT OUR FEET IN TH' ICE-BOX!
SAY, HAVE YOU GOT TIME TO LOOK FOR MY DOG? HE GOT OUT AN' MAW WON'T LET ME OUT TO HUNT FOR HIM!

IT'S a six flat building. It has tall, white colonial pillars in front and in one corner of the entrance there's a gold sign to the effect that "all deliveries must be made at the rear." In the vestibule there are speaking tubes and at the back there's sleeping porches that in summer are shaded with striped awnings. But down in the basement there wasn't much class. I was sticking pretty close to the furnace, into which I was shoveling "mine run" coal every little while. It was a cold night outside.

When I wasn't shoveling in coal and poking around in the fire to keep it from going out I was spending my spare minutes reading a paper backed novel that one of the tenants had thrown into the garbage. The novel was by Bertha M. Clay and in certain places it was so interesting that I almost forgot to shovel in coal. I couldn't help but wonder how life could be so exciting in novels and yet so dull in reality. And what could be duller than the life of a flat janitor?

William F. Quesse, president of the Chicago Flat Janitors' union, had told me just about what to expect in my new career. I had called on him to express my hopes and dreams.

"Go to it if your heart's set on it," Mr. Quesse had told me, "but it is no more than fair that you should know at the start that a janitor has more employers to contend with than any other laboring man in the world. You will find yourself a go-between for agent, owner, and tenant. You will work twenty-four hours out of the twenty-four and you will do well to bear in mind that if you make an enemy of a tenant it's always easier to discharge a janitor and get a new one than it is to get a new renter. Your day off? I don't know when it will be unless it is the second Tuesday of each week."

That afternoon the woman in the flat just above where I stoked the furnace had asked me to come up and fix one of her curtains. The curtain had a habit, she had explained, of flopping clear to the ceiling whenever she gave it the least little touch. I had gone after that curtain with every tool I could find in the basement and, upon declaring the job complete, the woman had tipped me a quarter. Although I don't suppose the tenants directly over me realized the fact, from my location by the furnace I could hear distinctly every word that was uttered on the floor above. I wouldn't have cared what they talked about if they hadn't talked about me. As it was, I pricked up my ears.

"Did you give that boy a quarter to fix this thing?" I now heard friend husband roar. I guess things must have gone wrong with him down at the office during the day, but I didn't feel it was my fault if he had been playing the market.

"Something just had to be done with it," came the hysterical retort, "and he seemed so willing to do what he could."

"Look at it," came in a roaring interruption. "Look at the thing!"

I always did hate hearing myself talked about and I have always resented being referred to as a "boy." At first I stuck my fingers in my ears, but later I went over to my bunk and wrapped one of the quilts about my head. Keeping the quilt about my ears, I reviewed further my conversation with the president of the union.

"You will find," Mr. Quesse had told me, "that as well as being a janitor you will also be expected to be a guardian of all the children in the building. Men leave their flats, their wives, and their families in the janitor's care while they are away and when they are home the janitor is held responsible for any situation that may arise. Being a janitor, you are not supposed to have any children yourself, but in order to be a first class janitor you must have a wife. If it so happens that you do have children they must not mix with the children of the tenants for fear they might contaminate them. You will be supposed to make the grass grow on lawns and keep the vestibule clean, yet if the children of the tenants spoil the lawns or litter up the vestibule you are not supposed to rebuke them. The children may make faces at you, but you mustn't say a word. 'How dare you, a dirty janitor, talk to my children that way!' I've been a flat janitor for twenty years; I ought to know how it goes."

But there weren't any children in this building I was janiting.

"Well," he had encouraged me, "if you don't have the children problem you'll have a bunch of fresh air fiends, and you can bet on that. You'll have the parties who keep their windows open all night while you heat all outdoors and they'll expect it to be nice and cosy two minutes after they get up and shut the windows. A mild day will come along and one of these fresh air cranks will open all the windows and yell for more heat. You want to keep on the good side of the tenant, so you fire up. All well and good, but along comes the landlord and finds you with steam on and he'll want to know why you aren't practicing more economy with the fuel."

"They hadn't better try to start anything with me," I had blustered.

"Suppose you don't have the children problem or any fresh air fiends out to your place," Mr. Quesse had gone on. "Take it from me you'll have at least one tenant who has got to get up at an ungodly hour to go to work and he'll want heat and hot water before he leaves the house. And at the other end of the perfect day you'll have another tenant who for some reason or other is kept out until the early hours of the morning and he'll want heat and hot water when he gets home. A man may be able to endure just so many hours on the job, but between these two you'll be putting in a full day. If you don't have an early bird and a night owl, I'll guarantee you get one of those guys on your list who is renting a room of some tenant to help meet the rent that Mr. Tenant couldn't otherwise afford. And this roomer gentleman, do you know what he expects?—hotel bellboy service out of the janitor at all hours."

"I'll get my own room rent free," I had insisted.

"And that room will be located between the boiler and the coal hole," Mr. Quesse had added. "What heat you get will be from the pipes that coil near the ceiling—return pipes—and they won't keep your feet warm on a cold night."

"Every cloud has a silver lining," I had philosophised.

"The silver lining has just about been taken out of the janitor's cloud," I was told. "Time was when a tenant didn't eat all his roast chicken on Sunday he brought a few of the left over pieces down to the janitor. How is it nowadays? Why, the tenants come down to the basement to borrow part of the janitor's dinner to make out a meal for themselves. The life is a hard one any way you look at it. You must constantly swallow your pride or look for a new place, and a janitor's wife finds it just as unpleasant to pull up the tacks out of her carpet as any man's wife does. All the world loves a moving job, don't it? And there's another thing I haven't told you about. There's a city law that demands a separation of garbage, but the chances are your tenant will overlook this fact and you will get garbage, paper, tin cans, and refuse all dumped together. Then it's up to you to dig in with your hands and make the separation yourself. If you find the flies buzzing about you next summer don't blame the flies."

"I suppose a janitor does have to be somewhat of a diplomat," I had suggested.

"Diplomat is right," I was assured. "Diplomat and detective. If one of your tenants is suspicious of his wife he'll come down like [illegible] not and ask you to keep a close eye on her and report to him regularly. And diplomat! Well, just wait until two of the women upstairs want to use the laundry on the same morning and it's left to you to decide in favor of one and against the other. If some one loses something, the janitor is responsible somehow or other. If there's a defect in the building or the boiler, who gets the blame?—the janitor."

I recalled my whole conversation with Mr. Quesse as I lay on the bunk with the quilt over my ears. Finally I cautiously removed the quilt. The conversation above had shifted to a discussion of the president's inaugural and I began to hunt for my place in the novel I had been reading. The novel kept getting more and more exciting as I read along. It was so exciting that I gave not a thought to what the weather might be doing outside. Along toward midnight I felt myself getting chilly, but I huddled up in the quilt a little more and kept right on turning the pages, skipping the descriptions. There wasn't anything in the novel about garbage and "mine run" coal and carrying out ashes. It was about——

A pounding noise startled me. Some one was wrapping on a radiator and the pipes carried the sound direct to my ear drums. I jumped off the bunk and rubbed my eyes. Then I went over to the old furnace and opened the door. A stiff wind had come up and I had left all the drafts open. Did you ever look upon a furnace fire that had passed away? It gave every indication of having been dead for hours. I began to poke around in the black depths trying to revive a spark of life, but she was a goner. My teeth were chattering and my fingers were numb and I could see my breath in front of me as I hunted around for a box to break up for kindling. I could only conjecture as to how conditions were upstairs. From somewhere in the neighborhood a clock struck 2. Some one must have come home late.

But I got the fire going again and I don't think anybody knew the difference. And during the time the furnace was out, luckily for me, the water pipes didn't freeze. It would have made a fine finish to this story if the water pipes had frozen and a radiator busted or something, but such an event didn't happen, so I can't say it did. At the present writing I am still on the job and keeping a close eye on the garbage for another paper backed novel. Maybe you live in one of the flats upstairs. If so, do the right thing by me and I'll try to do the right thing by you. If it ain't asking too much, I'd like to hang onto this job until the weather warms up.

The Curriculum Of Levity

by Berton Braley

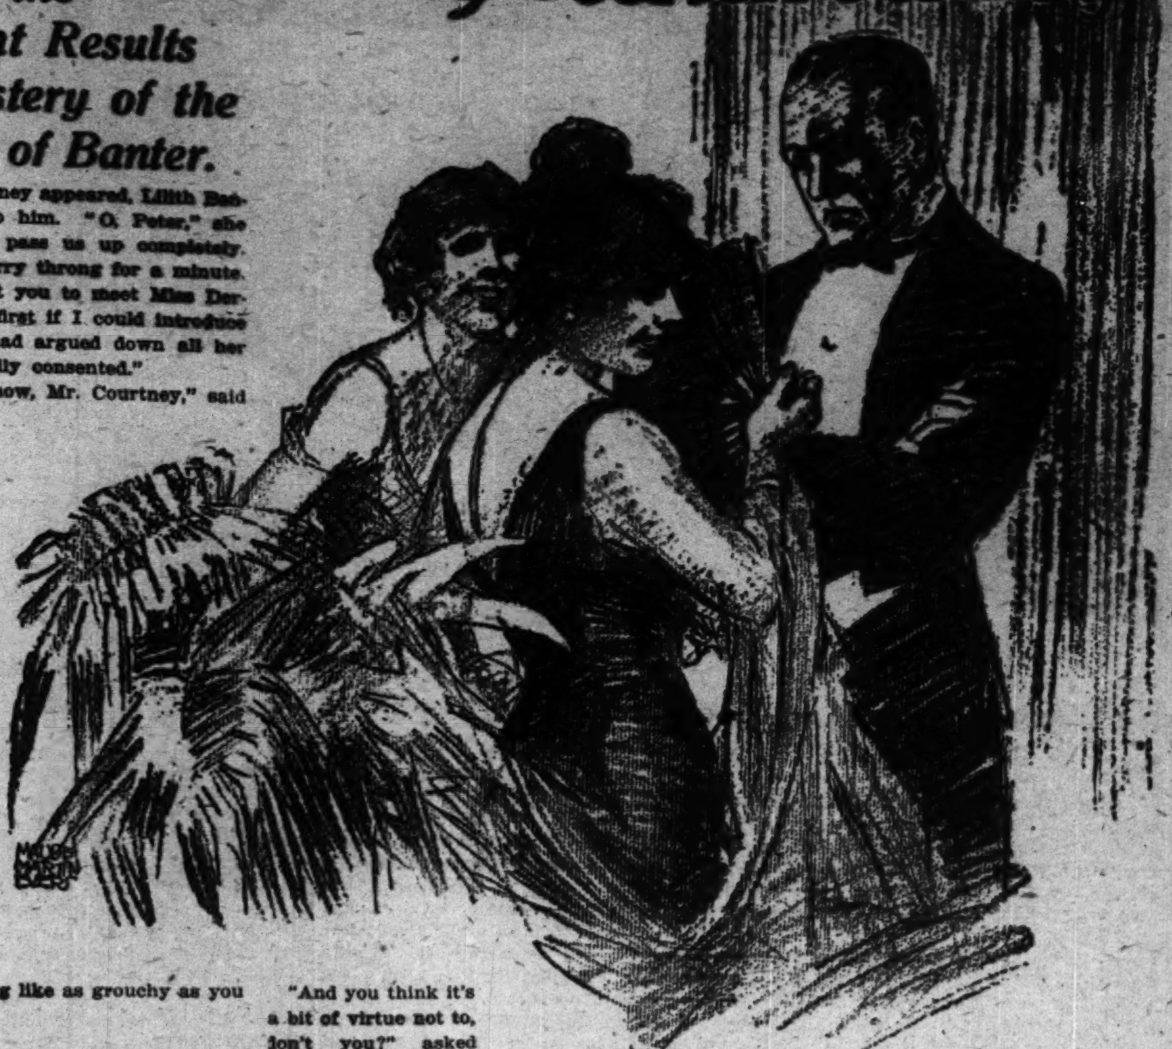
Showing the Beneficent Results of a Mastery of the Fine Art of Banter.

As Peter Courtney appeared, Lilith Bender called to him. "O, Peter," she said, "don't pass us up completely. Join our merry throng for a minute. I particularly want you to meet Miss Dering. I asked her first if I could introduce her, and after I had argued down all her objections she finally consented."

"Of course, by now, Mr. Courtney," said Miss Dering, who was very good to look upon and beautifully gowned, "you have learned to allow for imagination, picturesqueness, charm and humor rather than meticulous accuracy in Lilith's remarks. As a matter of fact I've been badgering her to bring you over."

"Why?" asked Courtney.

"Because," Miss Dering explained, with a quick darting smile, I wanted to see if you really were anything like as grouchy as you look."



"I wanted to see if you were anything like as grouchy as you look."

Courtney flushed.

"Do I look grouchy?" he asked.

"Not this moment," the girl admitted, "but you have for half an hour. I've been watching you to see if you'd smile—once. You didn't."

"I——"

"I know," Miss Dering said. "Lilith tells me that you despise social amenities and have a distaste for all this fluff and frivol, and you come just to bring your sister, and," she twinkled at him, "I know you think you've been looking stern and disdainful and superior all evening—but you haven't. You've merely looked peevish, and if I were your mother I'd have sent you up to bed without your supper."

Courtney's eyes snapped. "I suppose," he observed, with a touch of acridity, "that if I were one of these ready retort boys I'd reply that the idea of your being a mother to me is impossible for me to imagine in the face of such youth and beauty as you possess; but inasmuch as social banter is out of my line, I shall have to accept your verdict with what equanimity I can." He bowed stiffly and started away.

Lilith Bender touched his arm. "Peter," she said, "you're the rudest thing I ever saw. And the touchiest. And Grace Dering is quite right when she says you look peevish. You do. And you act it, too. Come now, be a sport. I've heard you reduce a nice, bright, gay little butterfly of a debutante to the verge of tears with your brutal frankness—now take a little of your own medicine and don't make faces over it. You and Grace ought to be good friends, and you're going to be."

Courtney, while not a rich man, earned a big salary, and because of his connections, his reputation as an architect, and the standing of his forebears in the social register, was received everywhere, in spite of a wholly unrestrained frankness and a reverence for truth and plain speaking which made no concessions. And nobody seemed to have informed him that he wasn't polite until Mrs. Bender's outburst on this occasion.

"Lilith," he said, after ten seconds' silence, "I beg your pardon and that of Miss Dering. It's a bum sport that won't take his own medicine. Will you dance the next with me, Miss Dering, or would you prefer somebody else?"

"You look to me, from what I so far have noted, like a bad dancer. I think I'd rather sit it out with you."

Courtney made a rather wry face at this dose of his own prescription, but said nothing as he led Miss Dering away to a convenient nook.

As they sank into the big chairs of the library, Courtney remarked, "I'm afraid you'll find me a trifle dull; I don't go in much for small talk."

"And you think it's a bit of virtue not to, don't you?" asked Miss Dering. "But it isn't. You ought to have some small talk. As a matter of fact, it takes a good deal of brains and alertness to indulge in what you call empty badinage of society. Maybe you aren't clever enough for it."

"I hate all this trivial stuff," exploded Courtney. "Dances, cheap ragtime music, silly girls, men with their brains in their feet—I hate 'em."

Miss Dering laughed. "And probably you plume yourself on your inability to play the social game. But you shouldn't. A man who amounts to anything has to go out a good deal to keep from being too soddenly serious and too one sided. He has to meet people, dull people, bright people, conventional people—all kinds of people. And if you can't mix a little with them all and rather like it, there's something the matter with you.

"You pride yourself on having no pose," she went on, "but you have one and I know what it is. You're posing to despise society frivol and you pretend to be superior to it when you're jealous to death of the fellows who can do the thing better than you can. Now, be honest, isn't that true?"

Courtney thought for a full two minutes, or seemed to; but he was doing it only as a bluff, for he knew she had struck home. His two minutes was not to think, but to summon resolution enough to confess. He swallowed, looked up, grinned shamefacedly, and replied, "Y-yes, I guess you've hit it."

Miss Dering looked at him with shining eyes. And though she'd only known him ten minutes, she reached over and patted his hand. "You're a dear," she said "to admit it that way. And I like you heaps for it."

"But you've marked yourself for a job now," said Courtney, "you've taken a boy to raise."

"How do you mean?" Miss Dering asked.

"I mean that you've got me interested in frivolity and that it is in sheer justice up to you to teach me how to frivol. It'll be like starting to teach his letters to a kid."

"Only instead of three R's it'll be the three F's," said Miss Dering, "frivol, froth and fun."

"Four F's," suggested Courtney, "add femininity."

"In general?" queried the girl.

"In general—yes," he agreed, "but also in particular. And you're to be the particular."

Miss Dering gave him a smile.

"I think," she observed, "that you are already beyond the 'a b ab's' of the education. Conversationally you'll 'do' just as soon as you put your mind to it."

"The only intellectual effort required," asserted Courtney, "in saying nice things to you is one of repression."

"I hate to be dull," said Miss Dering, "but I don't quite get the subtle significance of that."

"I merely mean to intimate that you inspire sentiments of such extravagant praise that it requires repression not to put them in song. I'd do it, but I can't sing."

"I begin to believe," said Miss Dering, "that you are quite adequate in airy badinage and I have nothing to teach you. The next step then is dancing."

"In other words," Courtney suggested, "the next step is a one-step. Will you dance it with me?"

"I wonder if you'll prove as unexpectedly equipped for dancing as I find you for talk," Miss Dering remarked as she rose.

"I have adequate feet, if that is what you mean," Courtney commented, glancing down at his number nines, "but I seem to have no exact ideas as to where to put them when I dance."

They moved out on the floor, but after two minutes Miss Dering limped to an alcove with him and sat down.

"Mere intellectual application," she observed, "may teach one how to direct a conversation, but it seems to be inadequate for the acquisition of terpsichorean skill."

"You mean that I am still in the 'a b ab's' of dancing?" Courtney queried.

"I mean that you are in the pacifier stage of existence so far as dancing goes," she replied. "You haven't even begun to make articulate sounds yet, so to speak. All you need in rhythm, poise, balance, direction, control, coördination, and practice.

"You've been rather pluming yourself on not being a particularly good dancer, haven't you? You felt that a regular man wouldn't trouble with such things. But a regular man ought to have muscles and nerve sufficiently under discipline to do better than you did in that one-step if you'd never seen a dancing floor. Honestly, I'm ashamed of you."

"Ouch!" said Courtney, "also wow! You're knocking props from under my egotism with disconcerting vigor. I suppose it's healthy for me, but it's just a bit difficult to swallow without a pucker. However, I guess I did have the wrong angle on this dancing proposition. But I don't intend to let it beat me. Will you teach me more of it if I'm very humble and try not to step on your feet all the time? I know I ought to hire a dancing instructor, but after all—you started me on this trial of useful frivolity and your blood be on your own head."

"I have a phonograph and a hardwood floor in the living room in my father's place," Miss Dering responded, "and if you'll come over soon——"

"Tomorrow evening at 8:20," said Courtney, "if you'll be home. And just to show how much I'm converted already I'll buy some dancing pumps. They're easier on the feet—your feet, for instance."

Miss Dering nodded brightly as her partner for the next dance arrived.

"And to show you that the virus you have inoculated me with is working hard," Courtney added as he moved away, "I'm going to hunt up a nice empty headed debutante and see if I can chatter with her."

. . . .

"Oooh," Miss Dering breathed ecstatically, as they finished the fox trot by sliding softly into one of the small rooms off the ballroom, "wasn't that a wonderful dance? You certainly have improved marvelously since the first time I danced with you. And that was—let's see, only a month ago."

"And how do you think I have progressed in the other departments of social frivolity?" the young man demanded.

"O, nobly, nobly," Miss Dering praised him, "nobody would know that you hadn't been a society man for years."

"Proving," said Courtney, with decision, "what I have always contended, that it's scarcely worth one's time. The technique of society is one that any one with brains can acquire in four weeks easily and in two weeks by real application. After that there isn't anything else to learn."

"Then you haven't enjoyed frivoling?" asked Miss Dering.

"I haven't enjoyed the frivolers," replied Courtney, "that is, not many of them. They're as one-sided as I was—I knew no small talk, no trivial fripperies of existence, they know nothing else. I prefer my one-sidedness to theirs."

"And so, now you are going to eliminate all us joy riders from your acquaintanceship and go back to a man's stern business in the world," Miss Dering suggested in a voice which, despite its lightness of tone, quavered a trifle, "the three F's forgotten, and all my patient instruction in unnecessary matters gone for naught."

Courtney laughed. "Your imagination outruns the facts," he said: "I didn't say I intended to quit frivoling—I don't. I said most of the frivolers were a total loss, and they are. That, however, need not prevent me from learning all the new steps in the hesitation, or taking the conversational jumps with the occasional person whose wit isn't all formula, or trotting out to the dining room for an ice for a girl now and then, or practicing the art of light love making as the chance presents itself. No, indeed, these things I enjoy and I'm awfully glad you taught me to like them."

Mis Dering's face clouded. "With whom are you intending to practice light love making?" she questioned. "With femininity in general?"

"Well," he mused, half to himself, "Miss Henry has kissable lips but an ugly nose. Miss Van Stine has beautiful features but a cold eye. Miss Arthurs has personality but no looks, and Miss Genwin has looks but no personality. Miss Harker has no sense of humor and I might get into a breach of promise case, and Miss Marion would laugh just when I was pretending to be most earnest. So the only really satisfactory all around object for my attentions of that sort seems to be you. So I guess I'll practice on femininity in particular."

Miss Dering stiffened. "I will not be a dummy for you to practice philandering upon," she averred.

Courtney moved a little closer on the broad sofa.

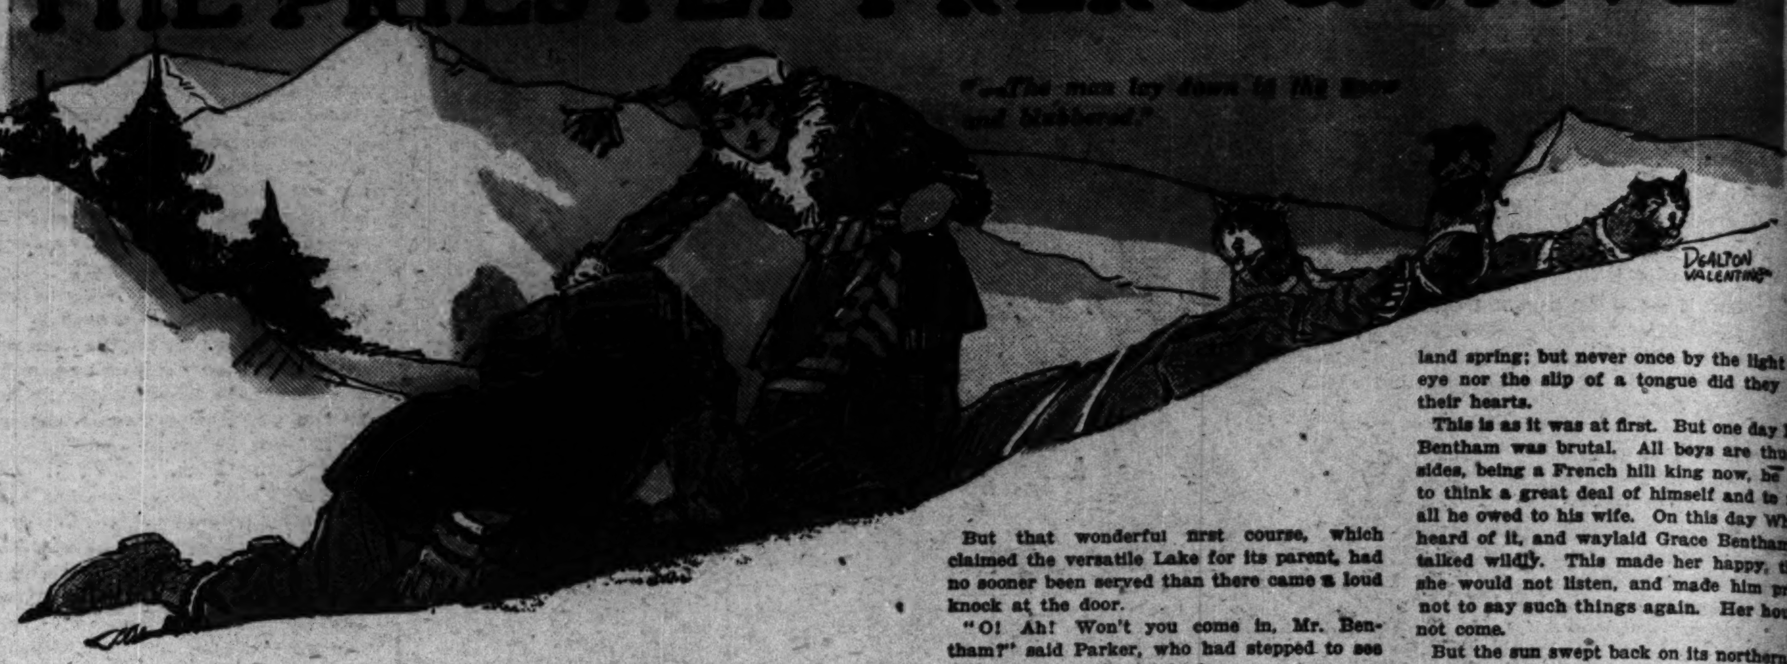
He took her hand, and when she tried to draw it away his strength forbade her escape.

"Grace," he said, "suppose we fix it this way: I'll make light love to you for fifteen minutes—you tell me any faults in my technique. Then I'll make serious love to you for fifteen minutes—and you can criticise that, too. And then, when we have those down perfect, you can complete my education by helping me in the one course in the curriculum that will remain."

"What's that?" asked Miss Dering.

"How to propose to your teacher," said Courtney.

THE PRIESTLY PREROGATIVE



"...The man lay down in the snow and blubbered."

In the Far North a Big Hearted Missionary Saved a Situation by Silence.

THIS is the story of a man who did not appreciate his wife; also of a woman who did him too great an honor when she gave herself to him. Incidentally it concerns a Jesuit priest who had never been known to lie. He was an appurtenance, and a necessary one, to the Yukon country; but the presence of the other two was merely accidental. They were specimens of the many strange waifs which ride the breast of a gold rush or come tailing along behind.

Edwin Bentham and Grace Bentham were waifs; they were also tailing along behind, for the Klondike rush of '97 had long since swept down the great river and subsided into the famine stricken city of Dawson. When the Yukon shut up shop and went to sleep under a three foot ice sheet this peripatetic couple found themselves at the Five Finger rapids, with the City of Gold still a journey of many sleeps to the north.

Not a few cattle had been butchered at this place in the fall of the year, and the offal made a goodly heap. The three fellow voyageurs of Edwin Bentham and wife gazed upon this deposit, did a little mental arithmetic, caught a certain glimpse of a bonanza, and decided to remain. And all winter they sold sacks of bones and frozen hides to the famished dog teams. It was a modest price they asked, a dollar a pound, just as it came. Six months later, when the sun came back and the Yukon awoke, they buckled on their heavy money belts and journeyed back to the southland, where they yet live and lie mightily about the Klondike they never saw.

But Edwin Bentham—he was an indolent fellow, and had he not been possessed of a wife would have gladly joined issues in the dog meat speculation. As it was she played upon his vanity, told him how great and strong he was, how a man such as he certainly was could overcome all obstacles and of a surety obtain the Golden Fleece. So he squared his jaw, sold his share in the bones and hides for a sled and one dog, and turned his snowshoes to the north. Needless to state, Grace Bentham's snowshoes never allowed his tracks to grow cold. Nay, ere their tribulations had seen three days it was the man who followed in the rear and the woman who broke trail in advance. Of course, if anybody hove in sight the position was instantly reversed. Thus did his manhood remain virgin to the travelers who passed like ghosts on the silent trail. There are such men in this world.

How such a man and such a woman came to take each other for better and for worse is unimportant to this narrative. These things are familiar to us all, and those people who do them, or even question them too closely, are apt to lose a beautiful faith which is known as eternal fitness.

Edwin Bentham was a boy, thrust by mischance into a man's body—a boy who could complacently pluck a butterfly wing from wing or cower in abject terror before a lean, nervy fellow not half his size. He was a selfish cry baby, hidden behind a man's mustache and stature and glossed over with a skin deep veneer of culture and conventionality. Yes; he was a clubman and a society man—the sort that grace social functions and utter inanities with a charm and unction which are indescribable; the sort that talk big and cry over a toothache; the sort that put more hell into a woman's life by marrying her than can the most graceless libertine that ever browsed in forbidden pastures. We meet these men every day, but we rarely know them for what they are. Second to marrying them, the best way to get this knowledge is to eat out of the same pot and crawl under the same blanket with them for—well, say a week; no greater margin is necessary.

To see Grace Bentham was to see a slender, girlish creature; to know her was to know a soul which dwarfed one's own, yet retained all the elements of the eternal feminine. This was the woman who urged and encouraged her husband in his northland quest, who broke trail for him when no one was looking, and cried in secret over her weakling woman's body.

So journeyed this strangely assorted couple down to old Fort Selkirk, then through five score miles of dismal wilderness to Stuart river. And when the short day left them and the man lay down in the snow and blubbered it was the woman who lashed him to the sled, bit her lips with the pain of her aching limbs, and helped the dog haul him to Malemute Kid's cabin. Malemute Kid was not at home, but Meyers, the German trader, cooked great moose steaks and shook up a bed of fresh pine boughs.

. . . .

Lake, Langham, and Parker were excited, and not unduly so when the cause was taken into account.

"O, Sandy! Say, can you tell a porterhouse from a round? Come out and lend us a hand, anyway!" This appeal emanated from the cache, where Langham was vainly struggling with divers quarters of frozen moose.

"Don't you budge from those dishes!" commanded Parker.

"I say, Sandy—there's a good fellow—just run down to the Missouri camp and borrow some cinnamon," begged Lake.

"O! O! hurry up! Why don't——" But the crash of meat and boxes in the cache abruptly quenched this peremptory summons.

"Come now, Sandy; it won't take a minute to go down to the Missouri——"

"You leave him alone," interrupted Parker. "How am I to mix the biscuits if the table isn't cleared off?"

Sandy paused in indecision, till suddenly the fact that he was Langham's "man" dawned upon him. Then he apologetically threw down the greasy dishcloth and went to his master's rescue.

These promising scions of wealthy progenitors had come to the northland in search of laurels, with much money to burn and a "man" apiece. Luckily for their souls, the other two men were up the White river in search of a mythical quartz ledge; so Sandy had to grin under the responsibility of three healthy masters, each of whom was possessed of peculiar cookery ideas. Twice that morning had a disruption of the whole camp been imminent, only averted by immense concessions from one or the other of these knights of the chafing dish. But at last their mutual creation, a really dainty dinner, was completed. Then they sat down to a three cornered game of "cut throat"—a proceeding which did away with all casus belli for future hostilities and permitted the victor to depart on a most important mission.

This fortune fell to Parker, who parted his hair in the middle, put on his mittens and bearskin cap, and stepped over to Malemute Kid's cabin. And when he returned it was in the company of Grace Bentham and Malemute Kid—the former sorry her husband could not share with her their hospitality, for he had gone up to look at the Henderson creek mines and the latter still a trifle stiff from breaking trail down the Stuart river. Meyers had been asked, but had declined, being deeply engrossed in an experiment of raising bread from hops.

Well, they could do without the husband; but a woman—why, they had not seen one all winter, and the presence of this one promised a new hegira in their lives. They were college men and gentlemen, these three young fellows, yearning for the fleshpots they had been so long denied. Probably Grace Bentham suffered from a similar hunger; at least, it meant much to her, the first bright hour in many weeks of darkness.

But that wonderful first course, which claimed the versatile Lake for its parent, had no sooner been served than there came a loud knock at the door.

"O! Ah! Won't you come in, Mr. Bentham?" said Parker, who had stepped to see who the newcomer might be.

"Is my wife here?" gruffly responded that worthy.

"Why, yes. We left word with Mr. Meyers." Parker was exerting his most dulcet tones, inwardly wondering what the deuce it all meant. "Won't you come in? Expecting you at any moment, we reserved a place. And just in time for the first course, too."

"Come in, Edwin, dear," chirped Grace Bentham from her seat at the table.

Parker naturally stood aside.

"I want my wife," reiterated Bentham hoarsely, the intonation savoring disagreeably of ownership.

Parker gasped, was within an ace of driving his fist into the face of his boorish visitor, but held himself awkwardly in check. Everybody rose. Lake lost his head and caught himself on the verge of saying, "Must you go?"

Then began the farrago of leavetaking. "So nice of you"—"Awfully sorry"—"By Jove! how things did brighten"—"Really now, you"—Thank you ever so much"—"Nice trip to Dawson"—etc.

In this wise the lamb was helped into her jacket and led to the slaughter. Then the door slammed and they gazed woefully upon the deserted table.

"Damn!" Langham had suffered disadvantages in his early training, and his oaths were weak and monotonous. "Damn!" he repeated, vaguely conscious of the incompleteness and vainly struggling for a more virile term.

. . . .

It is a clever woman who can fill out the many weak places in an inefficient man by her own indomitability, reinforce his vacillating nature, infuse her ambitious soul into his, and spur him on to great achievements. And it is indeed a clever and tactful woman who can do all this and do it so subtly that the man receives all the credit and believes in his inmost heart that everything is due to him and him alone.

This is what Grace Bentham proceeded to do. Arriving in Dawson with a few pounds of flour and several letters of introduction, she at once applied herself to the task of pushing her big baby to the fore. It was she who melted the stony heart and wrung credit from the rude barbarian who presided over the destiny of the P. C. company; yet it was Edwin Bentham to whom the concession was ostensibly granted. It was she who dragged her baby up and down creeks, over benches and divides, and on a dozen wild stampedes; yet everybody remarked what an energetic fellow that Bentham was. It was she who studied maps, and catechized miners, and hammered geography and locations into his hollow head till everybody marveled at his broad grasp of the country and knowledge of its conditions. Of course they said the wife was a brick, and only a few wise ones appreciated and pitied her.

She did the work; he got the credit and reward. In the Northwest territory a married woman cannot stake or record a creek, bench, or quartz claim; so Edwin Bentham went down to the gold commissioner and filed on bench claim 23, second tier, of French hill. And when April came they were washing out a thousand dollars a day, with many, many such days in prospect.

At the base of French hill lay Eldorado creek, and on a creek claim stood the cabin of Clyde Wharton. At present he was not washing out a diurnal thousand dollars; but his dumps grew, shift by shift, and there would come a time when those dumps would pass through his sluice boxes, depositing in the riffles, in the course of half a dozen days, several hundred thousand dollars. He often sat in that cabin, smoked his pipe, and dreamed beautiful little dreams—dreams in which neither the dumps nor the half ton of dust in the P. C. company's big safe played a part.

And Grace Bentham, as she washed tin dishes in her hillside cabin, often glanced down into Eldorado creek, and dreamed—not of dumps nor dust, however. They met frequently, as the trail to the one claim crossed the other, and there is much to talk about in the northland spring; but never once by the light of an eye nor the slip of a tongue did they speak their hearts.

This is as it was at first. But one day Edwin Bentham was brutal. All boys are thus; besides, being a French hill king now, he began to think a great deal of himself and to forget all he owed to his wife. On this day Wharton heard of it, and waylaid Grace Bentham, and talked wildly. This made her happy, though she would not listen, and made him promise not to say such things again. Her hour had not come.

But the sun swept back on its northern journey, the black of midnight changed to the steely color of dawn, the snow slipped away, the water dashed again over the glacial drift, and the wash-up began. Day and night the yellow clay and scraped bedrock hurried through the swift sluices, yielding up its ransom to the strong men from the southland. And in that time of tumult came Grace Bentham's hour.

To all of us such hours at some time come—that is, to us who are not too phlegmatic. Some people are good, not from inherent love of virtue but from sheer laziness. Those of us who know weak moments may understand.

Edwin Bentham was weighing dust over the bar of the saloon at the Forks—altogether too much of his dust went over that pine board—when his wife came down the hill and slipped into Clyde Wharton's cabin. Wharton was not expecting her, but that did not alter the case. And much subsequent misery and idle waiting might have been avoided had not Father Roubeau seen this and turned aside from the main creek trail.

. . . .

"My child——"

"Hold on, Father Roubeau! Though I'm not of your faith, I respect you; but you can't come in between this woman and me!"

"You know what you are doing?"

"Know! Were you God Almighty, ready to fling me into eternal fire, I'd bank my will against yours in this matter."

Wharton had placed Grace on a stool and stood belligerently before her.

"You sit down on that chair and keep quiet," he continued, addressing the Jesuit. "I'll take my innings now. You can have yours after."

Father Roubeau bowed courteously and obeyed. He was an easy going man and had learned to bide his time. Wharton pulled a stool alongside the woman's, smothering her hand in his.

"Then you do care for me and will take me away?"

Her face seemed to reflect the peace of this man, against whom she might draw close for shelter.

"Dear, don't you remember what I said before? Of course I——"

"But how can you?—the wash-up?"

"Do you think that worries? Anyway, I'll give the job to Father Roubeau here. I can trust him to safely bank the dust with the company."

"To think of it!—I'll never see him again."

"A blessing!"

"And to go—O, Clyde, I can't! I can't!"

"There, there; of course you can. Just let me plan it. You see, as soon as we get a few traps together we'll start, and——"

"Suppose he comes back?"

"I'll break every——"

"No, no! No fighting, Clyde! Promise me that."

"All right! I'll just tell the men to throw him off the claim. They've seen how he's treated you, and haven't much love for him."

"You mustn't do that. You mustn't hurt him."

"What then? Let him come right in here and take you away before my eyes."

"No-o," she half whispered, stroking his hand softly.

"Then let me run it, and don't worry. I'll see he doesn't get hurt. Precious lot he cared whether you got hurt or not! We won't go back to Dawson. I'll send word down for a couple of the boys to outfit and pole a boat up the Yukon. We'll cross the divide and raft down the Indian river to meet them. Then——"

"And then?"

Her head was on his shoulder. Their voices sank to softer cadences, each word a caress. The Jesuit fidgeted nervously.

"And then?" she repeated.

"Why, we'll pole up, and up, and up, and portage the White Horse rapids and the Box cañon."

"Yes?"

"And the Sixty Mile river; then the lakes, Chilcoot, Dyea, and Salt Water."

"But dear, I can't pole a boat."

"You little goose! I'll get Sitka Charley; he knows all the good water and best camps, and he is the best traveler I ever met, if he is an Indian. All you'll have to do is to sit in the middle of the boat, and sing songs, and play Cleopatra, and fight—no, we're in luck; too early for mosquitoes."

"And then, O my Antony?"

"And then a steamer, San Francisco, and the world! Never to come back to this cursed hole again. Think of it! The world, and ours to choose from! I'll sell out. Why, we're rich! The Waldworth syndicate will give me half a million for what's left in the ground, and I've got twice as much in the dumps and with the P. C. company. We'll go to the fair in Paris in 1900. We'll go to Jerusalem, if you say so. We'll buy an Italian palace and you can play Cleopatra to your heart's content. No, you shall be Lucretia, Acte, or anybody your little heart sees fit to become. But you mustn't, you really mustn't——"

"The wife of Cæsar shall be above reproach."

"Of course, but——"

"But I won't be your wife, will I, dear?"

"I didn't mean that."

"But you'll love me just as much, and never even think—O! I know you'll be like other men; you'll grow tired, and—and—"

"How can you? I—"

"Promise me."

"Yes, yes; I do promise."

"You say it so easily, dear; but how do you know?—or I know? I have so little to give, yet it is so much. O, Clyde! promise me you won't?"

"There, there! You mustn't begin to doubt already. Till death do us part, you know."

"Think! I once said that to—to him, and now?"

"And now, little sweetheart, you're not to bother about such things any more. Of course, I never, never will, and——"

And for the first time lips trembled against lips. Father Roubeau had been watching the main trail through the window, but could stand the strain no longer. He cleared his throat and turned around.

"Your turn now, father!" Wharton's face was flushed with the fire of his first embrace. There was an exultant ring to his voice as he abdicated in the other's favor. He had no doubt as to the result. Neither had Grace, for a smile played about her mouth as she faced the priest.

"My child," he began, "my heart bleeds for you. It is a pretty dream, but it cannot be."

"And why, father? I have said yes."

"You knew not what you did. You did not think of the oath you took, before your God, to that man who is your husband. It remains for me to make you realize the sanctity of such a pledge."

"And if I do realize, and yet refuse?"

"Then God——"

"Which God? My husband has a god which I care not to worship. There must be many such."

"Child! unsay those words! Ah! you do not mean them. I understand. I, too, have had such moments." For an instant he was back in his native France, and a wistful, sad eyed face came a mist between him and the woman before him.

"Then, father, has my God forsaken me? I am not wicked above women. My misery with him has been great. Why should it be greater? Why shall I not grasp at happiness? I cannot, will not, go back to him!"

"Rather is your God forsaken. Return. Throw your burden upon him, and the darkness shall be lifted. O, my child——"

"No; it is useless; I have made my bed and so shall I lie. I will go on. And if God punishes me I shall bear it somehow. You do not understand. You are not a woman."

"My mother was a woman."

"But—"

"And Christ was born of woman."

She did not answer. A silence fell. Wharton pulled his mustache impatiently and kept an eye on the trail. Grace leaned her elbow on the table, her face set with resolve. The smile had died away. Father Roubeau shifted his ground.

"You have children?"

"At one time I wished—but now—no. And I am thankful."

"And a mother?"

"Yes."

"She loves you?"

"Yes." Her replies were whispers.

"And a brother?—no matter, he is a man. But a sister?"

Her head drooped a quavering yes.

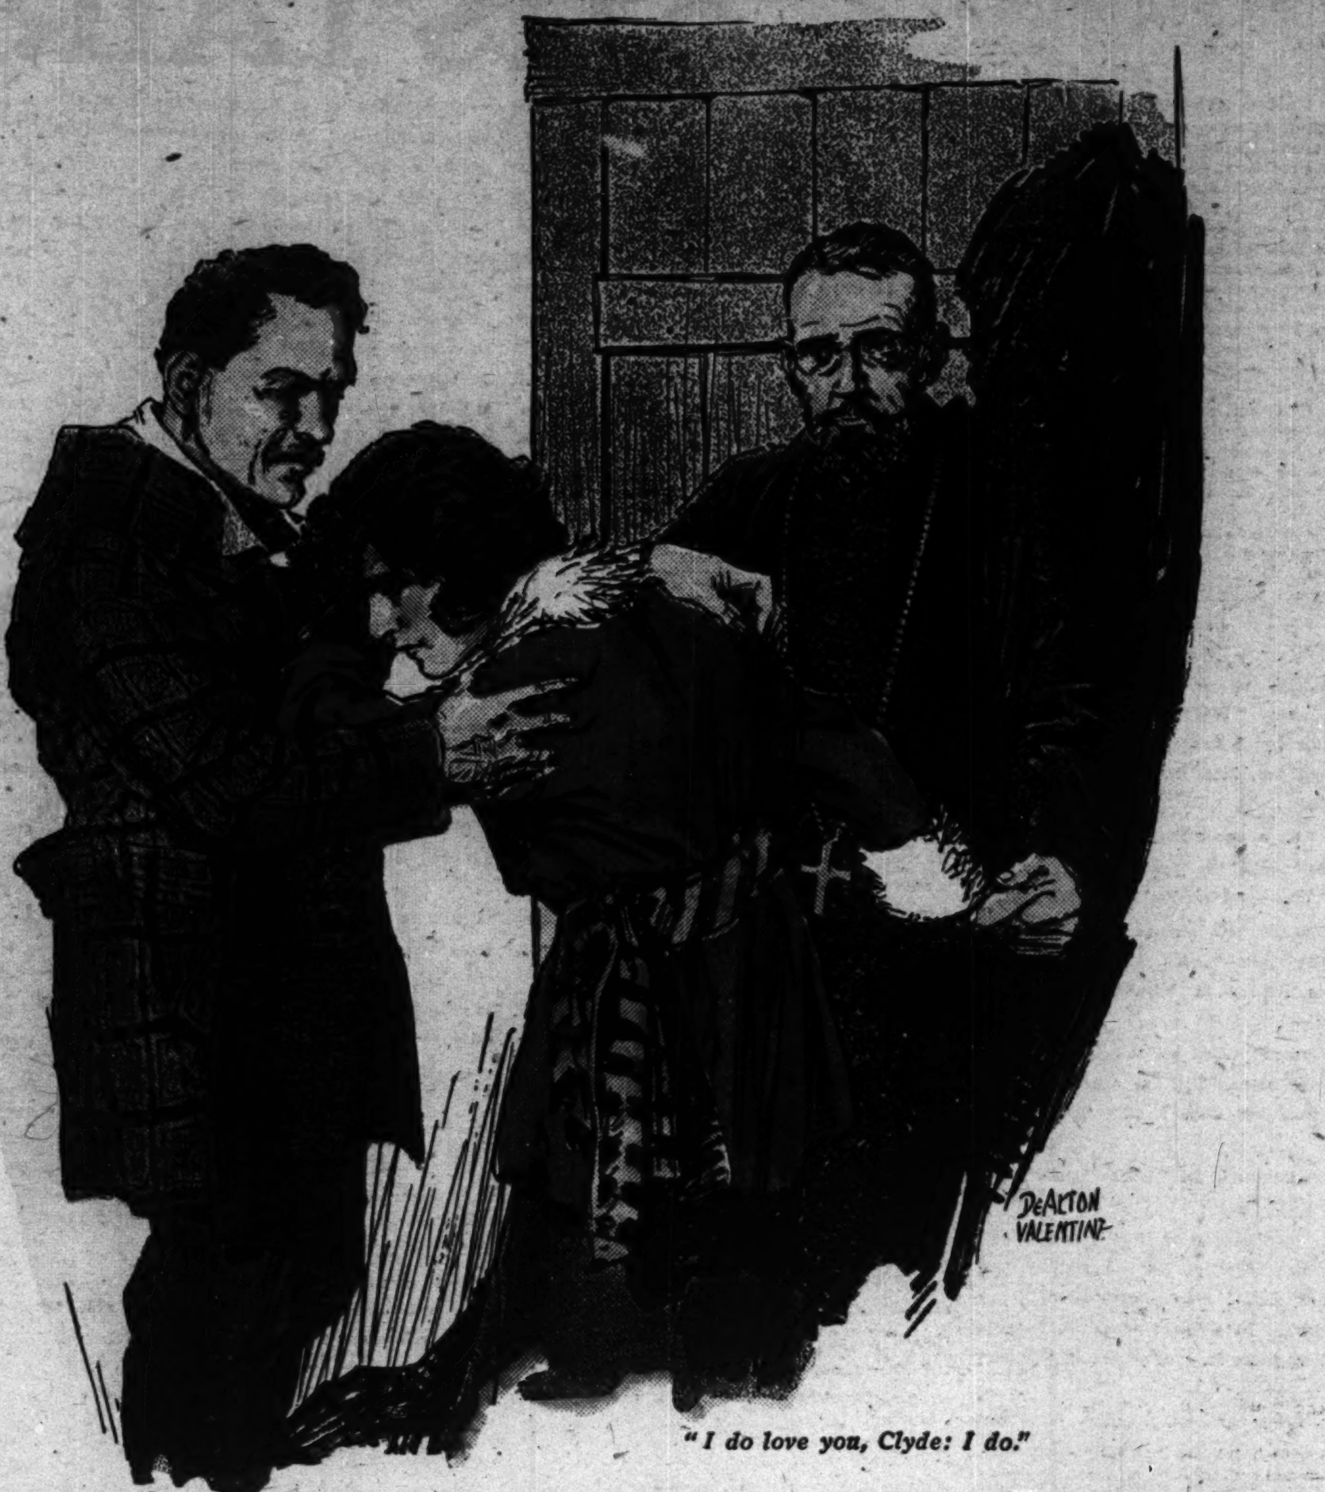
"Younger? Very much?"

"Seven years."

"And you have thought well about this matter? About them? About your mother? And your sister? She stands on the threshold of her woman's life, and this wildness of yours may mean much to her. Could you go before her, look upon her fresh young face, hold her hand in yours, or touch your cheek to hers?"

To his words her brain formed vivid images, till she cried out, "Don't! don't!" and shrank away as do the wolf dogs from the lash.

"But you must face all this; and better it is to do it now."



"I do love you, Clyde: I do."

In his eyes, which she could not see, there was a great compassion, but his face, tense and quivering, showed no relenting. She raised her head from the table, forced back the tears, struggled for control.

"I shall go away. They will never see me, and come to forget me. I shall be to them a dead. And—and I will go with Clyde—today.

It seemed final. Wharton stepped forward, but the priest waved him back.

"You have wished for children?"

A silent yes.

"And prayed for them?"

"Often."

"And have you thought, if you should have children?" Father Roubeau's eyes rested for a moment on the man by the window.

A quick light shot across her face. Then the full import dawned upon her. She raised her hand appealingly, but he went on.

"Can you picture an innocent babe in your arms? A boy? The world is not so hard upon a girl. Why, your very breast would turn to gall! And you could be proud and happy of your boy, as you looked on other children?"

"O, have pity! Hush!"

"A scapegoat——"

"Don't! don't! I will go back!" She was at his feet.

"A child to grow up with no thought of evil, and one day the world to fling a tender name in his face!"

"O, my God! my God!"

She groveled on the floor. The priest sighed and raised her to her feet. Wharton pressed forward, but she motioned him away.

"Don't come near me, Clyde! I am going back!" The tears were coursing pitifully down her face, but she made no effort to wipe them away.

"After all this? You cannot! I will not let you!"

"Don't touch me!" She shivered and drew back.

"I will! You are mine! Do you hear? You are mine!" Then he whirled upon the priest. "O, what a fool I was to ever let you wag your silly tongue! Thank your God you are not a common man, for Id'—— But the priestly prerogative must be exercised, eh? Well, you have exercised it. Now get out of my house, or I'll forget who and what you are."

Father Roubeau bowed, took her hand, and started for the door. But Wharton cut them off.

"Grace! You said you loved me?"

"I did."

"And you do now?"

"I do."

"Say it again."

"I do love you, Clyde; I do."

"There, you priest!" he cried. "You have heard it, and with those words on her lips you would send her back to live a lie and a hell with that man?"

But Father Roubeau whisked the woman into the inner room and closed the door. "No words!" he whispered to Wharton, as he struck a casual posture on a stool. "Remember, for her sake," he added.

The room echoed to a rough knock at the door; then the latch raised and Edwin Bentham stepped in.

"Seen anything of my wife?" he asked, as soon as salutations had been exchanged.

Two heads nodded negatively.

"I saw her tracks down from the cabin," he continued tentatively, "and they broke off, just opposite here, on the main trail."

His listeners looked bored.

"And I—I thought——"

"She was here!" thundered Wharton.

The priest silenced him with a look. "Did you see her tracks leading up to this cabin, my son?" Wily Father Roubeau—he had taken good care to obliterate them as he came up the same path an hour before.

"I didn't stop to look, I——" His eyes rested suspiciously on the door to the other room, then interrogated the priest. The latter shook his head; but the doubt seemed to linger.

Father Roubeau breathed a swift, silent prayer, and rose to his feet. "If you doubt me, why——" He made as though to open the door.

A priest could not lie. Edwin Bentham had heard this often, and believed it. "Of course not, father," he interposed hurriedly. "I was only wondering where my wife had gone, and thought maybe—I guess she's up at Mrs. Stanton's on French gulch. Nice weather, isn't it? Heard the news? Flour's gone down to forty dollars a hundred, and they say the che-cha-quas are flocking down the river in droves. But I must be going; so good-by."

The door slammed, and from the window they watched him take his quest up French gulch.

A few weeks later, just after the June high water, two men shot a canoe into midstream and made fast to a derelict pine. This tightened the painter and jerked the frail craft along as would a towboat. Father Roubeau had been directed to leave the upper country and return to his swarthy children at Minook. The white men had come among them, and they were devoting too little time to fishing and too much to a certain deity whose transient habitat was in countless black bottles. Malemute Kid also had business in the lower country, so they journeyed together.

But one in all the northland knew the man Paul Roubeau, and that man was Malemute Kid. Before him alone did the priest cast off the sacerdotal garb and stand naked. And why not? These two men knew each other. Had they not shared the last morsel of fish, the last pinch of tobacco, the last and inmost thought, on the barren stretches of Bering sea, in the heart breaking mazes of the great delta, on the terrible winter journey from Point Barrow to the Porcupine?

Father Roubeau puffed heavily at his trail worn pipe and gazed on the red disked sun, poised somberly on the edge of the northern horizon. Malemute Kid wound up his watch. It was midnight.

"Cheer up, old man!" The Kid was evidently gathering up a broken thread. "God surely will forgive such a lie. Let me give you the word of a man who strikes a true note:

If she have spoken a word, remember thy lips are sealed,
And the brand of the dog is upon him by whom is the secret revealed.
If there be trouble to Herward, and a lie of the blackest can clear,
Lie, while thy lips can move or a man is alive to hear.

Father Roubeau removed his pipe and reflected. "The man speaks true, but my soul is not vexed with that. The lie and the penance stand with God; but—but——"

"What then? Your hands are clean."

"Not so. Kid, I have thought much, and yet the thing remains. I knew, and I made her go back."

The clear note of a robin rang out from the wooded bank, a partridge drummed the call in the distance, a moose lunged noisily in an eddy, but the twain smoked on in silence.

CAPTIVATING MARY CARSTAIRS

SYNOPSIS.

Aged Elbert Carstairs, capitalist, enstranged from his wife in his old age, longs for the companionship of his daughter Mary, who lives with Mrs. Carstairs at Hunston-on-the-Hudson. The child refuses to come and visit him. Mrs. Carstairs refuses to force her to do so, and hence old Carstairs engages Larry Varney to take the Carstairs yacht up the Hudson and kidnap Mary, who Varney believes is but 12. Varney gets the help of Peter Maginnis in the venture. Three days after the start is made. On the way up the river the name of the yacht, Cypriani, is erased to throw reporters off the track. Arriving at Hunston the two ally themselves with Hare, a campaigner for reform against the dictatorship of Boss Ryan. Ryan so completely dominates the town that the reform people are denied the use of public halls. Varney is accused by Caligny Smith, owner of the Gazette, which is under Ryan's thumb, of being Ferris Stanhope, author of pink tea literature, and is advised to leave town unless he wants trouble. The same evening Varney fleeing from a heavy rainstorm takes shelter in a cottage—and finds a strange young woman there.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Larry Meets Mary.

VARNEY called reassuringly into the gloom: "I sincerely beg your pardon for bursting in like that. I—had no idea there was any one here."

There was a second's pause.

"N—no," said the pretty voice, hesitatingly. "You—you couldn't—of course."

"But please tell me at once," he said, puzzled by this—"have I taken the unforgivable liberty of breaking into your house?"

"My house?" And he caught something like bewildered relief in her voice. "Why—I—was thinking that I had broken into yours."

Varney laughed, his back against the door.

"If it were, I'm sure I should be able to offer you a light, at the least. If it were yours, now that I stop to think—well, perhaps it would be a little eccentric for you to be sitting there in your parlor in the inky dark."

To this there came no reply.

"I suppose you, like me," he continued, courteously, "are an unlucky wayfarer who had to choose hastily between trespassing and being drowned."

"Yes."

Inevitably he found himself wondering what this lady who shared his stolen refuge could be like. That she was a lady her voice left no doubt. His eye strained off into the ethiopian darkness, but could make neither heads nor tails of it.

"Voices always go by contraries," he thought. "She's 52 and wears glasses."

Aloud he said: "But please tell me quite frankly—am I intruding?"

"Not at all," said the lady, only that and nothing more.

"Perhaps, then, you won't object if I find a seat? Leaning against a door is so dull, don't you think?"

He groped forward, hands outstretched before him, stumbled against the stairway which he sought, and sat down uncomfortably on the next to the bottom step. Then suddenly the oddness of his situation rushed over him, and, vexed though he was with the chain of needless circumstances which had brought him into it, he with difficulty repressed a laugh.

An hour ago he had been lounging at peace upon the yacht, looking forward to nothing more titillating than bed at the earliest respectable hour. Now he was sitting with a strange lady of uncertain age in an unlighted cottage on a lonely country road, while a howling thunderstorm raved outside, imprisoning him for nobody could say how long. In the interval between these two extremes, he had discovered that he was a "double," been threatened with violence, hopelessly lost Peter, and found Mary Carstairs. Surely and in truth a pretty active hour's work!

On the tin roof of the cottage the rain beat a wild tattoo. Within, the silence lengthened. Under the circumstances Varney considered reserve on the lady's part not unnatural; but a little talk, as he viewed the matter, would tend to help the dreary evening through.

He cleared his throat for due notice and began with a laugh.

"I was industriously chasing two men from town when the storm caught me. You know what I mean—not drumming them out of the city, but merely pursuing them in this general direction. I wonder if by any chance you happened to pass them on the road?"

"N-no, I believe not."

"A very small man, very well dressed, and a very large man, very badly dressed, wearing a kind of curious, rococo straw hat. I know," he mused, "that you could not have forgotten that hat. Once seen——"

"Oh!" she exclaimed, with sudden evidences of interest—"do tell me, is the smaller man you mention Mr. Hare?"

"He is, indeed," he answered, surprised. "You know him? Oh, yes—certainly! In Hunston——"

"Know him!" said she, in tones of hardly suppressed indignation. "It is he who is responsible for my being caught in this—this annoying predicament."

At something in the way the lady said that Varney unconsciously chipped twenty years off her age and conceded that she might be no more than 32.

"I'm sorry to hear that," he said, with a laugh. "I should say that Mr. Hare has already had quite enough troubles for one night."

"Oh — then you have seen him this evening."

"I had the pleasure of meeting him on the square not half an hour ago."

Each waited for the other to say more; and it was the lady who yielded. She went on hesitatingly, yet somehow as if she were not unwilling to justify herself to this stranger in the curious position in which she found herself.

"It—is very strange—and unlike him," she said, doubtfully. "He was to call for me—at quarter past 7—and take me home. I was at the seamstress', perhaps a quarter of a mile up the road. I waited and waited—and then—. O, what was that, do you know?"

"Only this old floor cracking. Don't flatter it by noticing. How odd to find, meeting in this way, that we are both searching for the same man. Isn't it?"

"It—seems to me odder that he is not searching for me."

She was sitting, so he judged from the sound, about fifteen feet away. There was coldness in her voice as she spoke of the candidate. Varney felt sorry for that young man when he next held converse with her. From her voice he had also gathered that the dark rather frightened her, and that the presence of an unknown man had not allayed her uneasiness; though something of her reserve had vanished, he thought, when she found that the intruder knew Mr. Hare.

"O, but he was—is," he cried encouragingly. "I'm positive that he's searching for you at this minute. Why, of course—certainly. That would explain the whole thing."

Sitting damply on the dark stairway, he told of J. Pinckney Hare's evidently impromptu experiences in the public square, which had undoubtedly knocked from his mind all memory of his engagement at the seamstress'; and of the sudden recollection of it, which, there could be no question, was what had sent him and his new friend bursting out of the house and tearing for dear life up the road.

"I'll bet," said he, "that not a minute after you turned into shelter they raced by here after you. Now they're kicking their heels at the sewing lady's, probably soaked through, and wild to know if you got home safely. O, he's being punished for his sins, never fear."

"I—am sorry for your friend," her voice replied. "And I believe that I forgive Mr. Hare—now that I know what detained him. I think I must have heard them go by—just after I got in. Once I was sure I heard voices, but, of course, I was expecting Mr. Hare to be alone."

"Ha!" thought Varney. "A Hunston romance!"

"You don't know Maginnis," he answered gloomily. "Nobody in the world ever stays alone long when Maginnis can possibly get to him."

He heard something that he thought might be a faint laugh. And immediately ten years more came off the lady's age and she stood at 22. The young man began to consider with less distaste his obvious duty of escorting her home.

In the momentary silence, wood somewhere near them once more creaked loudly and scarily.

"O!" came her voice out of the blackness. "Would you mind striking a match and seeing if there isn't a lamp or something we could light?"

"But I haven't a match—that's just it! If I had—! Why I assure you I've been wishing for nothing so much as a light ever since you—ever since I came in."

"If I were a man—" she began, vexedly, but suddenly checked herself. "Are you quite sure you haven't a single one?"

"I'll gladly look again in all my twenty-seven pockets. I've been doing it ever since I arrived, and I've gotten rather to like it. But I'm awfully afraid it's a wild goose chase."

Crack! Crack! went the mysteriously stirring woodwork, for all the world like a living thing; and the lady again said "O!" And after that she said: "You are not—in this room, are you?"

"I'm sitting quietly on the steps digging around for matches," he said. "Would you prefer to have me come in there?"

"Would you mind—? Not that I'm in the least frightened, but—"

"It will give me great pleasure to come—faithfully searching my pockets as I grope forward. Thus," he said laughing, "I must grope only with my head and feet, which is a slightly dangerous thing to do. Ouch! Where are you, please?"

"Here."

"'Here' is not very definite, you know. I have nothing to steer by but my ear. Would you mind talking a good deal for a while?"

"It is not often," she said, with further signs of a thawing in her manner, "that a woman gets an invitation like that."

"Opportunity knocks at your door, golden, novel, and unique."

"The luck of it is that I can't think of anything to say. Would you care to have me hum something?"

Off came the lady's glasses, never to be donned again in fancy or in life; and Varney was ready to admit that there might be ladies in Hunston who were worse looking than she by far. In the Stygian blackness he collided with a chair and paused, leaning upon the back of it.

"I'd like extremely to have you hum. From your voice, I—I'm sure that you do it div—awfully well. But since you seem to leave it to me, I'd honestly rather have you do something else."

"Yes?"

Larry laughed. "It's a game. An evening pastime—a sort of novel guessing contest. Played by strangers in the dark. You see—I must tell you that ever since you first spoke my mind has been giving me little thumbnail sketches—each one different from the last—of what you look like."

She said nothing to this; so he laughed again.

"O, it's not mere curiosity, you know. It's purely a scientific matter with me. The science of deduction. The voice, you know, tells little or nothing. I may say that I have made something of a study of voices and have discovered that they always go by contraries. For this reason," he laughed gayly, "when you first spoke, I—but perhaps I am simply tiring you?"

There was a small pause, and then the lady spoke, with apparent reluctance.

"I am not tired."

Varney smiled into the great darkness. "Well, when I first heard your voice—ha, ha!—I made up my mind that you could not possibly be less than 52."

He was rewarded with a faint laugh; this time there could be no doubt of it.

"You remember that mythological tunnel where everybody went in old and came out young. This conversation has been like that. Since we have talked," said Varney, "I have knocked thirty years off your age. But much remains to be told—and that is the game. Are you dark?"

"Are you punning?"

"This is no punning matter," he said, and began his third exploration of himself for a match. And above them the rain continued to thud upon the roof like a torrent broken out of a dam.

"This is too bad!" breathed the lady impatiently, and plainly she was not speaking to Varney. "I believe it's coming down harder and harder every minute!"

"Yes," he answered, cheerfully, "the good old rain is at it in earnest. We're probably fixed for hours and hours. I might argue, you know," he added, "that I have a right to know these things. The box of matches I just gave away like a madman would have told me, and no questions asked. Matches and lamps you have none, but such as you have—"

"Could you not talk of something else, please?"

Varney laughed. "Certainly, if I must. Only I've been rather generous about this, I think, showing you my hand and giving you the chance to laugh at me. You see, for all I know you may be 52, after all. Or even 62— O, glory! Hallelujah!"

"What on earth is the matter?"

"O, nothing! Nothing at all! Just I have found a match. That's all!"

"A match! Splendid!" she cried, and her voice suddenly seemed to come from a higher point in the darkness, as though she had risen. "Just one! O, we—you must be extremely careful with it."

"The trouble is," he said with exaggerated dejection, "it's pretty wet. I don't know whether it will strike or not."

"You must make it strike. O, it will be—unpardonable—if you don't make it strike!"

"Then I'll throw my soul into the work. I'll concentrate my whole will power upon by Henry Sydnor Harrison ◆◆◆◆

On the back of this chair here—shall I?"

"All right. I'll concentrate, too. Are—are you ready?"

"Ready it is," said Varney.

Gently he drew the match across the rough wood of the chair back, his ear all eager expectancy—and nothing happened. Thrice he did this fruitless thing, and something told him that a large portion of the sulphur had been rubbed away into eternity.

"It's nip and tuck," he breathed, stifling an impulse to laugh. "Nip and tuck!"

Pressing the match's diminished head firmly against the wood, he drew it downward vigorously and long. There was a faint crackle, a little splutter, and—glory of glories!—a tiny flame flowered out into the darkness.

"O—be careful!"

Varney cupped his hand about the little flare, and for a moment ceased to breathe. Then it caught more fully and it was evident to both that the victory was won.

He had meant to look instantly about for lamp or candle to light, but if all his future happiness had hinged upon it, it seemed to him that he could not have helped one glance at the lady who shared that shelter and that match with him.

She stood a few feet away, regarding him breathlessly, hatted, gloved, one hand resting lightly on the center table, one folded about the crook of a dainty draggled parasol. The match threw a small and ghostly light, but he saw her, and she wore no veil.

"Why—why—I—"

"O, quick! There's a lamp just behind you."

He caught himself with a start. By incredible luck a lamp was at his very elbow; as it was the match died on the wick. He put back the chimney and shade, turned up the wick, and the room was bathed in golden light.

It was a good sized room, evidently newly furnished and as neat as a bandbox. The empty bookcase on which the lamp rested was of handsome quartered oak, which transiently struck him as curious. But in the next instant he turned away and forgot all about it.

The lady stood where she had risen and was regarding him without a word. The lamplight fell full upon her. He came nearer, and his waning assurance shook him like a pennant in the wind and was suddenly gone. The sense of camaraderie which the dark had given faded; his easy friendliness left him; and he was an embarrassed young man face to face with a girl whose sudden beauty seemed to overwhelm him with the knowledge that he did not so much as know her name.

"None of my thumbnail sketches," he faltered, "made you look like this."

She had rested her wet parasol against the table, where a slow pool gathered at the ferrule, and was pulling on more trimly her long white gloves. Now she looked at him rather quizzically, although her young eyes reflected something of his own unsteadying embarrassment.

"No," she said, "I shall not be 62 for—for some time yet. But of course it was a game—a pastime—where I had a—little the advantage. Do you know, I—I am not entirely surprised, after all."

"O, aren't you?" he said, completely mystified, but as charmed by her smile as he was by the subtle change in her manner which had come with the lighting of that match.

"And it was nice of you to tell me that polite story at the beginning," she said. "And quick—and clever. When I heard the front door burst open, the first thing I thought of, really, was that it must be you."

"I can't think," he said, unable to take his eyes off her, "what in the world you are talking about."

She laughed with something of an effort, and sat down exquisitely in a cruel cane chair. "Well, then—do you forgive me for taking possession of your house like this? You will, won't you? I can't be silly, now, and pretend not to know you. But really I never dreamed that you——"

"Is it possible," he broke in stormily, "that you are mistaking me for that insufferable Stanhope?"

She looked at him, startled, dumfounded; in her eyes amazement mingled with embarrassment; then her brow wrinkled into a slow, doubtful smile.

"O—O—I beg your pardon! I—didn't understand. But is it my fault that I've seen your picture a hundred times? Yes, I suppose it is; for, at the risk of making you crosser still, I'll confess that I—I cut it out and framed it."

Varney leaned his elbow on the mantel and faced her.

"You have made a mistake," he said. "I am—not Mr. Stanhope."

"You mean," she laughed, very pretty and pink, "that it is no affair of mine that you are."

A kind of desperation seized him. It was evident that she did not believe him, just as Coligny Smith had not believed him, and the plump young woman of the grocery who had used his Christian name. He was almost ready not to believe himself. However, there were cards in his pocket; he got one of them out and, coming nearer, handed it to her.

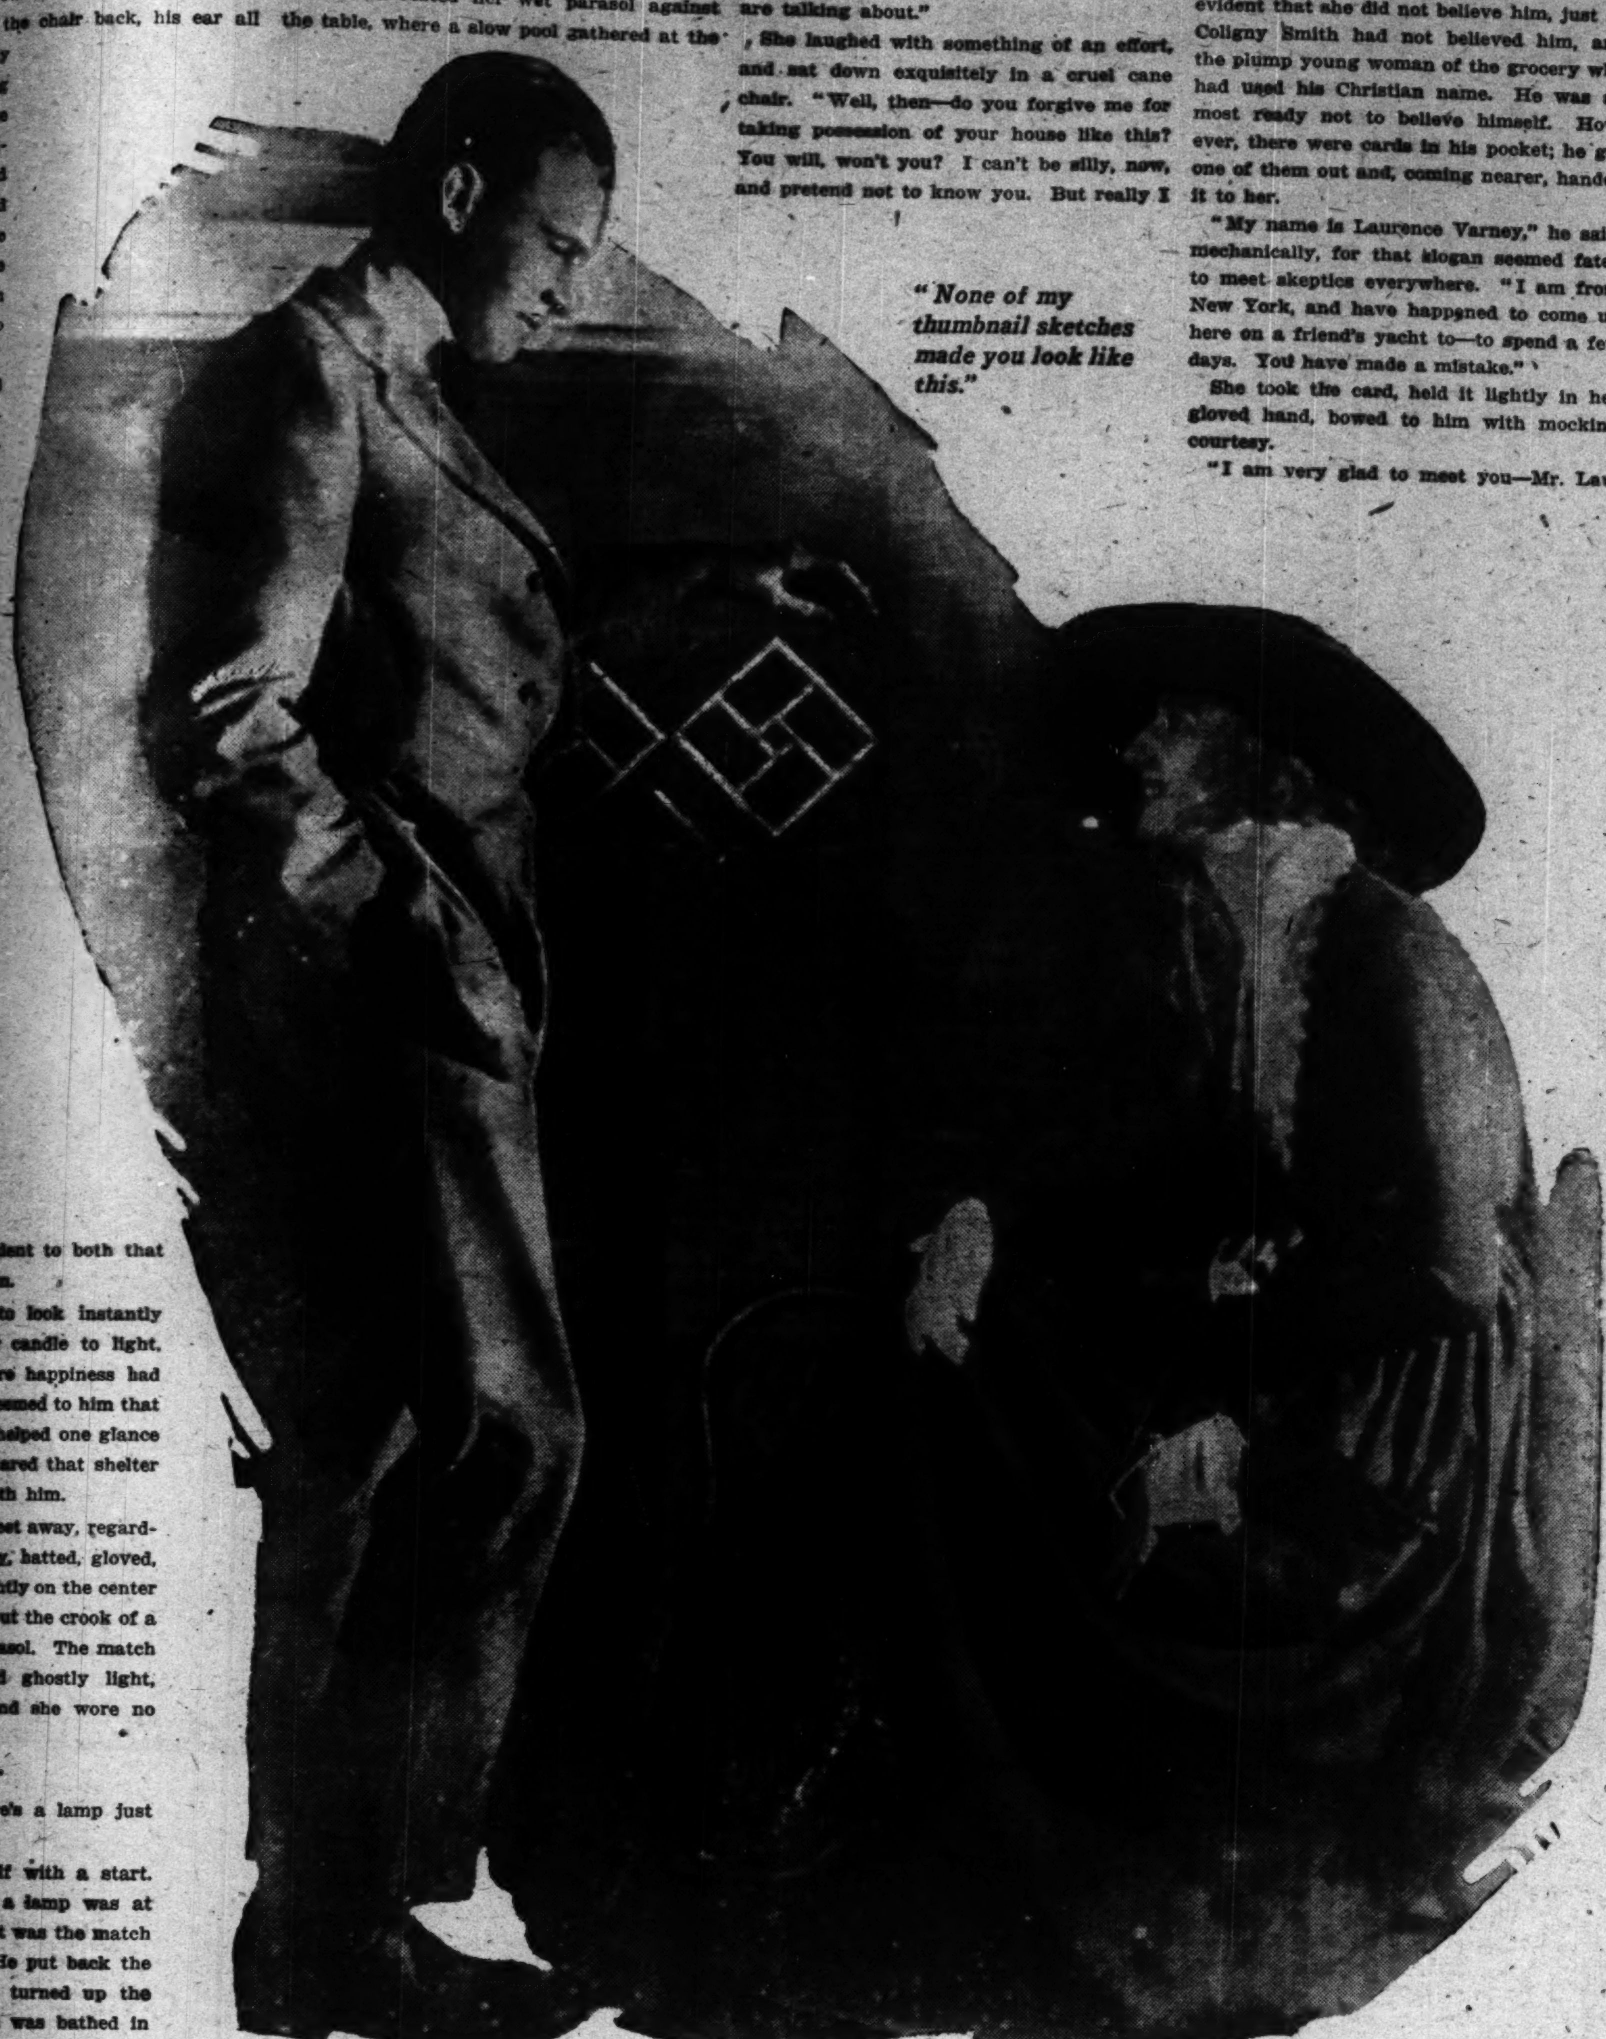
"My name is Laurence Varney," he said, mechanically, for that slogan seemed fated to meet skeptics everywhere. "I am from New York, and have happened to come up here on a friend's yacht to—to spend a few days. You have made a mistake."

She took the card, held it lightly in her gloved hand, bowed to him with mocking courtesy.

"I am very glad to meet you—Mr. Laurence Varney! I—I am from New York, too, and have happened to come up here on the New York Central with my mother to spend a few years. And I live in a white house half a mile down the road, where I ought to have been an hour ago. And I am Mary Carstairs, who has read all your books and thinks that they—O——" She broke off all at once, for there was no missing the look in his astounded face. "What in the world have I said now?"

"You—can't be—Mary Carstairs!" he cried.

"Is that so terrible?" she laughed, a little uncertainly.



"None of my thumbnail sketches made you look like this."

A SQUIRREL RESCUES TWO TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"I'D advise you people to all go out and take a long walk, for I'm going to have a dandy dinner and I want you to have good appetites so you'll enjoy it," said the Cook one Sunday morning as he stood tying on his apron in the Teenie Weenie dining room door.

"Wh-wh-wh-what are you going to-to-to have for dinner?" asked the Dunce. "A baked prune?"

"Well, here's the menu," grinned the Cook. "Potato soup, planked minnow, mashed peas, and grape salad. For dessert we'll have a date stuffed with chopped nuts and whipped cream."

"Oh, good, good!" shouted the Dunce, catching the Lady of Fashion around the waist and dancing about the room.

In a very few minutes the Teenie Weenies bundled themselves into their warm muffs, sweaters and mittens and started out on a long walk.

"Let's go down and see if the creek is frozen over," said the General. "I haven't been down that way for a long time, and it will make a nice walk for us."

There was quite a lot of snow on the ground, but as it was rather solid the little people were able to walk on it without much trouble, and in a short time they stood on the bank of the creek. For some time the Teenie Weenies stood watching the huge cakes of ice as they floated down the stream. In order to get a better view, the Lady of Fashion and the Doctor stepped out on a piece of ice which had not been broken away from the bank, and to the horror of the little people the piece of ice on which they stood snapped off and floated out into the surging stream.

It was impossible to swim among the sharp cakes of ice, as a Teenie Weenie would have been ground to pieces, for some of the cakes of ice were as big as soda crackers.

"Oh, jimminy crickets!" cried the frightened Dunce. "The Lady of Fashion and the Doctor will be drowned and then they won't get any of that go-go-good dinner the Cook is getting ready for us," and the poor Dunce burst into tears.

"Hold on a minute, Doc!" shouted a voice, and to the astonishment of the frightened Teenie Weenies a squirrel ran up a bush which hung over the stream. Hanging by his front feet, the squirrel swung his body down over the stream so that his bushy tail was only an inch or two from the water, and as the Lady of Fashion and the Doctor floated by he yelled to the Doctor to catch on.

Catching the Lady of Fashion about the waist, the Doctor grabbed the tail and the squirrel quickly pulled the two Teenie Weenies up to the bush, down which they safely crawled to the bank.

The Teenie Weenies were not the only ones who enjoyed a good dinner that day, for the little people presented the squirrel and his wife with four hickory nuts, five English walnuts, and a half dozen almonds for his bravery in rescuing the Lady of Fashion and the Doctor.

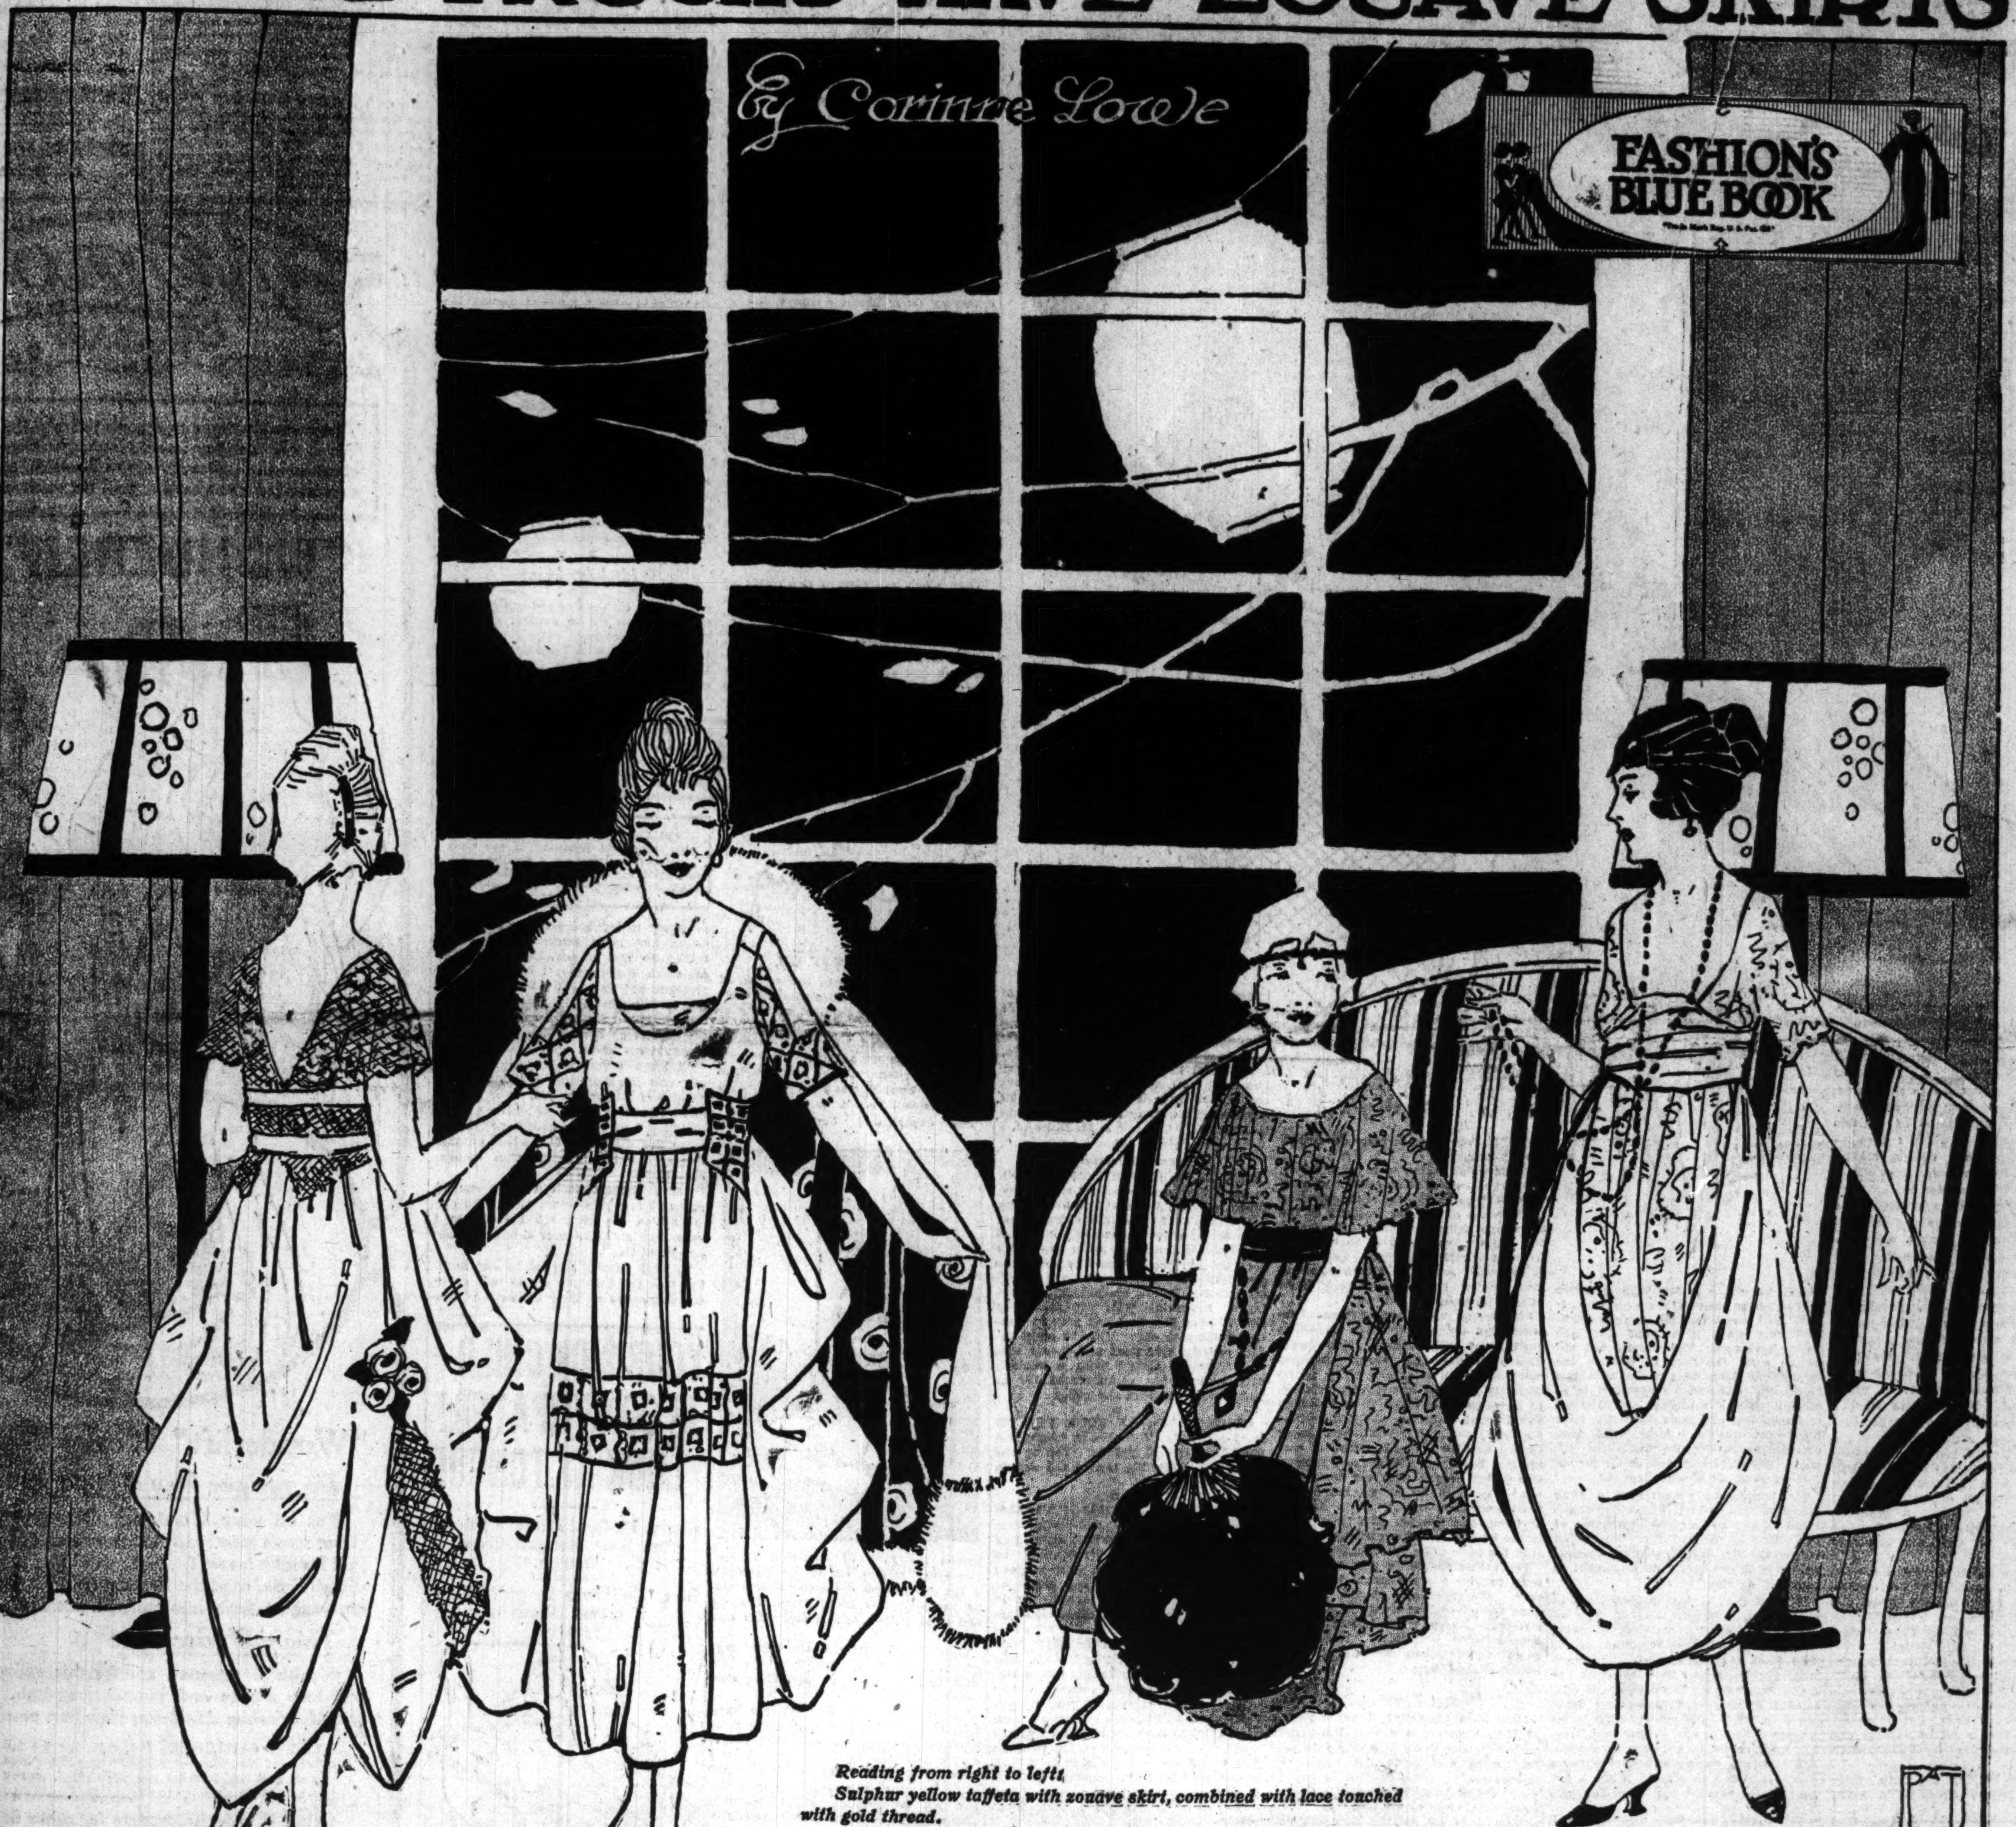
EVENING FROCKS HAVE ZOUAVE SKIRTS

By Corinne Lowe



Reading from right to left:

Sulphur yellow taffeta with zouave skirt, combined with lace touched with gold thread.

Black satin gown draped with Chantilly and finished with jet girdle.

Geranium pink gros de londres set off with motifs of gold embroidery.

Sea green faille, inspired by Directoire modes, with corsage and draping of silver lace.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special correspondence.)—Who was it who started the present full on the hips fashion in frocks? We suspect somebody. It is the woman who tried every reducing exercise in vain. She grazed on the salads of the "eat and grow neat" diet; she took her knitting to the electric cabinet; she went over herself with rolling pins and every other frivolous implement short of the road engine. And still those hips continued to unfurl.

Then, not being able to whittle herself down, the hapless—but, alas, not hipless—lady decided to make a virtue of her fault. "I'll start something which will make every woman look as though she had 'em," said she, gnashing her teeth. So she cranked up the barrel skirt, the zouave skirt, the underfed at the ankles skirt. And now every other woman, fat and thin, is following her example. We are all acting as if we were in that pleasant land of Circassia where ladies grow thin trying to get fat, and where they pen beauties up and feed them sweetmeats just in order to give them the barrel effect even before they dress.

The zouave trouser schedule is followed in many of the late spring gowns. The trousie remains, of course, a demure and maidenly skirt. But, that makes no difference. The important thing is that here we have the same baggy, floppy, hippy lines—tapering down to a neat little ankle—which are seen in those jovial unmentionables of the zouave regiment.

In evening frocks the zouave flop is perhaps at its best and several of the big French artistes have made the most of it. Obviously, the long moyen age waistline is impossible with a skirt of this character. Don't we all remember how the gallant zouave combines with his baggy underpinning a wide sash and a bolero jacket? Indeed, it is a mode which requires the elevated waistline, and as a result most of the frocks inspired by the picturesque soldier man have as first corollary the lifted girdle of Empire and Directoire periods.

Now that the secrets of the French dressmakers have popped out of their box, it is interesting to see how much taffeta is being used. To be sure, foulard has, after a long invalidism, taken a few smelling salts and revived this season. Afternoon frocks, wrap linings and trimmings all bear witness to this convalescence. But, in evening clothes, taffeta has taken a new grip on style, and, combined with tulle, with lace, with embroideries in spangles and beads and most of all, perhaps, with lame brocades, is responsible for some of the loveliest of foreign creations.

The evening dress at the extreme right shows taffeta of sulphur yellow—a much favored tint—worked out on zouave lines. Opening over fine white lace with just a breath of gold, the taffeta comes up in the back to the girdle. From some of these zouave skirts we note a saucy little pointed train of lace darting out in the back, but this frock has all the courage of its zouaveness.

Chantilly lace! The words jump out like that in every consideration of present modes. At all the smart restaurants one sees nowadays women wearing hats of this lace touched perhaps with a bit of jet. Afternoon frocks of taffeta and etamine tussor are combined with it, and in evening models of black satin and taffeta it is much to the fore. Pleasant news it is, too, for the most of us, for there are few women who at some time of their career have not contracted Chantilly. It is like measles or the conviction that we were born to reform the world. Everybody has to go through it.

Now the revival of this lace suggests all sorts of possibilities for fixing up old frocks. All we have to do is to go sneezing among the cobwebs and the mothballs to unearth some bit of buried grandeur and then apply it to a dab of new material. Such possibilities are outlined in the second from the right, a stunning creation of black satin and Chantilly.

The skirt of this frock is quite narrow and almost instep length and the coveted hip extensions are produced by panniers of lace draped so that the edges fall in zigzag lines from knees to the skirt hem. The collar stops at the shoulders, from which the edges hang in a long V, fastened together at about knee length with a jet ornament. This note of jet is repeated both in the girdle and in the hair band. We are, by the way, seeing more and more of jet trimming—another piece of luck for the woman who goes to the attic when she wants to make a "new" frock.

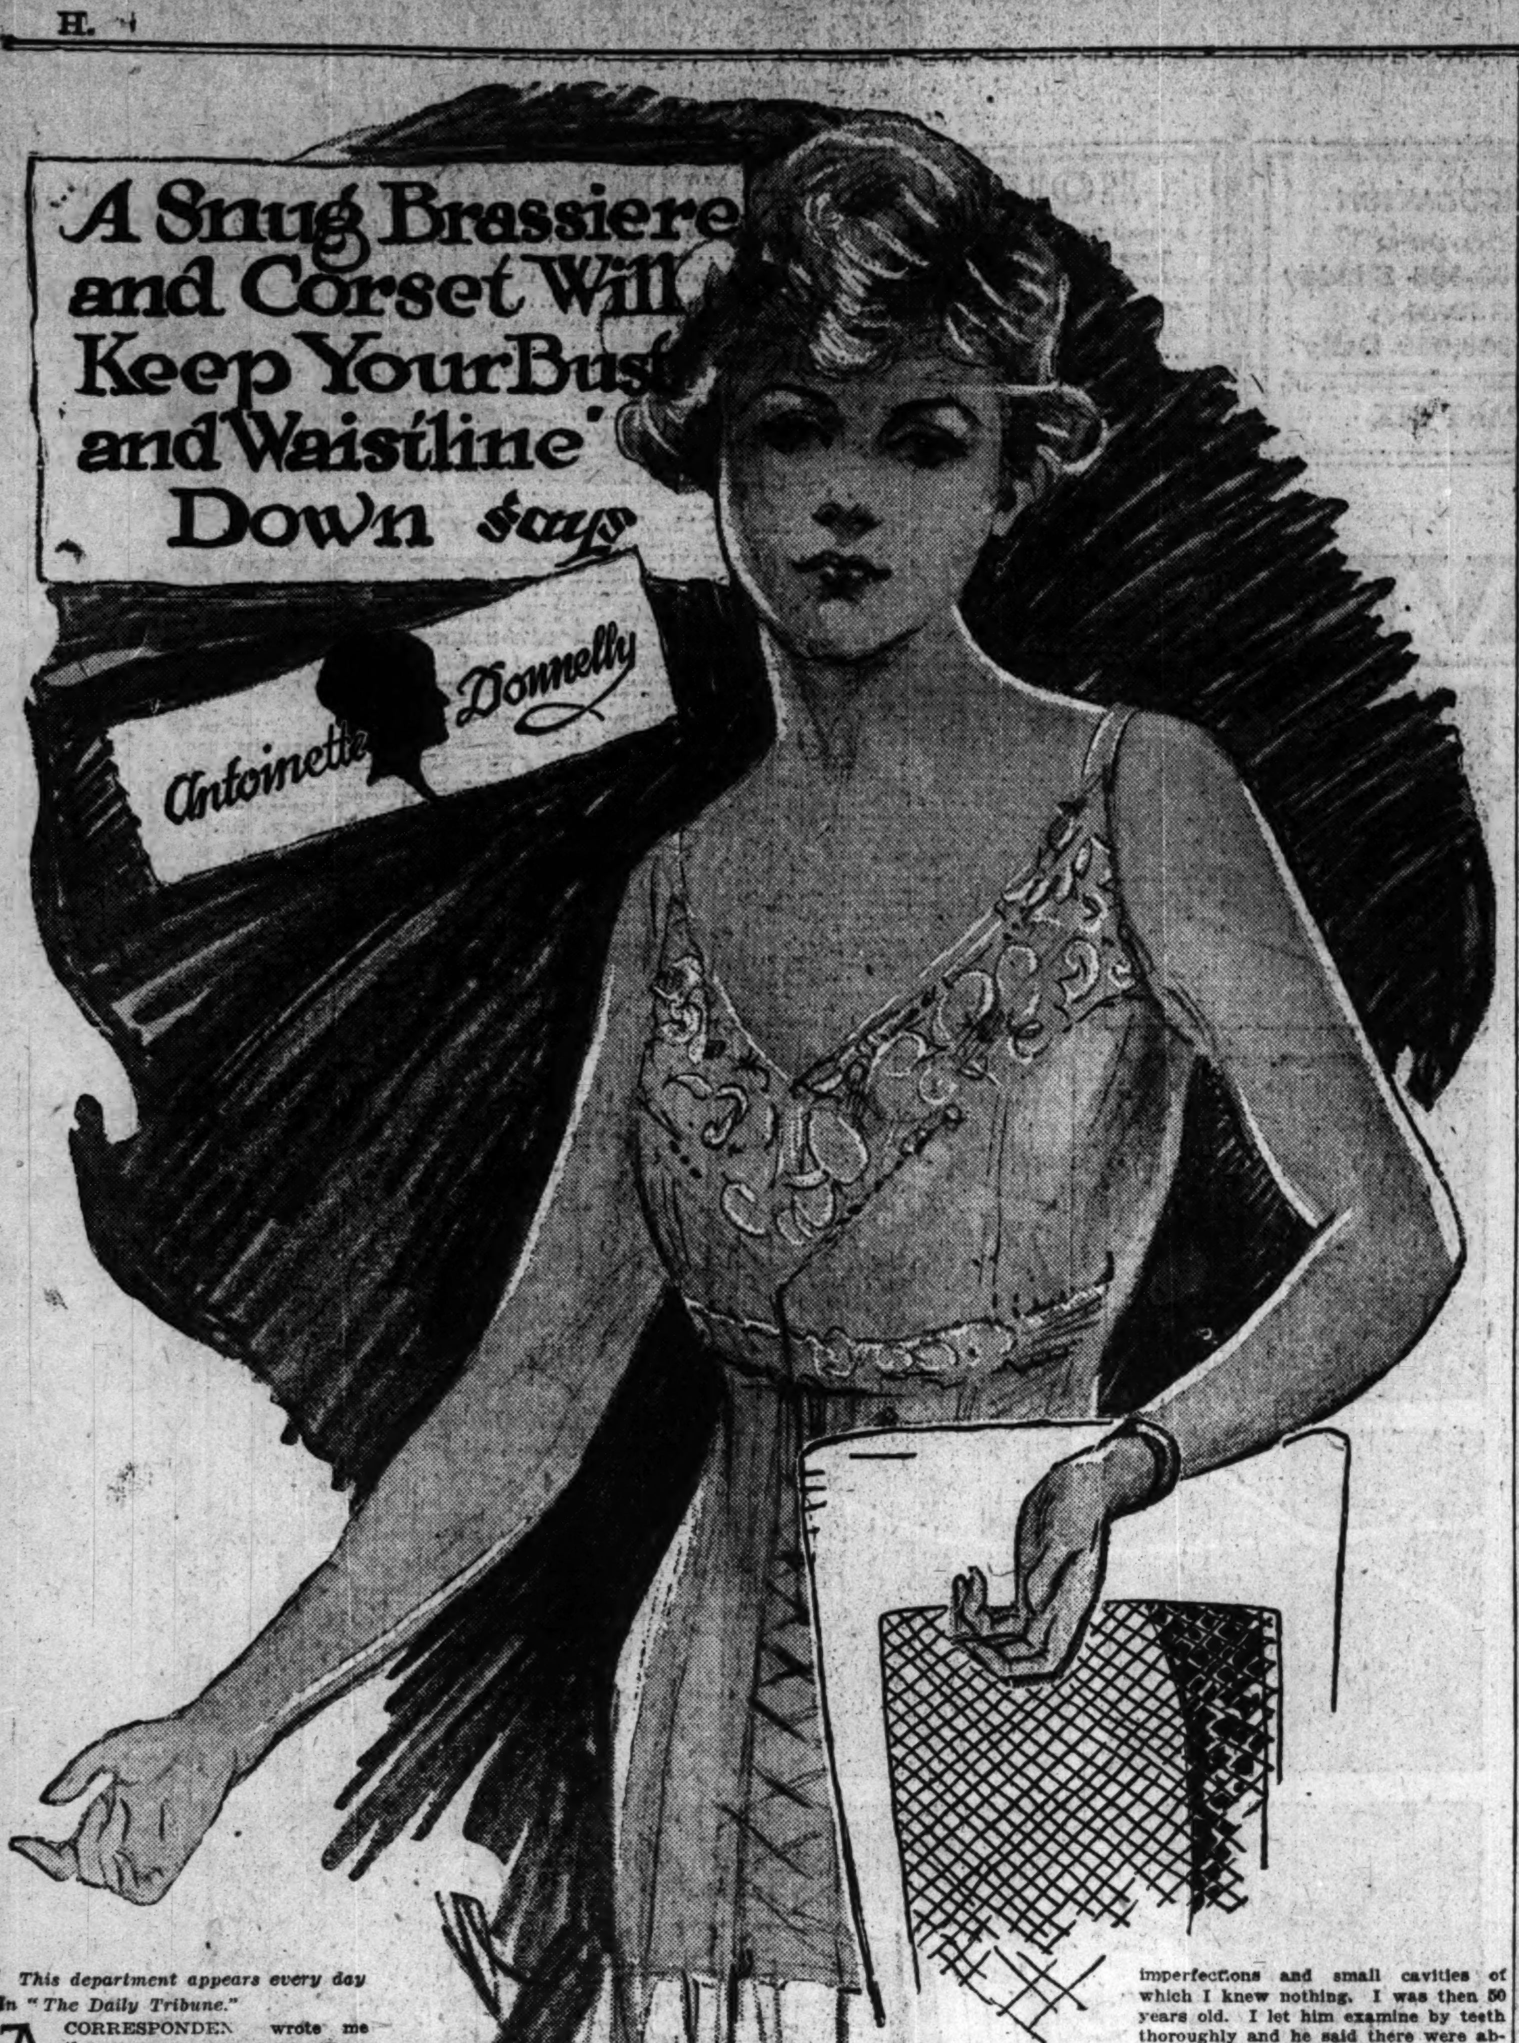
Of black evening frocks we have seen much for the last six weeks. It might seem, in fact, as if most women's idea of beauty was a coal in a hansom on a dark country road. They can't get enough of black. This spring, however, the decree has gone forth that we shall dress as much like grandma's old fashioned garden as possible. Rose color, green, sulphur yellow, light blue, cerise—bright colors are found in all the newest evening frocks. With these go, too, much metallic trimming, mousseline de soie, brocades, moire ribbons—everything to make us look as festive as the prize float in "Old Home week."

Evidencing this thirst for brightness is the next frock, an imported model of geranium pink gros de Londres, trimmed with motifs of gold embroidery. In the back the ornaments are placed at the hem of the skirt. Note, please, too, the zouave drapery at the sides.

Faille is a favored material of the evening "clo" and in the gown to the extreme left this material is worked out in a lovely shade of sea green. Pure Directoire is this frock in its inspiration, as will be noted from the little corsage of silver lace and the skirt slashed at the sides just the way the naughty ladies used to do after France had finished with her aristocratic heads. Silver lace, punctuated with silver roses, emphasizes this slashed skirt.

A Snug Brassiere and Corset Will Keep Your Bust and Waistline Down says

Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

A CORRESPONDENT wrote me the other day: "Dear Miss Donnelly: I have had an experience which has set me to wondering, and a story from you on the subject would be appreciated by me and some other women to whom I have repeated my experience, thereby raising the question, too, in their minds. It is about corsets and brassieres.

"Up until four months ago I had never gone without a brassiere and was always careful about a neat waistline. Then I got 'sloppy.' That's the word exactly. I found myself leaving my corsets as loose as I could and I left off the brassiere entirely, wearing a loose corset cover instead. And before I knew it, I discovered my waistline had spread a whole inch. My hips seemed to be broader and my bust certainly had become enlarged much to my disgust. Never again shall I slump! I probably would still be slopping around and getting bigger if my brother hadn't called me down in a way that brothers have—that brutally frank but effective way. I know that I have been active enough otherwise. I feel sure that going without a brassiere and leaving my corset strings loose had everything to do with my increased measurements. J."

It is true, absolutely, that a woman who has worn corsets until her abdominal muscles have become weak and flabby must keep on wearing them snug if she doesn't want to spread. Not tight, mind you! Snug!

Since their institution, corsets have maintained the same disputable qualities as war, because there are those who condemn and those who approve. The majority are for them, but there are folk who believe a lot of damage and no good results come from their wearing.

There's no denying the antis' claim that a corsetless figure is a better health insurance policy than a figure that has been raised and shaped on corsets. But, the corsetless figure is beautiful only when it is kept slim and strong and firm. The minute the abdomen sags, it's time to put on the armor. So long as you have to live in an age when man's approval is so large a part of woman's aim in dress and man has and does distinctly show his preference for a neat, trim, well corseted figure over an uncorseted one, where flesh has intruded to an unwelcome degree, or to any degree.

The continuous pressure of a snug brassiere and corset keeps down the blood supply and causes absorption of fat. This is the value of the rubber reducers. The sweating value claimed for them is not really as important in reducing as this.

Granted that in our present state of civilization, with our present style of dress and with the imperfect muscular development of the majority of us who have reached maturity, we must wear corsets, let us have them as hygienic as possible. Little injury, if any, is done by wearing a good fitting, front laced corset that is not too high to interfere with free and proper breathing. Let your corset be cut low all around. High backed corsets are apt to make you look round shouldered, while a low back gives smoother and more desirable lines. If your bust is fully developed, wear a brassiere.

A woman physician in a big hospital, who has examined thousands of women, states emphatically that bad corseting is the cause of a great majority of the aches and pains of women. Backaches and fatigue she claims to be the most frequent trouble resulting. She found in over 400 women backward displacement caused by ordinary, back laced corsets incorrectly put on.

For women who have sagging abdomens this woman physician advocates putting on their corsets lying down. This procedure, too, reforms displacement of the pelvic organs, which an incorrectly put on corset will produce. In one special instance it was demonstrated that a woman who had nothing physically the matter with her to cause such a condition was a victim of continuous backache and general fatigue. Her pelvic organs with her corsets on were found to be in an immovable, fixed condition, which made for the backache and fatigue. The trouble was in the way she put her corset on, lacing it in the back to an extreme tightness.

The corset should be just sufficiently snug to give the abdominal walls support. The brassiere should be just snug enough so that breathing is not restricted. Every large busted woman should wear brassieres. Nothing is more vulgar than an unbrassiered, overdeveloped figure.

Perfect Teeth at 73.

Dear Miss Donnelly: I am a reader of THE TRIBUNE and saw the article with reference to the girl of 25 with perfect teeth and could not resist the temptation of answering it. I am 73 years old and have never had a dentist even look in my mouth but once. Then a dentist friend bet me he could find imperfections and small cavities of which I knew nothing. I was then 50 years old. I let him examine by teeth thoroughly and he said there were absolutely no cavities or imperfections. I have just a trifle space between my two front teeth and they are just about the size of Miss Wilson's. I don't let any dentist clean my teeth. I attend to that myself. J. M. BREWER.

Answers to Inquiries.

GERTIE W.: IT IS JOY TO ME, TOO, to know that you have been so successful in reducing and that you are feeling better than ever before. Remember that each set of exercises includes chin and neck muscle practice. After practicing each set you should massage your face and neck with cold cream for a couple of minutes. Follow by dashing cold water on the skin. This will make the skin of your face firm and prevent wattles under your chin. Then at night before retiring give neck and face a special massage, ending with a rubbing over with either camphorated ice or plain ice to contract the pores.

INTERESTED: IF YOUR FRIEND is 15 and 5 feet 3 inches in height she should weigh 120 pounds. You at the same age 5 feet 5½ inches tall should weigh 126½ pounds.

SCARED GIRL: DISAGREEABLE dreams and nightmares and restlessness are generally associated with indigestion and biliousness. This trouble may be overcome by keeping the liver in good condition. Don't drink any coffee at dinner or before going to bed. Avoid fried foods and guard against constipation.

GRACE C.: IT TAKES TIME AND patience to correct enlarged pores. The following is a simple lotion: Rose water, six ounces; elder flower water, two ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce; tannic acid, ten grains. Apply the lotion morning and night with a piece of absorbent cotton. I have an excellent formula for a skin food, also instructions for facial massage, and will be pleased to send them to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

Her Last Ride.

My friend and I attended a box social at a country schoolhouse. For some reason or other a pumpkin pie was put in our buggy seat and he sat down on it. I laughed all the way home, but I never had a chance to take another ride, for he was so angry because I laughed that he never did come back.

Too Tall for Him.

Through friends who were just leaving for the city I met her at a summer resort. Our admiration seemed to be mutual, so I proposed to her before the end of the week. Her mother had been called to the city before I met her and would not return for some time.

I had not seen my fiancee on Sunday until about 1 o'clock, when she came running out to me and gushingly asked how I'd like to have that tall woman on the veranda for a mother-in-law. Scarcely turning my head to look at the woman referred to, I unsuspectingly replied: "That freak? Well, I should say not! She looks like a comic valentine."

"How dare you?" shrieked the object of my affections. "Why, that's my mother, who returned this morning. I hate you and never shall speak to you again."

She kept her word. F. J.

A SIGN OF A THOROUGHBRED.

NOTHING is so unmistakable a sign of good breeding as a quiet, self-possessed manner. The De Croy family of Belgium, one of the oldest and most distinguished of Europe, evidently "sets great store" by this air of tranquil poise, as it is the custom of the men of this family to present their brides with bracelets with the words, "Du Calme," set in diamonds on the gold circle, a perpetual reminder of what is expected and required of the women of the De Croys.

This calm air is not for use only when life runs smoothly. The test of it is in the trying moments when events conspire to try the soul and test the courage. It was the distinguishing trait of the old French aristocracy in the days of the reign of terror in the French revolution. History has no more thrilling, inspiring chapter than that which depicts the gallant bearing of the nobles of France, men and women, in the prisons and on the scaffolds.

Perhaps, however, it is more a test of character and training to maintain this air of quiet poise in the smaller, daily contretemps of life, as when the maid drops the china, or the dressmaker fails to deliver the new gown in time for a party, or the street car goes by without stopping for your signal.

A smiling acceptance of the large or small troubles or annoyances of life is a sign of the thoroughbred.

MISS R. E.: Even if the women at whose homes the club meetings are held have not called upon you, you may attend the meetings, as this would not be the same thing as accepting an invitation from them to a social function.

I. I.: I am sorry to say that I have no printed matter on the subject to which you refer, but if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be happy to give you some information about the matter.

P. J.: When a man is walking with two women it is not correct for him to walk between them, but on the outside. A man may give a girl candy, books, or flowers. Unless she is engaged to him a girl ought not to accept jewelry from a man.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Industrious and Persevering

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU Pisces people who are born during the week beginning today are naturally inclined to question everything and always want to know the reason for things. You are like the "fishes," the symbol of your sign, always moving around in a quiet way to learn what more you can gather that will be of interest.

Unless you Pisces women are well trained in childhood you are apt to be constantly losing your belongings and mislaying other people's things, but so good natured are you with it all that you are always forgiven. Being such curious folk, it is natural that you are not good listeners and true it is, for you think nothing of breaking into a discourse with something entirely irrelevant.

You have a deep love nature and are always anxious to give to those who need. Unfortunately your faith and generosity are sometimes betrayed, and if this happens too often you are apt to withdraw into a shell of indifference and cynicism in order to protect your natural sensitiveness. Thus inclosed, like your prototype, you gain the name of being "cold blooded fish," an accusation seldom merited.

Your plans are always the result of long and careful deliberation and you are determined in carrying them out. In the fulfillment of a duty on promise, you are equally determined and faithful. Being logical as well as persevering, you can always give a reason for everything you do and demand the same. And how you dread to be dependent upon others, and as for poverty—it is nothing short of a disgrace.

You have a natural feeling that you are working under difficulties and an exaggerated idea of your duty, but being so persistent, you frequently overcome this natural diffidence and accomplish splendid things.

As you like to study out little problems in mechanics and engineering, you stand a good chance of succeeding as an inventor. And you are so fond of beautiful things that you may also succeed as a critic, an artist, or writer. When well educated, you can acquire a purity of style that resembles the clear, blue water of your native element. As you are fond of responsibility, you can be relied upon to fill acceptably any place of trust, and if you have been trained to methodical business habits, you will make excellent accountants, cashiers, and bookkeepers. As a teacher, superintendent, or musician you might also find success.

A devotee of the water and water sports, yet you like to have your hand on the tiller rather than to sit idly back among the cushions. You also like to bait your own hook, whether man or woman, and you are the sort of fisherman who will sit by the hour in the hot sun just for a "lucky strike." Hunting is also numbered among the sports you enjoy.

Inasmuch as you demand a reason for everything, if you should be thrown in contact with a Libra person, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, who refuses to give any reasons for what he does, the result will be perilous for those concerned. Your congenial friends and companions will be found among Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, and Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20. Cancer, June 23-July 22, would also be happy marital companion for you. Pisces' most fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 12 and Aug. 5; birthstones, moonstones and chrysolite; colors, gray, green, pink, and black.

He Likes Many.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been introduced to a very fine young fellow and he has taken me to several places of late. He cares very little for me. As I am old enough to keep company and think a great deal of him, could you give me advice as how to regain his friendship?"

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

I suspect you are a young girl of the type who expects if a man takes her around a few times he is expected to keep on paying her attention, whereas he may be the type of a young man who likes to know lots of girls and is willing to take them out and show them a good time. If I were you, I would not make any effort to get things back on the old ground until he shows a desire to renew the friendship. In the meantime go out with other young men and have a good time while you are young.

May Separated Them.

"Dear Miss Blake: Last winter I met a young man and we went together until May and then he said he was mad at something, but what it is I do not know. What would you advise me to do? "A. R."

I would certainly insist upon finding out the cause of his "peeve," because there is some good reason to make him act this way. Why don't you write him a note on that nice pink letter paper of yours and ask him to tell you if you've been at fault?

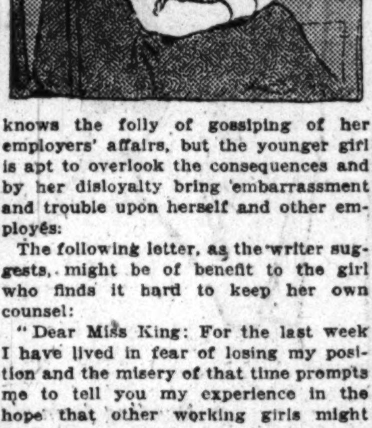
For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

> Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

DON'T PASS IT ON.

MANY times during the course of her working experience the business girl is tempted to pass on to a fellow employé some bit of information which has come to her knowledge by accident, or by reason of her position. The temptation is especially keen if she feels that in so doing she will benefit an associate.



The experienced business woman knows the folly of gossiping of her employers' affairs, but the younger girl is apt to overlook the consequences and by her disloyalty bring embarrassment and trouble upon herself and other employés:

The following letter, as the writer suggests, might be of benefit to the girl who finds it hard to keep her own counsel:

"Dear Miss King: For the last week I have lived in fear of losing my position and the misery of that time prompts me to tell you my experience in the hope that other working girls might profit by my experience and respect any and all information about business which comes to them in a confidential manner from their employers.

"I am a stenographer, working in a retail store. For a year my work consisted in taking dictation from the salesmen of one of the departments. Some time ago I was promoted and since have been acting as secretary to the vice president of the firm.

"The men in the department had all been courteous to me and were unusually considerate about my work; naturally I was interested in them and their work. About three weeks ago, while I was taking dictation in the private office of the vice president the general manager came in. My boss indicated for me to remain and while I sat there they talked about increasing the salary of two of the men I knew. The vice president closed the discussion by saying he would talk the matter over with him the next day.

"A half hour later, when one of the men came to my desk, I could not resist the temptation to tell him that he and one other salesman were to get a raise. Of course, I was sorry immediately afterward that I had told him, but the mischief was done and I proceeded to forget that I had acted dishonorably in passing along this information.

"Two weeks later the salesman told me that he had never received the raise, but the other fellow had. As he thought he was entitled to one he had taken the matter up with the manager. The manager, he told me, seemed disturbed, but put the matter off for a day or two. A few days later the vice president called him into his office and asked him point blank if I had not talked to him about the raise. The salesman, fearing that I would lose my position, affirmed that I had said nothing to him about the matter, and although the manager has since questioned him on several occasions he has stuck to his story.

"I know I was under suspicion and you can imagine that I was in great danger of losing my job. For several days the vice president gave me no dictation. He finally called me into his office for dictation, but when another member of the firm came in he dismissed me.

"If I weren't such a good stenographer I probably would have been dismissed on the spot, but I feel that I have been given another chance and am on probation.

"I have learned my lesson and nothing now could induce me to talk about my employers or their business affairs. "G. L."

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out of sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, or has stomach ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Adv.

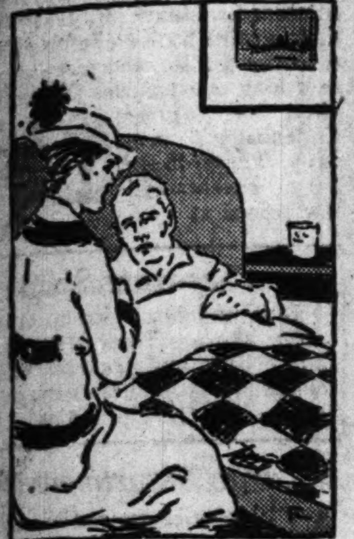
Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WHEN JULIA CHANGED HER MIND.

"SLOPPY sentiment—that's all love is," Julia used to say, and there was an ugly little curl at the corners of her lips. "A good job, a good home, the friends I want. I don't know a married woman I'd change places with. And this talk about the wonders of love—it's all too sickening for words."

Julia wasn't the sort that seemed cut out for love, anyway. She had a primness of soul that expressed itself in aggressively plain tailored suits and stiff collared waists. She was 25, looked 30, and felt 40. She was a competent, efficient, conventional, and self-sufficient woman who had never had an extra heart beat about any living man and who never expected to have. She was the sort who could go to the seashore, spend two weeks of bathing and crabbing and walking, and never know that the ladder of moonlight on the swishing lake was the Jacob's ladder of immeasurable ecstasies, and that those who trod it in fancy found heaven in fact.



It was from one of her annual vacation at the seashore that she was returning one summer when her train was wrecked. She, like all women who don't foresee a time when they will actually use it but want to be prepared for any emergency, had versed herself in first aid, and by the sheer force of her calmness she took charge of things.

A man and a woman in her car were the ones who had been most seriously injured. Both were unconscious and Julia gave most of her attention to them. The woman died before she regained consciousness and before a doctor could reach the wreck on a relief train.

Julia felt in some quixotic way that she had been responsible for the woman's death, and she offered her services in caring for the man, who for the first time since the wreck she thought about. She decided that the woman was his wife and some hard thoughts about marriage and love in general came into her heart. Maybe he would not be so broken hearted as the world would expect him to be when he found that she was dead, and perhaps it was a blessed release from a terrible slavery for her to die—bitter thoughts that no one but a woman who has never known love could think.

The doctor said that the man would need care for a day or two, that he was not fatally injured, and that if she could stop over for a few hours she could be of great service.

Slowly the man came back from the dead, sank into the limbo of delirium, called the woman's name over and over, and demanded that she kiss him good night, that she hold his hand until he went to sleep, that she tell him the story of the three little bears, that she would remember to tell Grandpa Jackson that he wanted a gun for Christmas. Then he would have a lucid moment and ask Julia where his sister had gone and demand that she come in and prove to him that she hadn't been injured.

> Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

"There's only one thing to do," the doctor said. "Put your hat and coat back on and pretend you are his sister. He's too shocked mentally to know the difference, and it's the only chance he has of getting to sleep."

Julia got into her coat, pinned her hat on, buttoned her gloves over her wrist, and hurried into the room and clasped his hands in both of hers and said, "See, brother, I'm all right."

He looked for just a moment at her, believed the deception, and then sank into a delirium of reminiscent childhood, kissed her, patted her cheek, and finally went to sleep with his big hand holding tight to her smaller one.

With their promises that the deception would never be disclosed, she left the little household where the man was resting, said good-by to the doctor, who was an old family friend, and went home, a journey of an hour or two.

The picture of that night got to haunting Julia. That kind of love, brother and sister love, wasn't sloppy sentiment, she admitted to herself. She found herself writing to the doctor one day to ask about the patient. The letters became more and more frequent, but the patient never saw them.

The doctor finally had the house party which he had promised Julia—Julia of all people in the world going to a house party that had been planned so that she could meet a man and that was the direct result of continual hinting on her part. She told herself that she wanted to see again the only man in the world who really appreciated a good woman.

When they met, the man of course didn't remember her, but a subtle sympathy was there and a pleasant chumminess grew in their hearts. For six months they wrote, saw one another occasionally, were the best of friends, and then one day he was taken ill. Julia heard of his illness through the doctor, and once again she put on her hat and coat and buttoned her gloves about her wrists to go to his bedside.

He was sleeping when she went in, and, without looking at the nurse, without remembering that she felt 40 and looked 30 and thought love was a sloppy sentiment, she ran to his bedside and leaned over him. In a moment she would have kissed his lips, but he awoke and had put his arms around her neck and kissed her before she knew what had happened. Then he apologized, said he must have been dreaming, and yet he felt so dreadfully acquainted with her, as if he knew her better than anybody else in the world, as if he'd known her thousands of years ago, and before long he was talking the language which only lovers know and she was understanding it all and glorying in its beauty. She confessed then—to herself as well as to him—for the first time that she had loved him ever since that terrible night when he had gone to sleep clutching her hand.

"And next summer we'll be married," he said, "and go and sit by the sea and it will be tipped with moonbeams and we'll climb on the ladder of moonlight to heaven."

"O, isn't love wonderful?" Julia sighed. It's like—O, it's just love!"

Weight Reducing Contest.

> Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experience, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Solo Football Before Breakfast.

I am a young married woman and was fat. I have reduced my weight twenty-eight pounds in four weeks. I get up every morning at 5 o'clock and put on a gym suit, go into the back yard, and play football all by myself, and I play and play hard. I do this for one hour, then come in and take a cool shower and get breakfast for my husband, and I feel and look like a million dollars.

C. S.

Requires Sticktoitiveness.

I am 4 feet 10 inches tall. I was always stout, but lately became almost square. The remarks of the people about my proportions drove me wild. I took some kind of pills which claimed to reduce three pounds a day, but the result was a ruined stomach, and the little flesh I lost was put on quicker than it was lost as soon as I stopped taking the pills.

After I paid the penalty for taking a "reducer" I tried to be content with my figure, coming to the conclusion that there is nothing to do to reduce flesh.

When I read the series of exercises and diet given to Mrs. Eva Lane I was possessed of a new desire to reduce. I kept strictly to the method, and not only reduced in flesh but also my previously ruined stomach was corrected.

I am still continuing the exercises, and am still careful about my diet, not because I want to reduce more, for I am normal weight, but because by doing so I feel better, happier, and full of energy.

I am sure that this method can help every one who desires to reduce, if only they stick to it. Of course, one has to get busy and be ready to sacrifice some of the "good things to eat."

P. S.

Next Day Never Came.

I always worried about being fat, so I decided to follow Mrs. Lane's example. I would get up mornings determined to follow the instructions and would carry them out till dinner. When the fat producing foods were passed I would think I would eat what I wanted that meal and would start the next day. But that next day never came, and I am still wishing I was thin.

O. P.

Too Much Turkey.

I am sorry to say I am one that could not keep it up, although I was reducing wonderfully. I had started a week or so before Thanksgiving, and my muscles were becoming loose and I had not a stiff feeling, as I usually did. But it was on Thanksgiving I had to break my vow, and when I returned home after dining out I was terribly stuffed, and during the Christmas holidays it was the same way. Being invited out so much, I was unable to keep it up, but I am sure it would have done worlds of good, for I lost five pounds in seven days when I first began.

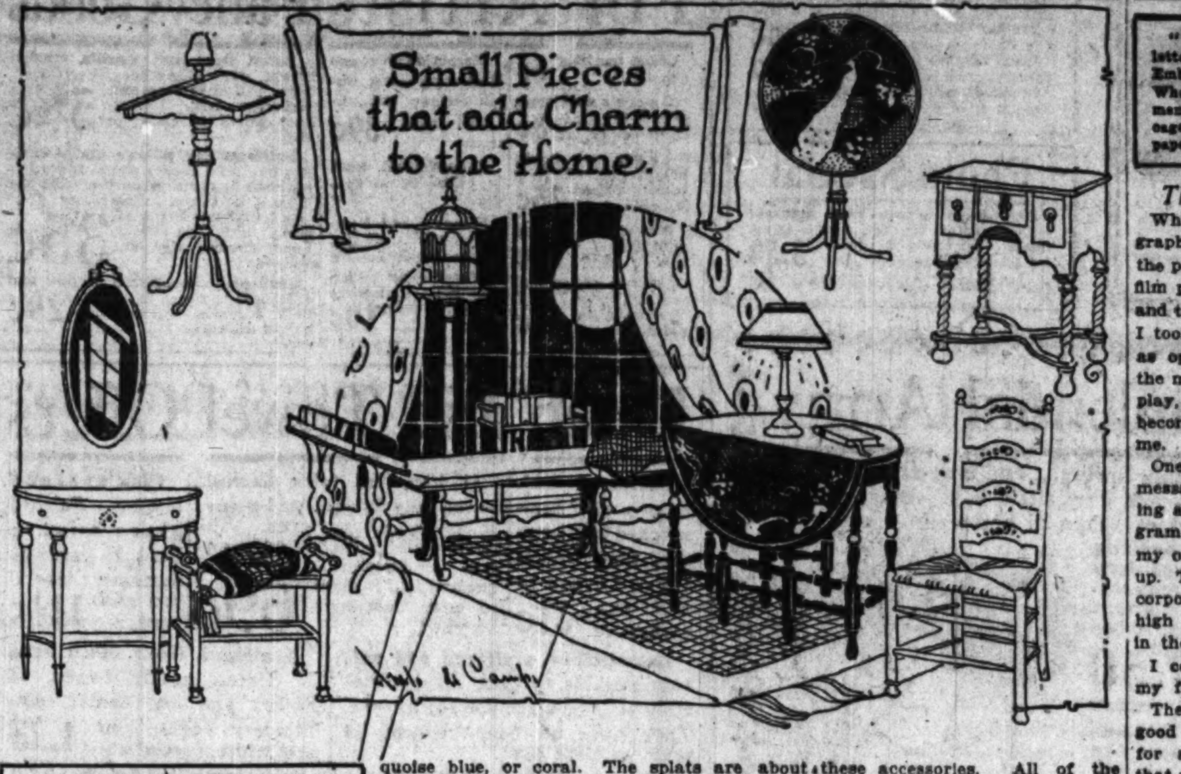
"JOLLYING THE OLD PLACE UP."



> Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

By Anita de Campi.

ABOUT 20 per cent of the customers who come into a furniture store come intending to furnish their quarters throughout; the other 80 per cent have their homes already furnished and come to look for occasional pieces to add charm, comfort, or beauty to what they possess. It is not to be wondered at then that manufacturers, realizing the importance of "filling in" material, turn out such attractive odd pieces, planned for all manner of purposes, and that these things are the bread and butter media to a great number of retail dealers. They are like all children's idea of what a gift should be, "ardently desirable, but not actually necessary."

This year the little temptations in furniture are innumerable. They are so lovely that we say immediately on seeing each one, "O, I must have one like that—and it isn't so very expensive, either. It would be quite worth while to curtail some other expense and I'm going to get it—that's all there is to it!"

Chief among the irresistibles in the gift line is the little sewing stand. Every furniture department of any importance carries it. This particular piece bobbed up over night, as it were, and shows itself scattered all over everywhere, as gayly as a crop of dandelions. Sometimes the quaint creation is in plain wood and sometimes in lacquer, but it is so pretty it may be used in any room in the house. In fact, it is purposely made light and with handles, so that it may be carried easily to wherever one wishes to sit down and sew. The lifting lids disclose the arrangement for spools and silks and all the paraphernalia for either mending or fancy work. Perhaps it may be because it is so portable that it has an air of actual vivacity, as though it might almost flutter about of its own volition. It snuggles up beside your big chair like a toy spaniel.

Somewhat similar in shape and size to the sewing stand is a manly looking revolving study table. This is a mighty comfortable thing to hold the book or paper one is reading.

All of the articles shown in this sketch are the furniture accessory novelties of this year's manufacture. Of course, sewing stands have been made before—most well known is the Martha Washington—but this year has brought new variations.

I hope you notice the pillows. They are the newest fad. Instead of being stuffed full like ordinary pillows they are scantly filled, so that they are more like pads really than like pillows. They drape themselves across the arm of a chair in the most listless fashion, held languidly in place by the weight of the huge tassel at the ends. There is a secret about them, though, that you must know. Since they are so scantly filled you may be sure the filling would all fall to one end, were it not that the pillow itself is divided into compartments. Two fitted pieces intersect the pillow towards the middle, dividing the down into them through separate parts that effectually prevent it from packing.

Like a ray of sunshine in a somber room is the single piece of gaily colored furniture. It may be either painted and adorned with posies or lacquered and decorated. A splash of color this year is just about indispensable. If you do not care for it in furniture, then achieve it in fabric. Turn it loose in your curtains, rugs, or cushions. I have seen a room done in sand color as deadly monotonous as the desert of Sahara fairly transfused with life by simply adding a pair of vivid gladiola taffeta curtains between the ecru glass curtains and the sand colored inside draperies, and looping the latter partly back to disclose a glimpse of this wonderful tint.

To the right in the sketch is a little chair that might well serve as a color accident in the average room. It has a rush bottom and the cunning frame with its quaint ladder back comes in well chosen tones of corn color, turquoise blue, or coral. The splats are trimmed with a tiny floral design. If a silk slip pad is used on the chair it should have a great tassel at each corner.

There is at present no end to the variety of lacquer in small things, as in great sets. The little lacquered gate leg table shown here is attractive. It comes in black, garnet, deep green, old gold, and, indeed, can be had in any color to harmonize with any color scheme. The tip table, too, shown at the top, is a desirable little piece.

At the left in the sketch is a most enviable little group of furnishings—a mahogany console table, delicate elliptical mirror, and boudoir bench. This is a little group that is particularly adaptable to small quarters. It would make itself at home almost anywhere. It is an excellent arrangement for a tiny hall; in a dining room it could be used as a serving table, or in a living room could serve in place of a dresser for the occasional "over night" guest. The same may be said for the little lowboy in brown mahogany at the upper right. This is a beautiful piece with its turned legs, pear shaped drop handles, and graceful under stretcher.

Small book racks are always an acceptable addition. The little trough shown here is designed to place beside an easy chair, and it may be used either as a reading-stand for one open book or as a rack for a selection of "the latest fiction." Another small rack with a triple shelf is seen close to the window. This is for magazines or books.

Yellow and black are the colors chosen for the Japanese reed bird cage. The pedestal is yellow, as are the reeds, and the trimmings are of brilliant red and black lacquer.

The up to date living room is not quite complete without a long, narrow bench. The one in the picture is of walnut and is simple in style. But the market now affords a great variety of these benches. Several are sometimes found in one living room, and this is always an indication that the owner is fond of dancing. The benches remain in the room when all other big pieces are removed and the floor "cleared for action," as they take but little space and accommodate a goodly number between dances.

There is no room left for talk about hundreds of other extras, the tea tables, the chaise longue, tea carts, lamps, book ends, smoking stands, ferneries, tea trays, mirrors, fire screens, and so on. The permanent possession of any one of these things should certainly mean more than the possession of an identically priced article of wearing apparel. The possession of the latter is seldom more than temporary, for fashion certainly snatches it away at the end of a single season, no matter how excellently it may be made nor of what good material.

Just a word, however, of warning about these accessories. All of the novelties I sketched here are alluring and all together represent a considerable amount of money. Don't try to buy them all. My idea is not to propose using all of these things in one room, but to offer a variety of suggestions that you may choose one or two from among them to add a piquant touch to surroundings which by repeated daily viewing may have become slightly monotonous—not to go in for wild extravagance in detail, but by the adding of just the right thing to—well, shall we say "jolly the old place up."

Answers to Inquiries.

MISS SOPHIA M. H.: I think that with the things you mention a burnt orange rug would be striking. Use orange and black for your draperies, and if you can find a fabric with touches of white in it, this would be well also. It was the fad last year to draw the davenport straight in front of the fireplace. This year it is more in favor to have it on one side. When space permits two davenports are used, one at either side of the fireplace. Use a black floor lamp with an old gold shade.

* *

MRS. W. T. C.: I regret I cannot assist you in writing your paper, but if you will look in the "Poole" index at the public library wou will find there more information than I could possibly give you in a short letter, from which you can easily compile your paper to read before your club.

* *

MRS. M. W. J.: The lamp of which you sent an illustration taken from a magazine is evidently made of green pottery and could be found in almost any vase department. The fittings are adjusted to lamps of this sort, either kerosene or electric, in the departments where they are bought.

* *

MISS ADDIE A. C.: I had the beautiful holidays that you were kind enough to wish me, and I thank you for your very good will. You are right in thinking that bric-a-brac has gone out of fashion. I would suggest your lining the glass doors of your cabinet that seems to have too miscellaneous an assortment of articles in it with unbleached raw silk, shirred on to upper and lower rods. I hope to have the pleasure of hearing from you again.

* *

MRS. S. K.: You could use the old upholstery that has been on your wing chair as a pattern. Take that to the fancy work department and they will help you in selecting the materials to make your cross stitch cover. I think you will be delighted with this work when you have it finished.

An Effective Laxative for Growing Children

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Highly Recommended as a Family Remedy.

In children the slightest irregularity of the bowels has a tendency to disturb the entire digestive system, and unless promptly remedied invites serious illness. The experienced mother, knows that by training her children to regularity in this respect, and when occasion arises administering a mild laxative, she will have little need for the doctor's services.

Mrs. Leo Weigand, 3251 Central Ave., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa., whose two boys, Frank and Joseph, are shown in the illustration, writes that she has found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a most effective laxative, not only for the children but also for herself and that she will always keep it in the house to use when needed. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts easily and naturally, without griping or other pain or discomfort. It is pleasant to the taste so that children like it, and is equally effective on the strongest constitution.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents, and should have a place in every home. It will save many times its cost in lessened doctor bills and maintain the health of the entire family. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

The Ambitious Brass Pounder.

While carrying messages for a telegraph company, I on one occasion took the part of a messenger in a local talent film play. All my friends saw the play and told me I would make a good actor. I took a position some time after that as operator for a rival company, and the manager, happening to speak of the play, I told him of my ambition to become a movie actor. He laughed at me.

One night I had just sent a bunch of messages when the sounder began clicking and I answered the call. The telegram did not interest me till I heard my own name spelled out, then I woke up. The message was from a large film corporation, offering me a position at a high salary, and referred to my work in the local picture.

I could hardly wait to tell some of my friends who happened to be near. They all congratulated me on my good fortune. I walked around on air for a while and could hardly sleep that night. When I went to bed I could almost hear the car wheels clicking as they carried me to take up my position. Imagine my embarrassment next morning to see on the front page the headlines, "Don't Wake Him Up. Operator Almost Becomes Movie Star."

The manager had cut in on the wire from the basement below the office and sent me the fake.

Guessed Wrong on Speed.

I was attending a dinner that a wealthy father gave for his 18 year old daughter. There were six couples in the party, all strangers to me but the young gentleman with whom I went. The waiter came around and asked the different ones what they would have to drink, starting with the daughter, who sat at the head of the table.

In a subdued, aristocratic tone of voice I heard the girl say what sounded to me like "short beer." I felt quite uneasy because I didn't know what the "speed" of the party was, but rather than be a dead one, although I never drank a glass of beer in my life, I said when asked, "Beer, please."

Well, when the drinks were served there were eleven root beers and grape juices and only one beer—mine.

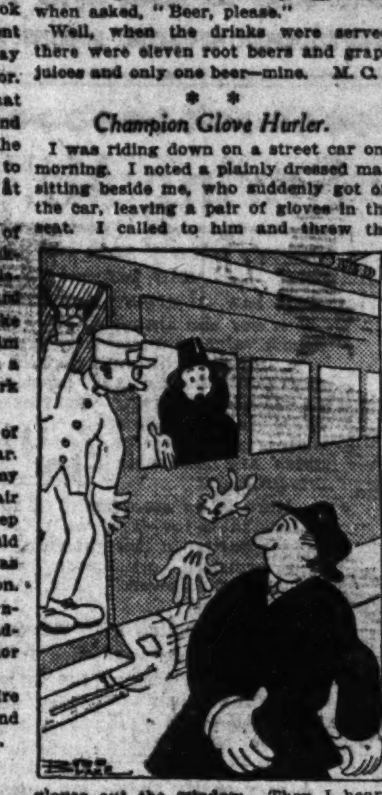
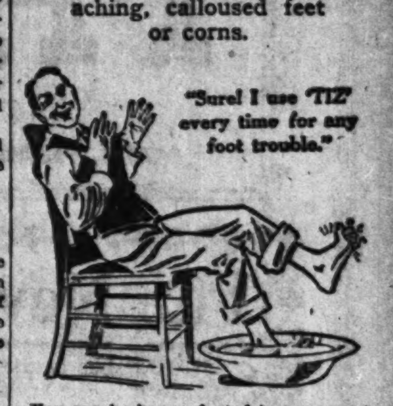
Champion Glove Hurler.

I was riding down on a street car one morning. I noted a plainly dressed man sitting beside me, who suddenly got off the car, leaving a pair of gloves in the seat. I called to him and threw the gloves out the window. Then I heard the conductor cussing. He cussed—well, because they were his gloves. Still muttering, he stopped the car, and I went back and picked the gloves up and rode on that same car down to work. But I didn't look at the conductor often.

Miss R. M.





"Sure! I use 'TIZ' every time for any foot trouble."

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

"Tiz" for sore, tired, puffed-up, aching, calloused feet or corns.

You can be happy-footed in a moment. Use "Tiz" and never suffer with tender, raw, burning, blistered, swollen, tired, aching feet. "Tiz" and only "Tiz" takes the pain and soreness out of corns, callouses and bunions.

As soon as you put your feet in a "Tiz" bath, you just feel the happiness soaking in. How good your poor, old feet feel. They want to dance for joy. "Tiz" is grand. "Tiz" instantly draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause sore, inflamed, aching, sweaty feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug store or department store. Get instant foot relief. Laugh at foot sufferers who complain. Because your feet are never, never, going to bother or make you limp any more.—Adv.

"Rengo Belt" Corsets in All the Newest Models

WE are pleased to announce the season's opening display of the new models in the famous Rengo Belt corsets. If you will call tomorrow, we will be glad to show you these new styles—and there will be no obligation to buy.

We Furnish Expert Corset Advice. We Tell You What to Wear and How to Wear It.

Our force of expert corsetieres is at your command. Their advice is given willingly; their advice is free. They will gladly tell you of the proper models of the Rengo Belt corsets that are suitable to your figure. Come here tomorrow and consult them.

Third Floor.

MODEL 59—Rengo belt corset in a beautiful quality broche; boning is rustproof and guaranteed to give satisfactory wear; medium high bust, well boned, supporting and holding in the figure; the long skirt smooths the full thighs, making a trim figure; trimmed with lace and ribbon, at $5

MODEL 220—An excellent model for the figure needing support, extra long boning over abdomen, double boned throughout; this model is especially adapted to give the figure a more slender appearance; made of good fine coutil with elastic inserts over thighs and back; an exceptional value at $3

MODEL 316—This corset is made for a stout figure, medium high bust, back with fullness at top to care for extra flesh, double boned throughout, elastic inserts over thighs and back take excellent care of the lower part of the figure, giving a flat front, straight back, made of coutil, at $3

MODEL 218—An ideal corset for the short, stout figure, made of extra strong material and boned with double watch spring steel, guaranteed to be absolutely rustless. Examine this model. If you demand in service and strength more than ordinary corsets can give, you will find lasting satisfaction in this No. 218 at $2

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

An Average Woman.

Since a child I have wanted to be a home maker. When quite young I would make play houses, mud pies, and used to place a "stick" in front of the fireplace, in my play house, to represent the head of the family. My dolls were always neat and clean and all in order about my "make believe" home. I have always wanted to make some one happy—yea, even happier than myself.

Now, how do you suppose my childish ambition turned out? "'Tis the irony of fate," for I am an old maid, not comely, but at least interesting. I still foster my early ideas of home, but in reality am eking out an existence in the rear office of a stern professional man.

I do not expect to put aside my childish fancies until some "stick" of a man reads my inner thoughts. Am I other than the average woman? I say not.

She Was Doomed.

Even as a small kid I realized that I was doomed to wear my three elder sisters' cast-off duds, and then and there I decided, when I grew up, to be a corking dresser if nothing else. When I was 16 I ran away from home and joined a troupe as a chorus girl. I'm still in the chorus. To a certain extent my ambition has been fulfilled, for though there is not much of my costume, it is swell.

Her Dream Is Over.

When in my 'teens I was a constant reader of the romantic novel which dealt with the "tall, dark, and handsome" hero and the "supple, willowy grace" of the blonde heroine. From them I conceived the ambition of being a nurse. I could easily picture myself bending over the wounded soldier (of course, he was not only handsome but would afterward turn out to be a count or something), and could almost hear my words of tender comfort which would answer his proposal at the time of his convalescence.

Well, I tried it, as an apprentice in a small western hospital. My first case was a foreign laborer who had been stabbed in a drunken brawl. He was dirty, distressingly bloody, bewhiskered, and about 40 years of age. His only English was some particularly explosive profanity. And he certainly did not look like the handsome one who, about the tenth chapter, turned out to be a disguised duke. Three days' nursing was enough for me.

I am engaged to be married now—to a barber. And I do not read any more heroic literature.

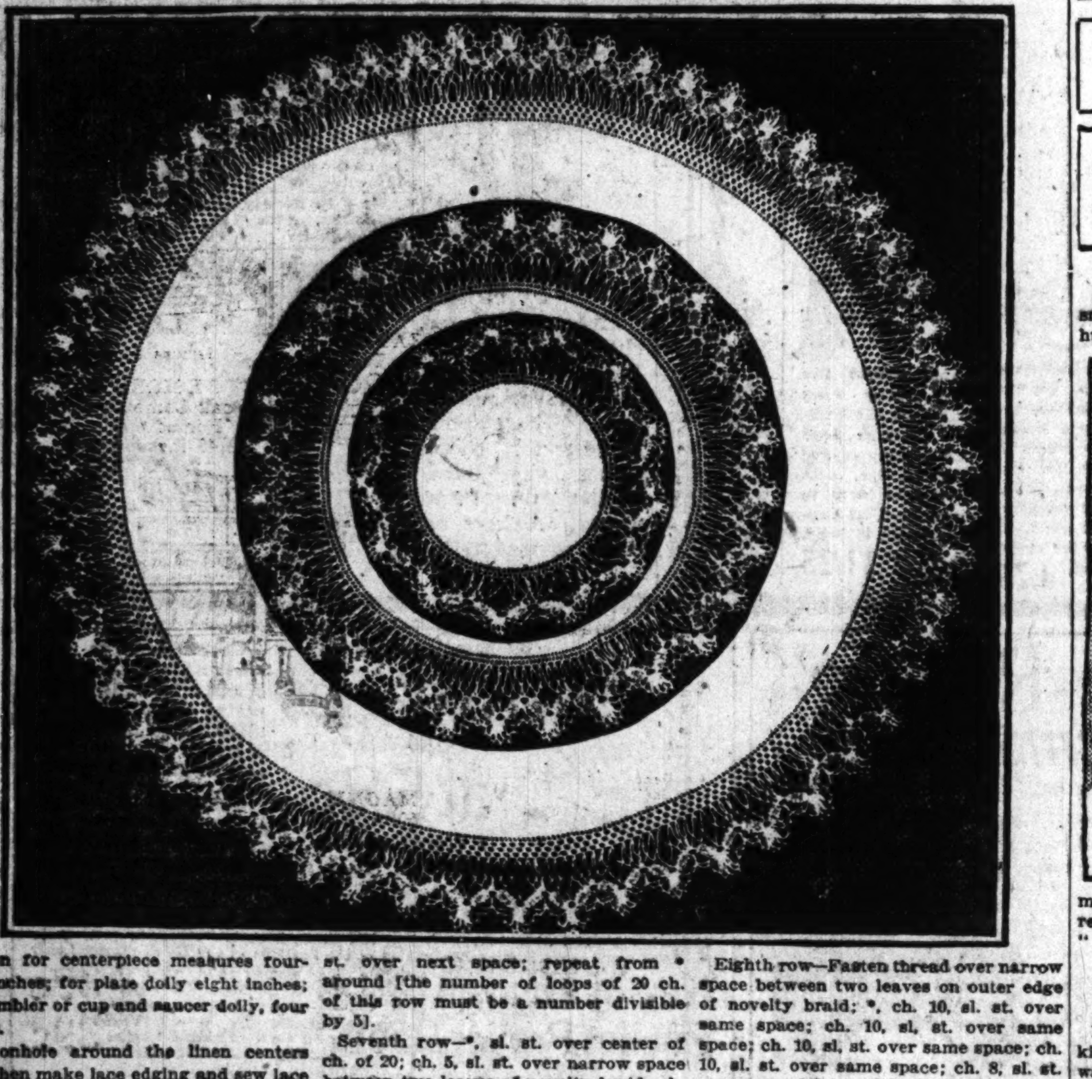
Crochet Design for Luncheon Set.



Linen for centerpiece measures fourteen inches; for plate dolly eight inches; for tumbler or cup and saucer dolly, four inches.

Buttonhole around the linen centers first, then make lace edging and sew lace on edge of centers.

Crochet a chain long enough to go around edge of centerpiece loosely.

First row—Make d. c. in every st. of ch. with ch. 2 between all around.

Second row—D. c. over every space with ch. 2 between all around.

Third, fourth, and fifth rows—2 d. c. over every other space with ch. 2 between.

Sixth row—*, ch. 20, skip 1 space, sl. st. over next space; repeat from * around [the number of loops of 20 ch. of this row must be a number divisible by 5].

Seventh row—*, sl. st. over center of ch. of 20; ch. 5, sl. st. over narrow space between two leaves of novelty braid; ch. 5, sl. st. over next ch. 20; ch. 5, sl. st. over same narrow space between two leaves of novelty braid; ch. 5, sl. st. over next ch. ch. 20; ch. 5, sl. st. over bottom loop of first novelty braid leaf; ch. 5, sl. st. over next loop of ch. 20; ch. 10 sl. st. over top loops of first and second leaves at once; ch. 10, sl. st. over next ch. 20; ch. 5, sl. st. over bottom loop of second leaf; ch. 5; repeat from * around; join and break off thread. Join braid together neatly.

Eighth row—Fasten thread over narrow space between two leaves on outer edge of novelty braid; *, ch. 10, sl. st. over same space; ch. 10, sl. st. over same space; ch. 10, sl. st. over same space; ch. 10, sl. st. over same space; ch. 8, sl. st. over second loop of leaf; ch. 10, sl. st. over bottom loops of 2 leaves; ch. 10, sl. st. over next to the top loop of second leaf; ch. 8, sl. st. over next narrow space between 2 leaves; repeat from * around.

Ninth row—Sl. st. over center of first loop of ch. 10; *, ch. 6, make a picot; ch. 3, sl. st. over next loop; repeat from * around and join.

For the edging of the two smaller dollies, crochet the same as for the centerpiece, with the exception of leaving out rows third, fourth and fifth.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERN.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 sent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Not Worth While.

My husband had promised to quit smoking—that is before he became my husband. A few months after we were married he "broke over" and when I remonstrated I was thus informed: "Don't marry a man to reform him."

Same Thoughtful Old Dear.

Before we were married he was always kind to and thoughtful of me in every way. He was always on time. Although he had to drive thirty-two miles in the car, he never kept me waiting.

I had heard so much of the dark side of married life that I expected all these little attentions would cease after we were married. We have been married now almost two years and have a sweet little 8 months old baby, my husband is the same old thoughtful dear he used to be, and I love him more and more every day.

I am certainly a happy married woman.

FOOD FATS.

WE read the other day that the Germans were hungry, or had a constant hungry feeling, because they were not getting enough fat food. This is reasonable, since a sufficient supply of fat gives great bodily comfort and security. It has two and a fourth times the power to do this that starchy foods have, and the latter have a good deal more power than lean meat.

Enormous quantities of fat were consumed in Prussia when the people were adequately fed. The Prussians live nearer the north pole than we do and quite away from the genial influences of the gulf stream which embraces the British isles. It is dark and cold, for instance, in Berlin in winter time, and solid common sense led these people to take better care of the human fires that the body might be kept at a reasonable temperature.

Fat is the most splendid fuel in the world for the human stove, that is, it has a higher caloric value, which is saying the same thing in what may be a more explicit way, since we can count calories. If a man had no other needs than those of energy and heat, and could get half a pound of fat a day, he would remain far from the starvation point.

Perhaps people would have a better understanding, that is, there would have been less misunderstanding, if the caloric value of foods low in calories had never been given. They are quite as essential to bodily well being as foods of high caloric value, but for entirely different reasons. They contribute almost nothing to muscular energy, yet in their own way are energizers.

On all sides men and women are coming to a realization that people are less well fed than they ought to be when for any reason they eat but scantily of fats. Except for butter and cream, fats are too scantily used in our American dietaries. Possibly the coming steam heat had something to do with this. Pork fat has its disadvantages, but children brought up in the old time stove heated houses on a diet of pork fat and molasses with their bread, each of these being great fuel foods, are living today at 90 years of age and above to tell us about it. Some of them had enough endurance to last years after being crippled in the civil war.

To go back to the Prussians a minute; they have eaten enormous quantities of goose fat, emulsified and seasoned, on their bread. They welcomed and made large use of the vegetable fats coming to them from tropical countries in recent times. In one of the cooking school text books used in one of the two big schools in Berlin, bought in that city in 1913, there is a recipe for making savory lard which I have always intended to try.

In our own country thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, use a great deal of fat for cooking purposes, deep fat frying, but eat little. To use two or three pounds of fat, which would yield the body 4,000 calories of energy for each pound eaten for cooking some potatoes, which yield only one-tenth as much, is like throwing away our dollar for the sake of the dimes, or like throwing away the wool of protection and going out in the cold clad in fine muslin. It is a cold world for those who have to earn their living on a low energy supply. They are likely to lose out, besides having hateful dispositions, making many others uncomfortable, or be so bitterly pessimistic as to be supremely uncomfortable themselves.

People of means are likely to be better fed than people who live on ordinary cooking, because more fat is incorporated in their foods. Their meats are larded, their sauces and vegetables have a good deal of the best butter in them, as do the fine cooked creams; they use whipped cream in many connections and also fat cheese. More table fats are used, especially salad oil, and always butter of the best and most palatable.

Poor cooking and poor general manipulation of fats and careless handling, say of butter, costing us millions of dollars every year, universally engenders a distaste for fats. Badly cooked, they are rank. Worse than this, they are indigestible.

In the new government pamphlet of twenty-eight pages on "Fats and Their Economical Use in the Home," there is a most interesting section on the digestibility of fats. It says: "The digestibility of a number of the individual fats has been determined, and the information at present available indicates that fats in general are thoroughly digested; more so, indeed, than the animal and vegetable proteins and the starch occurring in the ordinary mixed diet."

Notice and emphasize this fact. It means that the fats may cause us less digestive wear and tear, and be utilized more completely than any the foods we eat, and as to actual bulk, think how much less we can get on with! But listen farther to what this bulletin affirms: "The digestive disturbances often attributed to eating fat are probably due not so much to the inability of the body to digest the fat itself as to other factors, chief among which are bad cooking, overeating of foods containing fats, and rancidity." The overeating of foods containing fats requires special explanation which is given.

There are over three valuable pages in this bulletin devoted to "Economy in the Use of Fats" and two on the "Utilization of Waste Fats." Others on "Rendering and Clarifying Fats" and "Savory Fats," with recipes, are given attention. There are descriptions of the different fats, etc.

Taylor, one of our leading authorities on digestion, says that "fat is especially important in the diet of children, though it never need exceed one-fourth or one-third of the total caloric input."

Those who go without meat during Lent will come through in far better health, perhaps increased health, if they will see that their diet is rich in fats, perhaps just the cream and butter. Let them think about this matter and be prepared for the cold and blustering winds of March.

These recipes for savory fats have the following introduction in the government bulletin: "Savory fats—that is, fats to which have been added some strong seasoning material, such as sage, marjoram, summer savory, or thyme—offer a satisfactory method of utilizing fats having pronounced odors or flavors, like those of beef or mutton. Savory fats are useful for frying, warming up vegetables, etc., since they impart a distinct flavor to foods."

Savory Fat I.

To one pound of unrendered fat, chopped fine, add one slice of onion about one-half inch thick and two inches in diameter, one teaspoon of broken bay leaves, one teaspoon of salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain.

Savory Fat II.

To one pound of unrendered fat, chopped fine, add two teaspoons of thyme, one slice of onion about one-half inch thick and two inches in diameter, one teaspoon of salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain.

Savory Fat III.

To one pound of unrendered fat, chopped fine, add one teaspoon of thyme, one teaspoon of marjoram, one-half teaspoon of rubbed sage, one teaspoon of salt, and about one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Render in a double boiler and strain through a fine cloth.

If it is desired to prepare a savory fat from a rendered fat, the above recipes may be modified by melting the fat, adding the seasoning in the same proportion as above, heating the mixture gently for an hour or more, and straining. The following recipe has also been recommended for preparing a savory fat from a rendered fat:

To one pound of rendered fat, melted add one sour apple, one onion, and one teaspoon of ground thyme or other sweet herbs, tied in a small cloth. Cook together in the oven or on the back of the stove until the onion and apple are well browned. Strain the fat through a fine cloth.

German Savory Fat.

In the sixth lesson of an "Outline of Course of Instruction in Plain Home Cooking," by Hedwig Heyl, there is a description of fats and how to render them and make them savory. It has the following statements: "Leaf lard tastes best; it is, therefore, often eaten on bread. When it is rendered an apple, onion, marjoram, or mugwort is put in for seasoning. American lard is pressed but not completely cooked fat; therefore it must be cooked with an onion, apple, or bread crust, so that any liquid contained in it may evaporate. The original low cost is thereby increased."

Giving Up a Dance.

In the olden days, when cards were filled out at every well regulated dance, I used to go frequently to the military hops at one of the army posts. There lines were drawn on matters of etiquette even more strictly than in civil life, and, one evening, just before the dancing began, a perturbed young lieutenant joined the group of girls and men in which I was standing. It seemed that the daughter of his "K. O." had arrived late and unexpectedly, and he had no dance free for his social and military duty.

One of the girls in the group was a great friend of the lieutenant. He had paid her quite a bit of attention, and rumor was beginning to link their names. After explaining his embarrassing situation, he turned to this girl and asked hesitatingly, if she would be willing to "turn loose" one of the several dances which he had taken with her—in order to save his honor as an officers and a gentleman.

The girl tossed her pretty head and laughed. "And sit against the wall myself, perhaps Never!"

There was a silence. Then I held out my card, upon which the young man's name was written twice. "You may have one of these," I said.

From that evening he began to pay me devoted attention, and before many months had passed we were engaged to be married.

Locked Up the Coveted One.

I won him by locking him in the dressing room at a church social—at least he has always claimed that as the reason. He was a comely boy who had only attended our church a short time. Of course we girls jokingly all "set our caps" for him.

I had never even been introduced to him, but one evening at a social, on entering he walked into the cloak room, which I knew was vacant at the time. One of the girls standing near made the remark that he belonged to her. "No, siree, he's mine," I said, and in a spirit of fun rushed over and slammed the door.

The lock caught in some manner and had to be broken before our coveted one could get out. I guess it must have been easy to pick out the culprit, for as he stepped out he stood for several seconds with his eyes fastened on mine with a kindly questioning gaze until I could stand it no longer and turned and fled.

Of course we met again that evening, and—well, we just entertained that same crowd of girls at a pretty little luncheon last evening in our own home.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOU
HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp!
Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lo of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

Rheumatism is "pain only." Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right into your sore, stiff, aching joints and muscles, and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism and backache liniment which never disappoints.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" has cured millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains.—Advertisement.

Women! Stop Corn Pain!
Few Drops and Corns Lift Out

Don't hurt a bit! Cincinnati man discovers drug that works miracles—No humbug!

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't limp or twist your face, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle. Freezone is magic!

Norris listened wide eyed to a breakfast conversation of his elders about Vesuvius. He spent the afternoon with a new neighbor. Charles, an only child, was delighted at having this playmate in his own home and became fairly wild with joy. The boys played, raced, and shouted until the little visitor was quite worn out. As he slowly undressed that night he remarked, seriously: "Mother, I like Charles; but he is just like a volcano in active eruption." N. L.

The family was discussing the high cost of living, and complained about their chickens being tardy in beginning to lay, when Dorothy, who had been quietly listening while munching her breakfast, said: "Mother, I know how to get the hens to begin laying. Just put up a sign on the chicken house 'Do your Easter laying early.'" C. J. M.

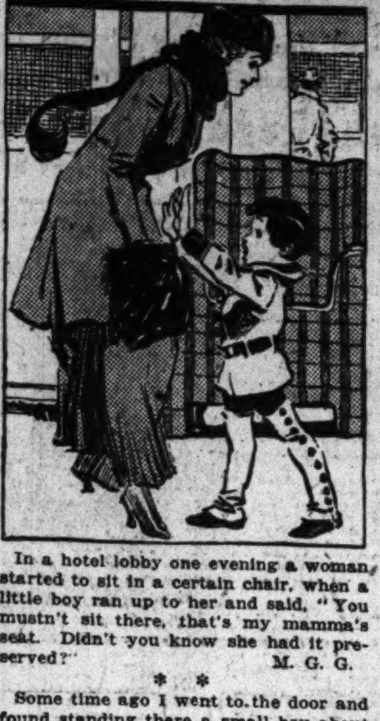
Raymond had been lamenting the fact that he had no pets except a dog and cat. "I want something different," he said. "Can't I have a pig?" His father told him it would cost too much to keep a pig. "Well," he argued, "I could have it for company while it was little, and we could kill it to eat when it grew up." C. W.



In a hotel lobby one evening a woman started to sit in a certain chair, when a little boy ran up to her and said, "You mustn't sit there, that's my mamma's seat. Didn't you know she had it preserved?" M. G. G.

Some time ago I went to the door and found standing there a small boy about 9 years old. "Lady," he said, politely, "will you buy a ticket to our Sunday school benefit? We're going to have a feller do some underhanded tricks over to our church for the benefit of the Sunday school." A. C. T.

George was an only child whose neighbor's two boys had for months bullied and thrashed him to the great humiliation and outrage to his dignity and pride. Today he was particularly miserable as his mother was sick and he had not been allowed to visit her. Finally his father came from the sick room smiling and gathering his small son into his arms told him he had a little brother and asked if he wasn't glad. His reply uttered with profound emphasis on the first word was as surprising as earnest. "Now we can lick Dick and Rob." G. R. S.

Paul attended a matinée a short time ago, accompanied by his parents, this being his first experience at a theater. When the performance was about two-thirds over, he whispered, with much appreciation, to his father: "How much did we have to pay for the seats?" and when I replied $1.50 each, he said, with much earnestness, "I think we ought to go out and pay the man some more money, it is so good." D. F.

All of a sudden Harold decided his playmate was too young for him to play with. His mother said, "Why, he is only two months younger than you, Harold," to which the little man replied: "Well, he isn't old for his age, 'cause he sleeps in a bed wid a fence around it." A. C.

Materials for Fancy Sewing.

"We are living far off from the activities of life and so we—my two girls and I—have few ways to make pin money, or bread and butter money either, and my good man has been unable to do a full amount of work since a bad two years of invalidism. So I write to ask the Cornerites if any of them can send us some pieces for quilts or for any kind of fancy work. And we would so much like some reading matter if the Corner has any to spare. In return my girls and I would delight in finding in our woods anything that you might like. MOTHER ALICE."

Many of us have been in a position where it was hard to lay hands upon the cash for just such articles as these three crave. Cannot some one send from her abundance a few pieces or odd materials for fancy work as well as some reading matter? I do not know what the woods hold that our Cornerites might like, but I can imagine ground greens and other woodsy things which would delight some of our workers. Write to me for the address of "Mother Alice."

Coffee Stains on Plush.

"I would like to have you tell me how to get coffee stains out of a plush couch. "F. L."

This is difficult to do well. My advice would be to sponge the stains off with hot water, dipping a soft cloth or small sponge into this frequently. Let the material dry afterward and try to bring up the nap of the plush with a brush. The trouble is that the nap is likely to become matted while wet, and it is doubtful if the job will be entirely satisfactory. Can some of the Cornerites make a better suggestion?

Little Home Is Bare.

"Here comes a lonely girl of 26 who lives with her mother of 60 and her grandmother, 85 years old. They are poor widows and I am their only dependence. We live in a small town where we don't see a great deal, and we don't have the advantages of either country or town. I love to read letters from the dear Cornerites and I am going to ask some of them to help me. Santa Claus did not visit us this winter, and we would be overjoyed to have anything which would cheer the lonely hearts of the three of us. We like to read and to make quilts and do all sorts of fancy work, but our materials are scarce and the little home is bare of anything which would make for comfort and beauty. Anything you could send would help to pass many long and lonely hours. "V. L. P."

This appeal speaks for itself. I shall be happy to put the writer in touch with any one who will write for her address.

Little Girl Makes Request.

"I am so interested in the Corner and wonder if I might ask a favor, too. I wonder if some little girl has outgrown a tricycle or has a toy piano she doesn't care for any more. I should be so grateful to get it and would pay all the charges on it by express. I should be so glad to do something in return for it if I could. H. F. G."

The writer of this does not state her age, but it is easy to guess that she is a little girl. I do not know if she will have her wish granted, but I print her appeal on the chance and will be happy to give her address to any one who will write for it.

A Vicious Sort of Bee.

"I wish one of the Cornerites would tell me how to kill bees that are in a keg. They are a vicious sort of bee, so we do not care to keep them, but would like to have the honey, of which the keg is full. I suppose there is some way of smoking out the bees, but we don't know what to use or how to go at it without risk of spoiling the honey. And could some one please tell me where I could get a human skull or a papier maché model of one, and how much it would cost? We have some ancient ruins on our place, hundreds or perhaps thousands of years old, and I have dug up from them some skulls with protruding jaws. I would like one of the present age for comparison. We have hundreds of visitors out to see my collection of skulls and curios, dating back to the stone age, and to visit the ruins. Perhaps I will be able to do something for a Cornerite in return for the above information. H. E. H."

I have been told you can drive bees out of a hive by burning sulphur under the opening leading into it, but I should fear this would injure the honey. How would chloroform answer to stupefy them so that the honey could be removed? Will some one of our correspondents wise in bee lore help this inquirer, and who can give information about the model of a skull? I should think the pictures of skulls in a book of anatomy might be of help in studying the prehistoric relics to which the Cornerite refers, and there may be establishments where models such as she wishes can be obtained. I shall put her address on file and I shall hope to have requests for it.

Bulbs to Exchange.

"I would like to exchange Virginia creeper, trumpet vine, and honeysuckle roots for bulbs. MRS. H. W. P."

We have enough flower lovers who are already planning for their gardens to make it likely that some one will be happy to make this exchange. I will be glad to send this address to any one desiring it on receipt of request.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities. You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Enjoy Life! Stop Headaches, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Constipation.

They're a Treat! Cascarets Is Best Laxative for Men, Women, Children—20 Million Boxes Sold Last Year.

Straighten up! Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, breath offensive and stomach sour. Don't stay bilious, sick headachy, constipated and full of cold. Why don't you get a box of Cascarets from the drug store and eat one or two tonight and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced? You will wake up feeling fit and fine. Cascarets never gripe or sicken like salts, pills and calomel. They act so gently that you hardly realize you have taken a cathartic. Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious or feverish children a whole Cascaret any time—they act thoroughly and are harmless.—Advertisement.

ARE YOU THINKING OF BUYING A CAR?
YOU'RE THINKING OF GETTING A KOOKOO CAR! NOW JUST LET ME TELL YOU SOMETHING. IT'S A PILE OF JUNK RIGHT, AND IT'LL COST A FORTUNE TO RUN. WHAT YOU WANT IS A FLIVMOBILE. NOW THERES A REAL BOAT!
WELL, I'LL LOOK IT UP, EDDIE.
YES I THINK IT'LL BE A FLIVMOBILE, JOE.
LISTEN HERE, HORACE. MY BROTHER-IN-LAW HAD ONE AND IT FELL TO PIECES LIKE THE ONE HOSS SHAY IN SIX WEEKS. IT'S NOTHING IN THE WORLD BUT A TIN CAN!
LET ME GIVE IT TO YOU STRAIGHT. LARRY WOODWORTH'S TAILOR HAS A TINKER-CAR THAT HE'S RUN NINE YEARS AND IT HASN'T COST HIM A CENT EXCEPT FOR GAS AND OIL. THERE'S THE BUY, HORACE, A TINKER CAR
A TINKER-CAR! THAT'S RICH! YOU KNOW WHAT I SAW? FOUR BEING TOWED IN SATURDAY, AN' THE ENGINE HAD DROPPED OUT OF TWO OF 'EM. GRAN STRATTON TRACKED ANOTHER SEVEN MILES BY THE NUTS AND BOLTS THAT FELL OUT. WHY DON'T YOU GET A REGULAR CAR - THE BLINK SIX?
THANKS, RAY. I'LL LOOK INTO IT.
TINKER CAR
YES, I'VE ABOUT DECIDED ON A BLINK SIX ROADSTER
OF COURSE I WOULDN'T KNOCK A CAR YOU'D PICKED OUT, HORACE, BUT ON THE SQUARE IT'S AN AWFUL FROST. WHY DON'T YOU BUY A POPPYCOCK TWELVE? THAT'LL WALK AWAY FROM ANYTHING ON FOUR WHEELS AND IT'LL LAST A LIFETIME
SAY! IF YOU WANT TO HEAR ALL YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT A POPPYCOCK CAR YOU TALK TO MY FRIEND ANDY. IT'S A TIRE EATER FOR FAIR AND HE COULDN'T GET MORE THAN 600 YARDS ON A GALLON OF GAS
IF I WAS BUYING A CAR I'D INVESTIGATE THE TUMBLEBUG. IT WENT UP THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT ON HIGH WITH THE EMERGENCY ON, AND THE MAKERS ADMIT IT'S THE BEST CAR ON THE ROW
IT'S A GOOD HUNCH, BERT
OFFA THAT STUFF! DON'T MAKE ME LAUGH! FELLERS, COME HERE AND SEE WHAT'S GOING TO BUY A TUMBLEBUG 50-50. WHY BUTTS, THE UNDERTAKER, HAD A HEARSE ON ONE BUT HE HAD TO GIVE IT UP BECAUSE IT COULDN'T KEEP UP WITH THE PARSONS BUGGY!

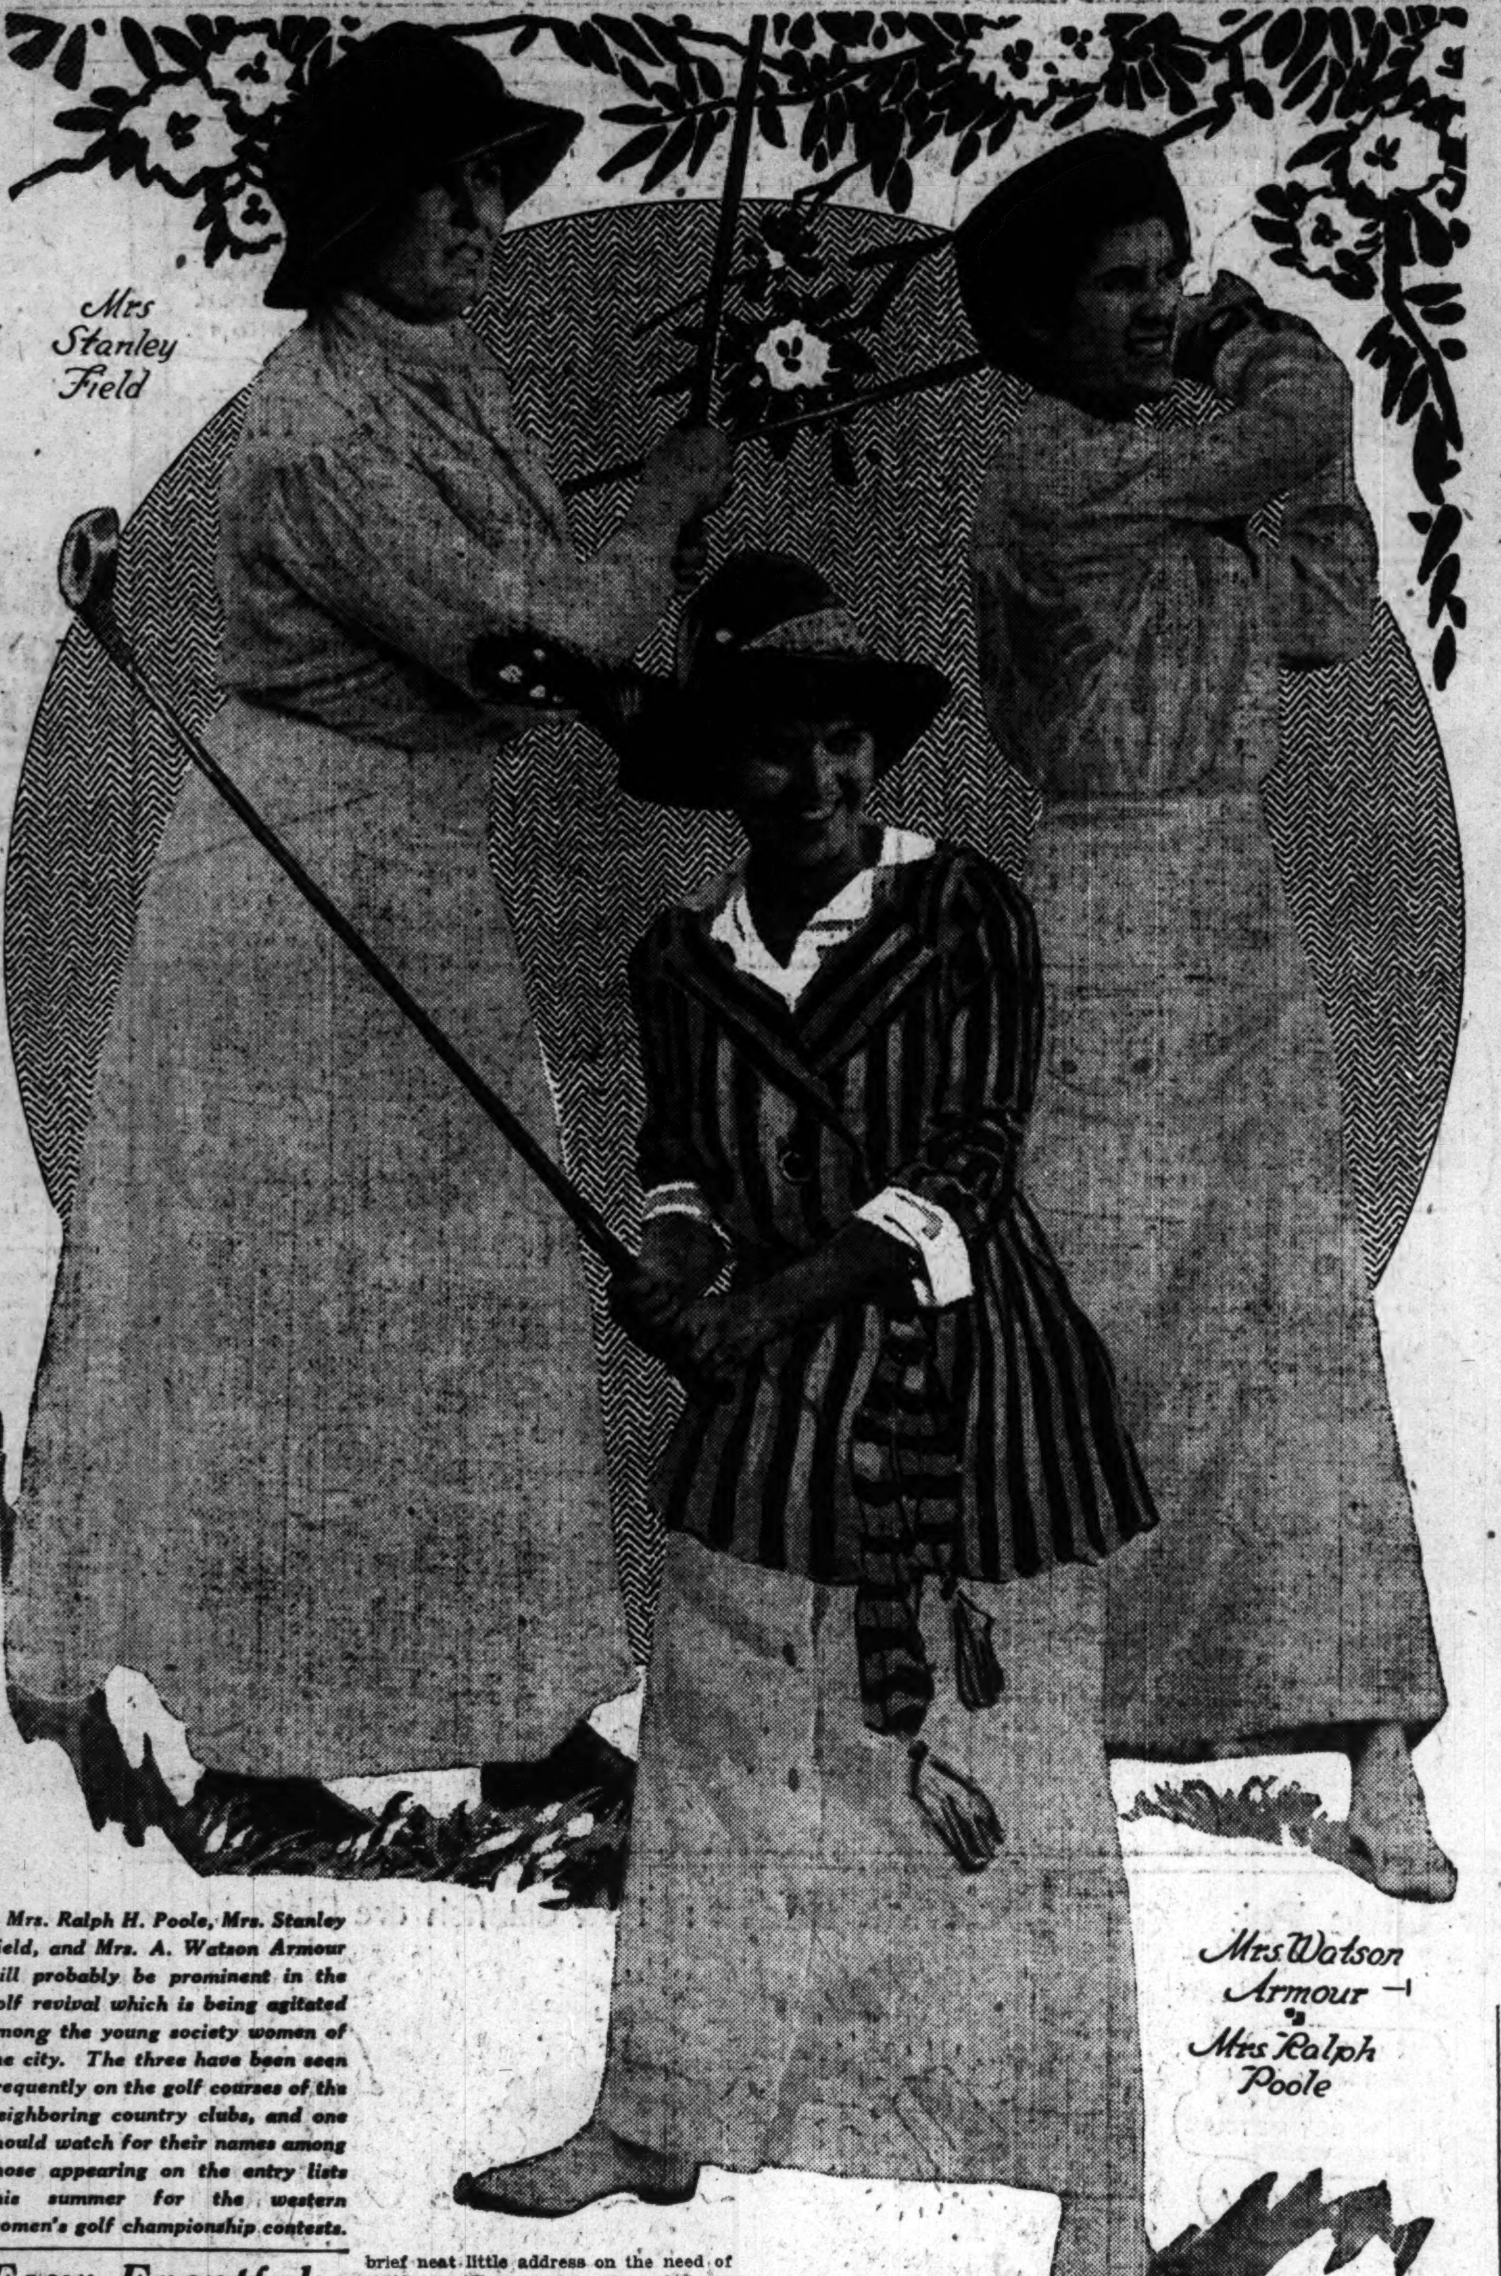
Three Young Women Who Are Starting A Golf Revival.

News of Chicago Society



Mrs. Ralph H. Poole, Mrs. Stanley Field, and Mrs. A. Watson Armour will probably be prominent in the golf revival which is being agitated among the young society women of the city. The three have been seen frequently on the golf courses of the neighboring country clubs, and one should watch for their names among those appearing on the entry lists this summer for the western women's golf championship contests.

Four Eventful Days Spent at Nation's Capital

By Mme. X.

FOUR days in Washington, where the buds are just bulging on the bare trees; four days in which suffrage conferences and smart dinners, luncheons, and teas were in close juxtaposition, though no more overlapping or mixing than the separate pieces in a mosaic; four days which culminated with a seat directly opposite the president as he read his latest address on the submarine issue to congress, were like four years of life on the good old "nort site" and it was with a feeling of pain and sorrow that we noticed on returning last Tuesday from the center of the universe that the boulevard link was not yet completed, that Twelfth street was not yet widened, that Grant park was still a wilderness, that the double decker busses were not yet running, and that "Big Bill" was still at the helm.

Last week quite a bouquet of Chicago suffragettes, including Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Augustus Peabody, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Loewenthal, went to the conference at Washington of the leaders of the National Woman's Suffrage association to "save the nation" by dedicating the association to the service of the country in hte event of war.

The council meetings were an eye opener to the untutored layman, they were so dignified, so evidently inspired with an enlightened patriotism, and, withal, so feminine. The granddaughter of Henry Clay, who was there, did so like to exercise the family talent for oratory. In fact, the south was in the saddle a good deal during the conference, clever, agile minds, though Miss Lucy Stone Blackwell's New England wit was one of the real joys of the occasion. Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, Miss Hannah Patterson of New Jersey, and Mrs. Upton of Ohio were all prominent in the two days' debate, while that grand old war horse, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, made one of the finest addresses on women and war at the massmeeting at Poli's theater last Sunday afternoon ever heard by any one in that big audience.

Secretary Talks of Thrift.

Secretary of War Baker was the chief speaker of the occasion and made a brief neat little address on the need of thrift, avoiding any mention whatever of war or suffrage—the Scylla and Charybdas of his trip that afternoon.

Mrs. Baker and Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo sat in the front row of the platform, giving an administration hue to the occasion. Mrs. "Bordie" Harriman and a party of friends occupied one box, the Misses Delano and their cousin, a daughter of the late Price Collier, another box, and Mrs. Charles R. Crane, Mrs. Richard Crane, and Mrs. Robert Leatherbee a third box.

The meeting over we wandered out into the soft sunset of a Washington spring afternoon and without intention found ourselves in front of the White House, where a guard of twenty-nine Congressional union suffragettes stood sentinels on either side the gateway holding long, forked purple and yellow banners fluttering from ten foot poles.

Their bitterest critics and stoutest adversaries are probably the members of the National Woman's Suffrage association, just as there's no row so fierce as a family quarrel. There's no greater insult than to confound a membership in the national with a membership in the union, and itis the most frequently committed crime to so mix suffragists, and yet even an anti cannot fail to be a little moved by the evident martyrdom of that silent, steadfast guard. The combination of folly and heroism has touched the human heart since long before the days of that most heroic of fools, Don Quixote.

The bare bones of the huge stands being erected all the way from the White House to the capital for tomorrow's inauguration towered above the twenty-nine sentinels and above the moving throngs who ambled with Sabbatical leisureliness up and down Pennsylvania avenue.

The President Before Congress.

Of course the great event in that four days' stay in Washington was hearing the president address the nation and the world through congress last Monday morning in the house of representatives. The news that he was to speak was flashed through Washington only a short time before the hour set, 1 o'clock. There was a wild scramble for seats in the galleries. Those who had not been able to secure them through political, diplomatic, or journalistic sources stood in throngs in the circular marble hall through which all had to pass to enter the house galleries, importuning for tickets members of congress and other officials who happened to pass that way. Occasionally some lucky mortal was called out of the throng by some friend on the inside track who had secured for him or her a ticket of admission.

The galleries were full and almost every congressman had taken his place when the senate in a body filed in in a not very formal fashion, seating themselves in the front two rows of benches. Speaker Champ Clark pounded loudly with his gavel and shouted some unintelligible words, pounded some more and a clerk of the house read out hastily and also unintelligibly from a paper something to which nobody paid any attention, then the speaker announced, "The president!"

Every one stood up, and through a door at the right of the speaker's platform, preceded by two or three men in civilian dress, the president came quickly and silently forward. He mounted the steps to a stand in front of where Champ Clark stood, bowed to him and to Vice President Marshall, who sat beside Mr. Clark, then to the house where every one was standing and clapping. Then he took from his pocket his speech written on what looked like rather small blue pages of note paper. With absolutely no oratorical effort or flourishes he read his address clearly and slowly, occasionally looking up and around, but keeping in close connection with his text on the whole.

It was passionless and pedagogical, but impressive. More applause, though not wild, and, as quickly as he came he disappeared. The assemblage soon dispersed, all talking more or less soberly as they made their way out of the capitol, that splendid shrine of popular government.

All the time that I was in Washington I had the feeling that there was to be seen the spectacle of a great democracy moving slowly, reluctantly, without hatred, but with a developing intensity of purpose towards an armed conflict with a people of ideals diametrically opposed to ours. It was a rather tremendous experience, somewhat, as Kipling once expressed a sensation of his, like meeting an avalanche on the backstairs—only this avalanche was on those broad steps of the west façade of the capitol.

To change the key: Washington is unique. There's nothing like it anywhere else in the world. It's a chic, elegant southern city whose inhabitants come from all over the world with but one object in view and that is to talk, and there's only one topic, politics. There's comparatively no music, no art, no social science, no literature there. Every one lives for social purposes.

Men as well as women make a business of calls, though this has become such a purely perfunctory matter that frequently an afternoon is spent in merely leaving cards at door after door without even inquiring if madam is at home. "Days at home" are usually thronged with callers. Social and official etiquette demands that all the cabinet women shall call on each other every so often, ditto with wives of senators and wives of congressmen.

Etiquette in Washington is a fetich revered, worshiped, and feared by all. If you give a dinner—and every one is always giving dinners in Washington—and fail to seat people according to their official rank woe be to you—your crime is nothing short of capital.

The exact rank of the Supreme court of the United States—the highest judicial body in the world—is still unsettled after a century and more of debate. The justices of this court claim the right to follow immediately after the president and vice president and to take precedence of foreign ambassadors and of the president's cabinet officials, on the ground that their function is supreme, the last word. To avoid delicate issues they are never invited with any one whose precedence they challenge. The third assistant secretary of state is usually the oracle consulted on any question of proper seating.

Thus does the world's greatest democracy kow tow to forces and human tendencies apparently more powerful, more profound than even the leveling movement of our democratic times.

Mrs. Field Popular Hostess.

There is no more popular, more sought after, more admired hostess in Washington than Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago and Washington. In her sumptuous Venetian palace in Sixteenth street a stately mansion, filled to the eaves with the choicest art treasures of Europe and the orient, she has given this winter a series of entertainments unrivaled in even that city of magnificent entertaining.

Having a passion for music, she always makes this the feature of her social gatherings. On different occasions she has had Fritz Kreisler, the world's greatest violinist; Barrientos, the Metropolitan Opera company's celebrated coloratura soprano, and the French Musical company, with its quaint, old time instruments—spinet, harpsichord, etc., which has delighted Boston and New York this winter. Lastly, a fortnight ago she gave a Sunday dinner of sixty, followed by a musical, to which another sixty guests came, and when Mme. Galli-Curci of the Chicago Opera company sang. Every one was enthusiastic over our song bird, Mrs. Field declaring that never before had she heard such an exquisite voice.

Diplomats, men and women of note, fashionables of all lands, all the great current of cultivated humanity that drifts annually through Washington, can be found in Mrs. Field's hospitable drawing rooms, sitting on her Louis Quinze or Regence chairs, walking over her rare Ispahan carpets, or examining her choice Chinese jades, French pictures, gold snuff boxes, old Sevres and Saxony ware, or eating from her wonderful antique silver and gold plate. There are many great fortunes in this wide, prosperous land of ours, but few who know how to spend them with the taste, discrimination, and a certain splendor of vision and ideal that are manifested by this typical grande dame of Chicago birth.

No Reformers in Society.

There's one type of mortal you do not often find in a Washington drawing room and that is a reformer of any kind, especially of the suffragist type. Society at our national capital, the kind that spells itself with a large "S," is essentially conservative, reactionary, hidebound, and anti-everything new, so that for a heart and soul progressive and suffragist to go back and forth from suffrage councils to Sixteenth street drawing rooms was like needle-spraying the nape of the neck alternately with hot and cold water. It quickened the mental processes and kept one on the qui vive.

Being ever one who reckoned the potency of the still small voice as far above that of the shouting propagandist, the writer kept the even tenor of her way, spoke (on suffrage) when spoken to and smiled at the inevitable jibes and jeers of fashionable antis, to be eventually rewarded by the explosion of one smartly clad mondaine from Gotham who exclaimed: "Of course, now we'll all have to try to get suffrage to offset the votes of those dreadful western women who elected Wilson." That sort of talk doesn't scare a suffragist.

Memorial Lures Art Lovers.

One of the pilgrimages every true lover of art who visits Washington always makes is a visit to that most impressive and beautiful triumph of the sculptor's art, the uninscribed monumental work of St. Gaudens, erected by John Adams in Rock Creek cemetery in memory of his wife. Secluded in a little rim of encircling hemlocks and laurel, the brooding bronze figure sits facing a semi-circular stone bench. No Thibetan Buddha presents so utterly remote and detached an aspect as this strange, shrouded woman whose heavy eyelids not quite closed leave an open slit of unfathomable meaning. Sleep, unconsciousness, even death seem shallow and temporary explanations of this mysterious, haunting expression.

The sun shone low in the west through the triste hemlocks on this strange, unforgetable effigy and cast a dull, red blush over its rough metal surface; birds twittered in the laurel; otherwise no sound broke the utter silence of that shrine. Not a word of any kind is graven on any part of the monument—a muteness that clamors at your consciousness.

Not far away in the same quiet ground is the Leiter tomb, a fine piece of carving on a quite large sarcophagus with Leonardo da Vinci's last supper in rather high bas-relief. The sarcophagus is inclosed in a peaked glass case bound with metal rims, the whole presenting an effect unlike any I've ever seen.

Home of Former Chicagoans.

Washington is the refuge of so many Chicagoans who've wearied with combatting our more robust climate and ruder conditions of living that you can't "swing a cat" there without menacing a former fellow citizen.

There are the John Barton Paynes, who live not far from the White House. Mrs. Norman Williams and her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Merritt, live in a charming stone fronted house in a quiet street—name forgotten. Not far away the Arnold Klebses have a most attractive house in Rhode Island avenue. The Frank Noyeses, who spent many years here, have an interesting old mansion and garden in quite another part of town. Mrs. Bryan Lathrop and her sister, Miss Cornelia Aldis, are living in a recently completed residence—a lovely English basement house—near all their friends. Mrs. E. B. McCagg has a quaint old house on N street, where the McCagg pictures and furniture look at home and in place.

Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis are spending the winter at the Shoreham, where a week ago Mrs. Lewis gave a buffet luncheon to 170 women in honor of Mrs. McAdoo, who, with Mrs. Marshall, wife of the vice president, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Houston, and other cabinet women, received with her. She is getting into the midst of a lively campaign as official candidate to succeed Mrs. Story as head of the D. A. R., an enterprise in which we wish her all success.

Women Hear Lectures.

With all these different aspects of Washington—except at the Adams' tomb—talking is the chief occupation, end, and aim of being. Chicago, on the other hand, presents another appearance. Here the women are all banding together in groups to be talked to. There are, for instance, the set of Chicago lectures called "The Awakening World," a cheery title, which are being given Tuesdays at 4 o'clock in the assembly hall of the Fine Arts building. Next Tuesday's will be by Percy Holmes Boynton, associate professor of English at the University of Chicago.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and William Scott Bond are the moving spirits in getting up this course, the proceeds of which go to the University of Chicago settlement.

Then the woman's board of St. Luke's hospital has organized a course of four lectures by Prof. Richard G. Moulton. On Wednesday at Miss Ethel Wrenn's residence, 1500 Astor street, the talk will be on the central position of Shakespeare in the world literature.

Mrs. Anthony French Merrill on Tuesday mornings is discoursing on world news from a literary standpoint at different houses. Next Tuesday her subject will be "War Literature," at the home of Mrs. Archibald Church.

Besides these there are the lectures offered by the social service committee of the Children's Memorial hospital and innumerable Red Cross courses. O, it's a busy, eager for knowledge world in which we live!

WEDDINGS

The marriage of Mrs. Ethel Page Griswold, daughter of Mrs. William R. Page of Hubbard Woods, to Howard C. Phillips of Philadelphia took place last evening at the home of the bride's brother, Ralph H. Page of Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will make their home in Philadelphia. The bride's mother went to Detroit on Thursday to attend the wedding, which was a quiet one.

The wedding of Miss Grace M. Dusek to Arthur E. Doll will take place on Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dusek of 1450 Karlov avenue.

Mrs. Bessie King announces that the marriage of her daughter, Frances, to Eugene Kohn took place last Sunday at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harry J. Myerson of 6550 Glenwood avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wille of 917 Foster avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Louise, to Dr. Clarence Kenneth Jones. The ceremony took place Monday evening. Dr. and Mrs. Jones will be at home in Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Lila Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Leonard of 4801 Woodlawn avenue, has selected April 14 as the date of her marriage to Carlton Byron Swift of Boston.

The wedding of Miss Marie Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cooper, and G. M. Lawrence took place on Feb. 24 at the St. James Methodist Episcopal church.

Thursday of this week has been chosen as the wedding day of Miss Susan Malone, daughter of Mrs. Anna Lincoln Malone of 6537 Greenview avenue, and Robert Emil Ehrgott of Rogers Park.

The marriage of Miss Amanda Preuss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Preuss of 2520 North Kedzie boulevard, and Asa C. Wilson of Dallas, Tex., will take place on Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents.

April 28 has been chosen by Miss Marguerite E. Rogerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Rogerson of 6209 Blackstone avenue, as the date for her marriage to Scott T. Batter.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite Downing of Rogers Park and Harry Doude Emerson took place last evening in Indianapolis, Ind. Miss Downing is the daughter of Mrs. Lulu Jones Downing of Chicago.

The wedding of Miss Vera Maude Lamb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lamb of Winnipeg, Man., to Frederick Ralph Corbett, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Corbett of Oak Park, will take place on March 10 in Winnipeg.

Miss Lillian M. Doerr of 843 Lakeside place has chosen April 9 as the date for her marriage to Edward A. D. Black.

What Is Style In Corsets?

THOUSANDS of letters are received by us from women in all parts of the world, asking us regarding "the new style in corsets."

Until we discovered the 9 Ideal Figure Types, we were sometimes puzzled in answering this question, but now the answer is simple. To each inquirer we send our style book, issued twice a year, showing the 9 Ideal Figure Types and corsets designed for them, which form the foundation of the silhouette for the season.

Almost every woman knows that each year brings some change in her figure line and it is only by studying her own figure type and adapting a new corset to her figure that she will always be in perfect corset style. So, if you would always be in style, remember to learn first to what Ideal Figure Type you belong, then select one of the many Gossards designed for your ideal figure, at the price you wish to pay.

Ideal Tall Heavy Figures

will be delighted when they see how skillfully special Gossards for this figure type equally distribute the flesh, supporting the bust and full abdomen, reducing the hip line, and gently molding the whole figure to slighter lines, giving the appearance of greatly reduced weight.

There is a Gossard for every figure type. Whether you are tall or short, heavy or slender, there are many models specially designed for your figure at $2.00, $3.50, $5.00, $6.50, $8.50, $10.00 and up to $25.00.

You can obtain a Gossard style book and be fitted to your Gossard Corset at your favorite store or shop by a trained corsetiere.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Art and Travel Ends Its Tenth Successful Year

By Hazel Whitaker.

WITH a business meeting on Tuesday, at which the officers for the coming year will be nominated, and programs on the 13th and the 27th, the tenth successful season of the Tuesday Art and Travel club will draw to a close. The last of a series of ten morning lectures on literature, art, and the drama will be given on March 13 by Rupert Brooke on "The Life and Works of Bernard Shaw." Dr. Preston Bradley has been the other lecturer in the course, which was inaugurated this year by the president, Mrs. George Lomax. In the afternoon Dr. Rufus White will give a stereopticon lecture on "Buenos Aires."

On March 27 a final musical will be given at which the following will appear: Miss Bessie Christian, soprano; Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mrs. Helma [illegible] Torgenson, harpist, and Van Grove, accompanist. The meeting will be held in the Louis XVI. room of the Hotel Sherman.

The club, which was organized ten years ago by Mrs. John B. Allan, now has a restricted membership of 500. Each club year has been marked by a distinctly unique undertaking which during the first four years took the form of a yearly scholarship for some art student studying abroad, whose expenses were paid by the club.

During the fifth year a Stacey picture entitled "Moonlight" was bought for $700 and placed in the Sabin school. Two rare old Japanese prints were bought the next year for $600, and these now hang in the Field museum. During the seventh year of the club a bylaw was passed which states that the club shall give five free scholarships yearly to Art institute students who will have been recommended by the school as deserving. This includes their tuition and all materials needed in the course. Just recently a student from India was one of those fortunate enough to secure this assistance. Besides doing this for the last three years the club has regularly given pictures to the Municipal Art league for distribution among the city schools. This year ten have been given to the Sabin school.

The club makes a point of having the best of talent on its programs and of always paying artists for their services, thus striving to encourage art in a practical way. Some of the best known artists who have appeared on the programs recently besides those already mentioned are Miss Cyrena Van Gordon, Miss Margaret Butler, Francis Dada, Miss Miriam Downes, Antonio Zola, and Miss Veda Forsaith.

The present officers are Mrs. George Lomax, president; Mrs. George F. [illegible], first vice president; Mrs. Henry E. Fuellgraff, second vice president; Mrs. Harold L. McCourtie, recording secretary; Mrs. Gail E. Deming, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John E. Macdonald, treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Next Wednesday afternoon the Chicago Woman's club will hold its literary meeting in Fullerton hall of the Art institute. The subject of the afternoon will be "The Art Institute of Chicago" from the viewpoint of Charles L. Hutchinson, "The Patron of Arts"; Charles Francis Brown, "A Democratic Center"; Miss Pauline Palmer, "Its Art Classes"; Ralph Clarkson, "The Rank of Its Exhibits," and Oliver Dennett Grover, "Its Future Development." On Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock the joint program on education will be given in Recital hall. Miss Mary McDowell will speak on "The Press and the Public Schools," and discussion will follow by representatives of the Chicago newspapers. On Monday at 12:30 p. m. the philosophy and science department will give a luncheon in the clubrooms. On Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock the drama study class will convene in the Chicago Little theater to hear Maurice Browne on "Stage Decorating and Stage Lighting." On Saturday morning at 11 o'clock the efficiency committee will meet in the clubrooms. The Sunday open door program for this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock will be "Poetry and Songs." Poems by James Whitcomb Riley will be read by Mrs. Mary Cadwalader Donaley, president of the Chicago Dramatic society, and these will be followed by three groups of songs.

On Thursday the parliamentary law class of the Political Equality league meets in the green room of the Congress hotel. The same day the excursion committee will visit Hull house, the open air school, and Mary Crane nursery. On Saturday the program will be in charge of the education department and will be held in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel at 2 p. m. Mrs. Harriette Taylor Treadwell will speak on "Civic Leagues, a Retrospect and a Prophecy," Hugh S. McGill on pending educational bills at Springfield, and Fred Moore on "The World Crisis."

At 1 p. m. on Thursday the annual luncheon of the Lois Dunning Arts club will be held in the banquet hall of the Auditorium hotel. It will be preceded by a reception in honor of the president, Mrs. Lois Dunning, and George [illegible], the Italian sculptor. Dr. Preston Bradley will address the club on "Art." Mrs. Jessie Mack Hamilton will sing. The portrait of Mrs. Robert Cochrane and a bust of Mrs. William S. Phillips, who were voted the two most attractive women at the fall luncheon, will be presented.

The Social Economics club will meet on Tuesday at 2 o'clock in hall 412, Masonic temple. There will be an "America first" program with music. Miss Mary E. Tinen and Mrs. E. E. R. Tratman will speak.

The Boys' Clean Life club of the Thirteenth ward branch of the Woman's City club meets today at 2:30 p. m. in Garfield park refectory and the municipal concert will take place at 3:30 o'clock. Tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. the board of directors will meet. At 1 p. m. Miss Ruth R. Pearson will address the parks and playgrounds committee on "The Municipal Playgrounds." A [illegible] meeting is scheduled for 8 p. m., followed by an address by Dr. Rachelle Yarros at 8:30 o'clock on "Plans of the Committee on Social Hygiene." A social afternoon will follow. The Tuesday morning citizenship class will meet at 11 a. m. At 2:30 p. m. there will be a meeting of the Thirteenth ward branch girls' first aid class at the John Marshall High school, and of the municipal markets committee at Garfield park refectory. The clean air and transportation committee will convene in the clubrooms at 10 a. m. on Wednesday. Miss Grace Nicholes will conduct the noon citizenship class at 12:15 o'clock. On Thursday at 11 a. m. the parliamentary law class will meet. Prof. James H. Tufts will address the Twenty-first ward branch on "Bills Pending Before the General Assembly" at 8 p. m. at Gertrude house. A meeting of the housing committee has been called for Friday at 1 p. m. and the child welfare committee will meet at 3:30 p. m. At 6 p. m. Miss Grace Nichols will meet members and their friends who are interested in organizing an evening class in parliamentary law.

The Prince of Wales chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire will meet on Saturday at the Auditorium hotel. A musical program will be given.

William L. Bodine, superintendent of compulsory education, is to talk on his work in the city schools before the members of the Virginia Colony club at the monthly meeting on Wednesday. The meeting is to be held in the Stevens building, with luncheon at 12:30 o'clock, preceding the afternoon program.

The literary round table of the Chicago Culture club will meet tomorrow at Hotel La Salle at 2 p. m. There will be a debate, "Resolved, that the military training in our public schools will promote the general welfare of our nation." Mrs. Edgar A. Hall and Mrs. William M. Gunton will take the affirmative, and Mrs. W. E. Buehler and Mrs. Clyde S. Backus the negative. The philanthropy committee of the club will give a matinee on Wednesday at the Ardmore theater. The proceeds are to pay for furnishing a room in the Woman's Christian Home for Working Girls and Women.

A lecture and concert will be given at Central Music hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Renaissance. Quin O'Brien will speak on "The Glories and Genius of the Renaissance."

The Central Eleanor club, 16 North Wabash avenue, will be "at home" to its friends this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Dr. Theodore G. Soares will speak on "Camping in Palestine."

The Chicago Colony of New England Women will hold two meetings the coming week, the annual one on Thursday and a program meeting on Saturday at the Blackstone hotel. A one act drama written by Miss Emma Walton, one of the colony members, will be acted by the women of the club.

On Wednesday the Chicago Hospital alumni will give a dinner at the Brownleigh club. The monthly Fellowship dinner of the Brownleigh club will be held on Thursday. This is to be a "booster dinner" and each member is urged to be present and bring a guest who is a prospective member. Miss Lilian Bell, Dr. Lucy H. Waite, and Miss Lulu Kennedy will be the speakers. On Friday the Eugenic society will hold its weekly meeting. The Law league will have a dinner on Saturday.

At the March meeting of the Kindergarten club the subject will be "Language in the Kindergarten." Miss Frances Throop will speak on "Stories and Verses," Miss Mary L. Morse on "Books and Pictures," Miss Florence Harrison on "How to Help the Foreign Child," and Miss Alice Temple on "Oral Expression." The meeting will be held in the clubroom of the Art institute at 2 o'clock on Saturday.

The eighth chamber music concert at the City club will be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, 315 Plymouth court.

Tomorrow at 3 p. m. the Parent-Teacher association of the John Fiske school will hold an exhibition of school activities. At 3:30 p. m. the North End Mothers' club meets at the Cranden kindergarten to discuss the function of the home in the education of the child. Tuesday the P.-T. A. of the elementary and high schools of the University of Chicago will discuss "Science as the Center of the Reorganized High School Course." An illustrated lecture on "Birds" will be given at the Norwood Park meeting on Tuesday by Mrs. Ruth Work. On Wednesday at 3:10 p. m. the P.-T. A. of the Parker elementary and high schools meets in the auditorium of the College building. "Progress in the Kindergarten" will be the subject of a talk given by Miss Elizabeth Harrison, president of the National Kindergarten association. At 3 p. m. the P.-T. A. of the Calumet High and Auburn Park schools will hear a talk by Mrs. Alice Hyatt Mather of the Illinois Vigilance association on "The City's Conspiracy Against the Youth." The same afternoon the Noyes School Mothers' club of Evanston will hold a meeting. Also the Myra Bradwell P.-T. A. "What Mothers Can Do in Education" will be the subject of the paper read by Mrs. John F. Brady. On Thursday at 3 p. m. a meeting of the high school section of the P.-T. A. of the elementary and high schools of the University of Chicago will hear Ernst R. Breslich give a demonstration lesson on mathematics. The same afternoon the Morse Mothers' club holds an election of officers. At 3 p. m. the Better Motherhood club of the Woodlawn Baptist church also holds a meeting. "Fathers and Mothers" will be the subject discussed. Friday at 2:30 p. m. the Ryder School Mothers' club will talk about the diet of school children. At 3 p. m. the Doolittle P.-T. A. will have Judge Mary Bartleme as speaker.

$3.95 For the Genuine Solid Oak Table

$6.38 For the Beautiful Quaker Reading Lamp For Gas or Electricity

The Table is made of solid oak throughout, selected with special reference to the beauty of its grain. The top is 24x42 inches; the legs are cut from heavy stock 1¾ inches square. At each end is a convenient space-saving newspaper and magazine rack, and below is a commodious shelf. It has a large, deep drawer, 17x19 inches. The finish is the beautiful, durable and popular fumed oak. The table is carefully crated and packed K.-D for safety in shipping. It can be set up by anyone in a few minutes. Shipping weight, about 85 lbs. Shipped by freight and delivered direct to your home. We have special delivery service in all large cities and in most small ones, but we do not prepay freight. Price only....... $3.95

The Lamp is fitted for either gas or electricity. Be sure to state which you want. The glass dome is a solid, restful green, 11½ inches in diameter, and can be raised or lowered. The pedestal has the beautiful golden finish. The metal base is finished in green and golden. The electric lamp has key socket for one light, and has 6 feet of cord and screw plug for attaching to any electric connection. The gas lamp has gas burner, chimney, mantle, 6 feet of rubber tubing, and brass goose-neck for attaching to any gas connection. The lamp stands 18 inches from bottom of base to top of dome. Safe delivery guaranteed by express direct to your home. Price payable $1.00 monthly, no money down—only. $6.38

Our connection with nine great factories makes these remarkable offers possible. Any factory bargain we advertise at $5.00 or more will be shipped direct to your home on thirty days' trial and without the payment of a cent in advance. We do not ship on charge account articles that we sell at less than $5.00. We suggest that you order the beautiful and artistic Quaker Reading Lamp now by simply signing and returning the following coupon. SEND NO MONEY. Then, when you see this lamp, you will realize what a Quaker Valley Factory Bargain means; thereafter you will be a permanent Quaker Valley customer, with an open charge-account here, available for your convenience at any time. It will not be necessary for you to send any money in advance for any article priced at $5.00 or over; it does not pay us to pass smaller items through our credit department.

If you are pleased and delighted upon receipt of the Lamp—as we know you will be—remit $6.38 at the rate of a dollar a month; otherwise return the lamp any time within thirty days at our expense.

If you desire that the table be shipped at the same time, enclose $3.95 with the coupon, and both table and lamp will be promptly forwarded direct to your home; or you may order the table later, any time prior to the closing of this great distribution.

But, in any event, don't fail to take advantage of this great Bargain Lamp Offer. Only one thousand more of them will be distributed at this price. It is not likely that this announcement will ever appear again.

Simply sign and return the following coupon for the lamp; if you also want the table shipped at once, enclose $3.95; if not, send no money with the coupon. The lamp will be promptly shipped on the simple request of any reliable housekeeper or her husband in the United States.

Don't fail to state whether your lamp is to be fitted for gas or electricity.

Sign the coupon now—while you have the paper in your hand.

Threat of War Finds All Ready to Lend a Hand

Mrs. A. J. Drexel Jr. PHOTO © BY EDWIN LEVICK N.Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—War, when it threatens to descend, changes the thoughts of all classes, even down to the smart set. I was struck the other evening with the conversation at the dinner table of the Cornelius Vanderbilts. They were having a large function—a dinner followed by stereopticon pictures and a lecture by E. Alexander Powell on the subject of the French front. At the dinner table they talked practically exclusively about the active [illegible] auxiliary of the state of New York, one guest explaining to another, who was eager to know what it accomplished, how it accomplished it, how those not helping could help.

Gov. Whitman is the head of it and he was one of the guests. He goes to nearly every entertainment the Vanderbilts give. The two families are excellent friends. But this does not mean that all of the time in the last three years conversation has been exclusively on war, [illegible] and relief. It is only since our own dear country has been threatened. In this crisis all are expecting to take a hand. The smart set are one and all talking in the terms that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests were using.

Mrs. James Speyer, who has given her energies in the past to the relief of horses and the uplift of cats and dogs, is now putting the brunt of her efforts on the girls' branch of the Public School Athletic league. There is so much storm and stress now among the girls therein represented because of the shortage of food and the riots caused thereby. She was talking about it at the table one evening last week when hostess at a dinner, and to her amazement the next day heard that the woman once removed from her on the left had given [illegible] to start a fund for meals for school children of the east side until the food crisis is over.

Smart Women in Relief Work.

Although jollity has seemed to run higher this winter in New York than ever, although more have danced and spent money than you can imagine, and thousands attended the kennel show, just over, until they swelled the attendance number to something breaking all previous records, there has been an attitude of soberness embedded deep down somewhere in the consciousness of the participants. Outside the kennel show, smart women paused long enough to enroll themselves in local war relief projects.

Speaking of war relief and dog shows, there is one person who deserves mention beyond all others. He is Filax, a German sheep dog bred in France. He has served a year in the trenches, saving the lives of many soldiers wounded and not to be reached by comrades. He is merely here on leave of absence, and expects to return soon to the allies, with whom, in spite of his ancestry, he is heart and soul in sympathy.

Either because the gay doings of the dog show or because he does not speak English, or possibly because of the shadowed memories of those awful days and nights in the trenches, with what he saw there, he did not seem especially animated or delighted over the exhibition. There was indeed a look in his face much like the look I saw in the expressions of wounded Englishmen in London, who limped up Piccadilly, aloof and apart in manner from all of the busy, complacent life going on about them. They were thinking of the trenches and the life they had seen there—they were indeed present there in soul and spirit, as they will probably be for many a day.

Those terrible experiences apparently impress men and dogs the same way. And why not? They are more horrible than anything Dante could think of, and horror does not demand human faculties ot see. Filax, like the men, was subdued and shadowed by his late experiences, and, like them, was unwilling to keep away from the field. He is going to return in a month or two, and his attendant says that whenever any noise is made that resembles the firing of a gun or the explosion of a shell, Filax lights into life and animation and gives a bark, which says, as plainly as anything, "I must me off. Let me go."

See New York of Other Days.

Never in the history of the dog show have more fashionable women taken awards than this year. Mrs. Payne Whitney took one on Sealyham terriers. At the show I noticed Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Belmont, and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's name has been on many lips this week in a totally different connection from the above. She assembled a collection of relics and paintings of old New York that have spread wonder, merriment, and interest broadcast throughout this town.

Of course you know to a New Yorker nothing is so amusingly pathetic (or should I say pathetically amusing) as not to be up to date. My arrangement of the words would depend on whether one were speaking of the city or whether one were speaking in the point of view of the city about something or somebody else. For them to look on themselves, therefore, and see that they did not always qualify under the present standards of magnitude and style is an experience.

Crowds of the smart set have visited the collection this last week. It was shown at the Colony club. Among the relics of real and permanent interest is a medal presented to Commodore Vanderbilt by congress for the gift of the ship North Star. Old portraits were loaned by Mrs. Vincent Astor and others of well known name.

Costume Party at Palm Beach.

Meantime, through wars, dog shows, and exhibitions, costume parties and other diversions are going on at Palm Beach. They say the one given by Clarence Jones was an experience to all who attended. It was on the porch of the Breakers. Pretty much all of the smart set were there in costume, and a friend of mine has written me that they were wonderful. The guests danced all night and at sunrise the men went down to the beach for a dip in the water before going to bed.

Of course, you know, almost everybody that is anybody is in the south—or at least out of town now. New York only claims its own from November to February and for a short period around Easter. There are as many smart setters now at Lenox, Newport, Long island, and resorts of the south as there are in our city. They take as a pretext that they need to rest from the war work and other activities, and they indulge in the costume balls such as cited.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Jr. have gone down to High Point, N. C., where Mrs. Drexel's father, George J. Gould, has a shooting box. Mrs. Pierpont Morgan has gone to Jekyl island, Georgia, for a stay of several weeks. Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins are in Stuart, Fla. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills started yesterday for Palm Beach, where they will remain a fortnight. Mrs. Joseph Harriman, who was a guest of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, has gone to Aiken, S. C.

Sports and Sewing Now.

As for those left in our city, they are conducting themselves in accordance with what is deemed correct for the Lenten season. There are but two activities now, sewing in sewing circles and sports. Let me mention that the same women appear in both. Those who attended the dog show in the afternoons last week met in sewing circles in the morning. Everything about them from their costuming to their facial expressions underwent a complete change between the two occasions.

This week the Lenten demands have driven them further still into retirement. There is no dog show and the sewing classes have been moved up to the afternoons. Needles click while opera stars sing, actresses—or at least monologue entertainers—perform, and an intelligent woman steers them straight by means of a breezy, entertaining lecture as to what is really going on in the world. Five o'clock brings tea and men and a pleasantly stimulating, flirtationous conversation. But no dancing. That's the way you can tell it is Lent.

"I Put 2 Drops of 'Gets-It' on Last Night—Now Watch—"

"See—all you have to do is to use your two fingers and lift the corn right off. That's the way 'Gets-It' always works. You just put on about 2 drops. Then the corn not only shrivels, but loosens from the toe, without affecting the surrounding flesh in the least. Why, it's almost a pleasure to have corns and see how 'Gets-It' gets them off in a hurry and without the least pain. I can wear tight shoes, dance and walk as though I never had corns."

"That Was a Quick Funeral That Corn Had With 'Gets-It'."

"Gets-It" makes the use of toe-irritating salves, bundling bandages, tape, plasters and other things not only foolish, but unnecessary. Use this wonderful discovery, "Gets-It," for any soft or hard corn or callus. It is the new, simple, easy, quick way, and it never fails. You'll never have to cut a corn again with knives or scissors, and run chances of blood poison. Try "Gets-It" tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Wallach of 5672 West Madison street announce the engagement of their daughter, Henrietta, to Meyer D. Stein.

FUTURE EVENTS

The American Ambulance Field service, the American Fund for French Wounded, the Children of the Frontier of France and Belgium, and the American Relief Clearing House are organizations whose representatives are arranging for what is declared to be a most remarkable series of war moving pictures to be given at the Strand theater the week of March 18, beginning Sunday and continuing with a number of matinees. Mrs. Russell Tyson is chairman of the arrangement committee for the pictures, which were taken in devastated parts of the countries of the allies by Merl La Voy, who has recently come to Chicago with his films. Among those interested in the showing of the pictures are Samuel Insull, James B. Forgan, and James O. Heyworth.

A card party will be given on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Bismarck garden for the benefit of the Mothers' Relief association, with Mrs. Frank C. Lewis acting as chairman. Mrs. Edward Maher is president of the association and others interested are Mrs. Edward Morris, Mrs. Hans A. Leafgreen, and Mrs. A. E. Kaltenbrun.

Lenten programs of action are well launched and the lectures and sewing classes planned for the season have already, during the last ten days, met with success and rapt attention from those who go. One of the most popular series is that given by the social service committee of the Children's Memorial hospital, of which Mrs. George Halleck Taylor is chairman, the talks being given on Thursday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock at private homes on the north side. Philip Seaman, superintendent of the Chicago Hebrew institute, will give the second talk on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. Mark Cummings of 1530 North State parkway. The lectures are on the different agencies in the city for helping dependent or defective children.

The third of "The Awakening World" series of lectures will be given on Tuesday afternoon in the assembly hall of the Fine Arts building by Prof. Percy Holmes Boynton, associate professor of English at the University of Chicago. The lectures are for the benefit of the University of Chicago settlement, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The Rev. Charles F. Wishart will continue his course of six lectures on "The First Great Missionary Story," giving the second talk on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. B. Martin of 191 East Walton place on "Running Away from God." The proceeds of the course will go to the parish house of the Second Presbyterian church.

A series of talks which will be a great event for all those who are familiar with the unusually brilliant work of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, for years known internationally as one of America's greatest thinkers, will be her morning lectures to be given every day this week, beginning tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock on "The Larger Feminism." Mrs. Gilman will arrive in the city today from New York, and will be the guest of Mrs. Marietta A. Dow of 515 Barry avenue. A number of entertainments will be given for Mrs. Gilman during her stay in the city, among them a luncheon to be given tomorrow after her lecture in the assembly room of the Fine Arts building.

The Helping Hand circle will give a benefit concert on Tuesday evening at the Congress hotel, at which the soloists will be Ruth Klauber Reinsberg, pianist; Helen Viviane Reinsberg, play reader, and Harry Weisbach, violinist.

The Chicago Center of the English Folk Dance society has been invited by the president, A. A. Stagg, to hold its annual spring meeting in Bartlett gymnasium of the University of Chicago tomorrow evening. Four pupils of Miss Mary Wood Hinman, secretary of the society, will present an old Elizabethan dance entitled "Confess" and will revive an old English group dance, "Hey, Boys, Up We Go." There will be folk singing by the entire club at the close of the program.

The choir of Holy Angels' church on the corner of Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue will give a concert on St. Patrick's night, in which there will be Irish folk songs, Irish love songs, dancing, and recitations.

Jesse Quitman will give what he describes as "a frivolous talk on the serious subject of 'Love'—a frolicsome literary adventure among Bernard Shaw, Henry James, Havelock Ellis, and Freud." The talk will be given this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the English room of the Blackstone hotel. Mrs. Quitman will sing and later serve tea.

The program for this afternoon at the South Shore Country club will include the motion picture entitled "Mothers of France" in which Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is the principal figure. Other club events of the week will be the Red Cross class at 4:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the regular Thursday and Saturday evening dances.

A sale will be held on Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs George S. Isham, 1340 North State street, to show French metal work done by the wounded French soldiers. There will also be Sardinian baskets and Italian china and leather goods which have recently been received by Mrs. Bryan Lathrop.

Mrs. Elisha P. Whitehead of 33 Bellevue place will open her home Tuesday for a Lenten talk by Miss Edith Hibbard on the newest books of the day.

The philanthropic department of the Klio association will give a card party at the Traffic clubrooms in the Hotel La Salle on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs J. F. Ailes is chairman of the arrangement committee.

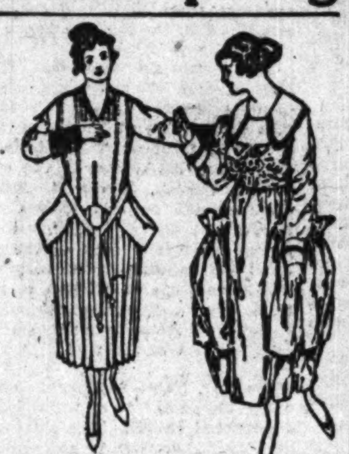
Dresses, Heralds of Spring

—Second Floor—

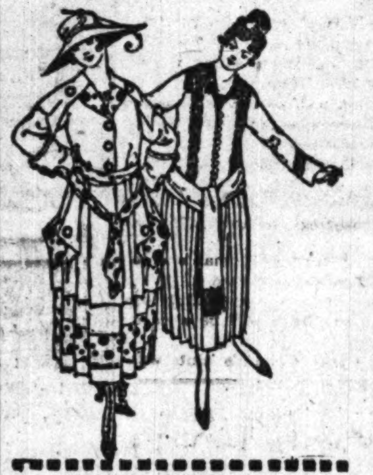
Yes, Spring shows in every line, in the straight slim effect, in the beautiful new shades; the authentic styles proclaim them worth a great deal more than Monday's prices.

They're carefully made of the most wanted fabrics, styles suitable for street and afternoon wear—two of the many styles are illustrated.



Two of Spring's Newest Models in the $18.75 group.

Pretty one and two piece effect sports styles, made of serges, taffetas, crepe de chines, silk jersey, wool jersey, georgette and taffeta combinations, and others elaborately trimmed, women's & misses' sizes, 18.75



Spring favors these styles very strongly—choice, $15.

Another group of dresses is priced a trifle lower, but lacks none of the interesting features that prevail for spring. The new narrower skirts, the long, straight, youthful lines, the correct length skirts—all are embodied in this charming group. They're made of serges, crepe de chines, taffetas, tussahs, silk jersey & crepe de chine combinations.

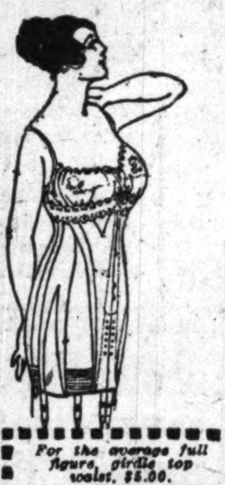
You Should Choose a Corset That Improves Both Figure and Health

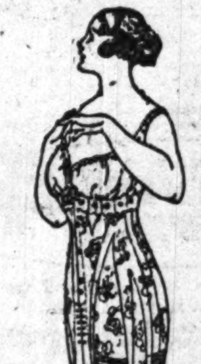
—Third Floor—Center—



For the average full figure, girdle top waist, $5.00.

Most women, we know, think that it is difficult to do so, and they are in the main right, but it is not difficult if you decide upon a Nemo Corset and come here for it, where in place of choosing it haphazardly over a counter you choose it in one of our private fitting rooms with the aid of one of our expert corsetieres, who will demonstrate on your own figure and quickly so, just what the correct Nemo Model correctly chosen and fitted can do for your figure.

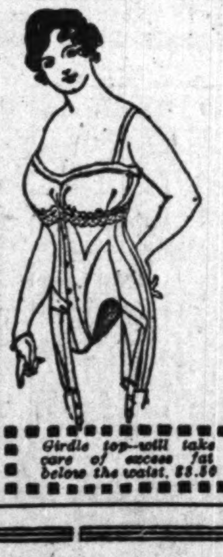
We have Nemo corsets in so complete a variety of styles that every figure from the very slight to the very stout can be properly fitted and all sizes are at our corsetieres' command, so it is never necessary to fit you to the wrong size, as so many stores who cannot carry the complete variety of sizes in all styles do. We wish we could impress the importance of this fact on your mind, for it means so very much to your health and comfort as well as to your figure. The progressive, helpful work of our fitting service has won city-wide recognition among Chicago's foremost physicians and from the leading modistes; still, we make no extra charge for this service.



Extreme low bust—Semi-Elastic reducing bands, $7.50

Nemo corset, style 523. A self-reducing corset for the stout woman, short or of medium height, with heavy pendulous abdomen, who requires firm, positive support from underneath. The action of the abdominal muscles against the self-reducing strap produces a continuous and gentle massage. The result is the perfect control and support of excess fatty tissue that has accumulated below the abdomen proper, made of strong white coutil, heavily boned, sizes to 36, 5.00

Nemo corset, style, 752, as illustrated, for the woman with a good figure, that is, good bust and waistline, hips well proportioned, but with bulging, unsightly thighs. This model will reduce the bulging thighs—note how it is made with semi-elastic bands, just where the flesh is, acting like a hand massage on fat, you will be surprised how quickly the fat will disappear, sizes to 36, at.............................. 7.50



Girdle top—will take care of excess fat below the waist, $3.50

Nemo corset, style 511. A model perfectly adapted for that large class of women who do not particularly require abdominal reduction, but who are too heavy otherwise below the waistline; extremely low bust, sizes to 36, at.................. 5.00

Nemo self reducing corset, style 355. A splendid low bust model for medium stout women, its function is to reduce and reshape the abdomen by eliminating excess fatty tissue which accumulates on the abdomen in the groin section, directly over the muscles and under the skin. It is an accepted fact that no particular part of the body can be reduced without reducing other parts of the body to some extent, so while directly reducing the flesh in the abdomen the Nemo self-reducing corset indirectly reduces the entire body, sizes to 36, at.................................. 3.50

News of the Religious World

Churches Show Large Increase in Membership

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE communicant membership of the churches in the United States exceeds 40,000,000, according to the statistics issued by the Rev. H. K. Carroll, formerly in charge of the United States census of religious bodies, now associate secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The statistics are printed in the year book issued by the federal council. The total does not include children or others affiliated with the churches but only actual communicants.

The net increase for the year was 747,000, or [illegible] more than the increase in 1915. Since 1890 the membership of the churches has almost doubled, having in 1890 a total of 20,618,000. The churches gained 94 per cent and the population 61 per cent in twenty-six years.

For the first time in the year book a chapter is devoted to the distribution of Protestantism in the world. The figures are: The Anglican communion, estimated, [illegible]; Baptists, 21,000,000; Congregationalists, 4,355,000; Lutherans, 70,500,000; Methodists, 32,418,000, and Presbyterians and Reformed, 30,800,000. The Sunday schools of the United States have had a net increase in membership in the last ten years of 6,300,000 and an increase in the number of schools of between 15,000 and 16,000.

The Very Rev. Frederick Siedenberg, S. J., dean of the school of sociology of Loyola university, will lecture this evening at the Church of the Most Precious Blood, Western avenue and West Congress street, on "Social Hygiene." Father Siedenberg will present a difficult subject in popular language.

On Wednesday evening the Very Rev. Francis X. McCabe, LL.D., president of De Paul university, will lecture on "The Two-Edged Sword." Dr. McCabe will lecture in the Church of the Most Precious Blood every Wednesday evening during Lent, the services being at 8 o'clock.

A novena of grace in honor of St. Francis Xavier will begin this evening in the Holy Family church, West Twelfth street, near May. The sermons will be preached for nine successive evenings by the Rev. Joseph C. Flynn, S. J.

The officers' council of the Salvation army, presided over by Commissioner Thomas Estill and Territorial Secretary Sidney Gauntlett, will be held next Wednesday at 2:30. In the evening a "united soldiers'" meeting will be held in the Citadel, 1512 West Madison street.

Brigadier George Davis and the training college staff and cadets began a revival service meeting at No. 13, Swedish corps, 867 Wood street, Friday evening, which will continue until March 10.

The Rev. Paul Riley Allen

The Rev. Paul Riley Allen will begin today his pastorate of the North Shore Congregational church, Sheridan road and Wilson avenue. He will preach at 11 a. m. on the subject, "A voice Out of the Clouds," and at 7:30 p. m. on "A Wonderful Promise.' On next Friday evening a reception will be given in the church parlors to the pastor and his wife.

The North Shore church has been without a pastor since the resignation of the Rev. James A. Ainslie, who preached his final sermon in the church Jan. 2, 1916.

The Rev. Mr. Allen comes from the pastorate of the First Congregational church, Norwich, N. Y., where he has been pastor for the last ten years. He is 41 years old of age. He was educated at the University of New York and the Drew Theological seminary and pursued post graduate studies at the Hartford Theological seminary.

Mrs. Allen is the daughter of Judge John Hicks of Norwich. She is a graduate of Wellesley college.

The congregation of the North Shore church voted more than a year ago to decline a cash offer of $200,000 for the church property. The North Side Sunday Evening club maintained in the church for a long time has been given up and the evening services will be one of preaching and worship.

The Rev. C. S. Kerfoot of Chicago will become pastor of the Baptist church, Sheboygan, Wis., next May.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Denver area, Methodist Episcopal church, will be the speaker tonight at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall.

Bishop McConnell has supervision over the work of his denomination in Mexico and in the discharge of his duties has made frequent visits to the country. During the régime of Huerta he was under fire of cannon and small arms. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university and of Boston university school of theology. He was pastor of the New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Brooklyn, when he was called to the presidency of De Pauw university, Greencastle, Ind. In 1912 he was elected to the episcopacy at 41 years of age, one of the youngest men ever elected to the office in his denomination. He earned the degree of Ph.D. from Boston university and received the honorary degrees of D. D. and LL.D. from other universities. He is the author of the following books: "The Divine Immanence," "Religious Certainty," "Christian Focus," "Personal Christianity," and other books. He was president last year of the Religious Education association, which closed on Friday its national convention in Boston.

Richard C. Hall of the United States Rubber company, a trustee of the club, will read the scriptures. The offertory will be sung by Mrs. Rose Lutiger Gannon.

The Mount Zion Lutheran church of the northern Illinois synod, Eighty-first and May streets, will be dedicated today with services at 10:45 a. m. and 3 p. m. The Rev. R. L. Yarger, general superintendent of the board of home missions and church extension, will preach and assist the pastor, the Rev. C. L. McConnell, in the dedication. The church was organized in a storeroom about three years ago. The new building is the beginning of a contemplated larger structure.

At the convention of the Religious Education association which closed last Friday in Boston the music was in charge of H. Augustine Smith, formerly minister of music in the New First Congregational church, Chicago. Prof. Smith was chairman of music of greater Boston and chairman of the sessions on art and music in the convention. On Thursday evening the Malden festival chorus of 800 voices under Prof. Smith's direction rendered portions of the oratorio of "Elijah" and a choir hymn "The New America," the text of which was written by Katherine Lee Bates of Wellesley college.

Motion pictures of the recent pilgrimage to the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln in Hodgenville, Ky., and at Lincoln university, will be shown this evening in the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Locust and North La Salle streets. Bishop Samuel Fallows, the Rev. E. Robb Zaring, the Rev. E. L. Williams, pastor of the church, and others who were in the pilgrimage will speak.

The Bryn Mawr Community church, Jeffery avenue and Seventieth street, the Rev. A. M. Gardner, pastor, will be dedicated today, with a dedication to some special form of Christian service each night throughout the week.

The pastor, Dr. Gardner, will preach the morning sermon at 11 o'clock, and the Rev. William Crawford will make the dedicatory prayer. The evening address will dedicate the building to the work of the young people and will be by Prof. G. L. Scherger. Other ministers assisting at the morning service will be the Rev. Philip Yarrow and the Rev. R. L. Breed.

Seven neighboring pastors will speak tomorrow night, Community night; the Rev. John Gardner and the Rev. Ozora S. Davis and others will speak Tuesday night in dedicating the church to Christian fellowship. Prayer and praise will be the subject on Wednesday night, the Rev. W. E. Barton speaking and presiding. Woman's night will be on Thursday, with the presentation of a flag and a tableau entitled "One Short Year." Albert Beeman and M. W. Russell will speak on Friday night in which the church will be dedicated to Sunday school work.

The church was organized on Nov. 27, 1914. The portion of the building to be dedicated and the lots which provide for an enlargement later cost $37,000.

At the Catholic Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Fifty-fifth street and Kimbark avenue, the Right Rev. Francis C. Kelley will preach Sunday evenings during Lent to men only on the subject, "Divine Answers." On Tuesday evenings the Rev. John Webster Melody will preach to married ladies only on "The Virtue of Religion." On Thursday evening the Rev. John Henry Nawn will preach to young women only on "Precept and Practice." On Friday evenings there will be a series of instructions on the stations of the cross.

The Fernwood Methodist Episcopal church, One Hundred and First and Wallace streets, will observe today the fifth anniversary of the pastor, the Rev. Walter B. Grimes. The date is the exact date of his coming to the pastorate of the church, March 4, 1912. The speakers will be: At 10:30 a. m., the Rev. Frank O. Beck, Trinity church; 3 p. m., community service, the Rev. E. Robb Zaring, editor Northwestern Christian Advocate, and at 7:30 p. m. the Rev. M. L. Norris, Evanston, former pastor. Social and religious meetings will be held the rest of the week.

The Rev. Noble S. Elderkin will begin today his pastorate of the Second Congregational church. The service will be at 10:30. There will be no evening service. Mr. Elderkin succeeds in the pastorate the Rev. E. D. Gaylord. contemplated larger structure.

"Some American Ideals" will be the subject of an address tonight of Charles S. Deneen, former governor of Illinois, at the California Avenue Congregational church, California avenue and West Monroe street. The Rev. James W. Vallentyne is pastor.

SPRING CHALLENGE SALE

2ND WEEK

—and the sale gets better every day—new shipments just opened up—latest spring arrivals revealed in all their freshness and glory; intense activity all about the store—every section vying with its neighbor. It's the good natured rivalry of the Challenge spirit extending to every nook and cranny of the store. Monday's store news holds your interest, also, because of the arrival of car loads of merchandise which were detained enroute because of irregular traffic conditions. Remember, all this merchandise was bought months ago for the big Challenge Sale—and it comes to you tomorrow at practically wholesale prices. Start over on the other page at the top of the column with the furniture section and read every item, including the silverware on this page—check up your savings—buy liberally—emphatic economies await you—make the most of your opportunity.

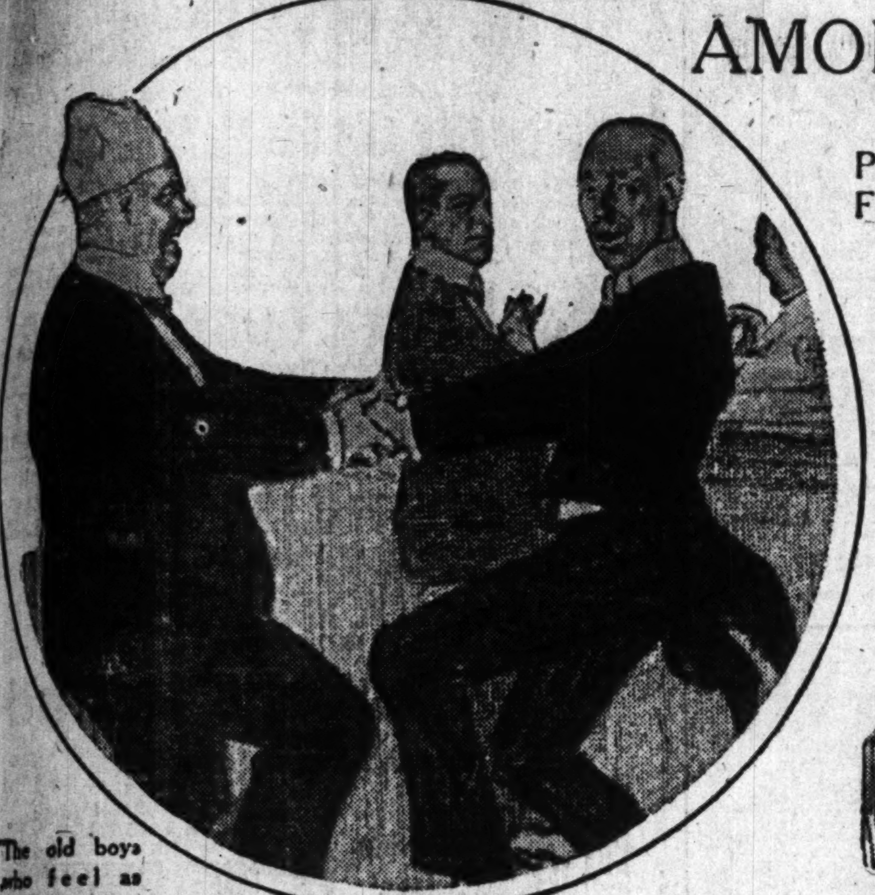
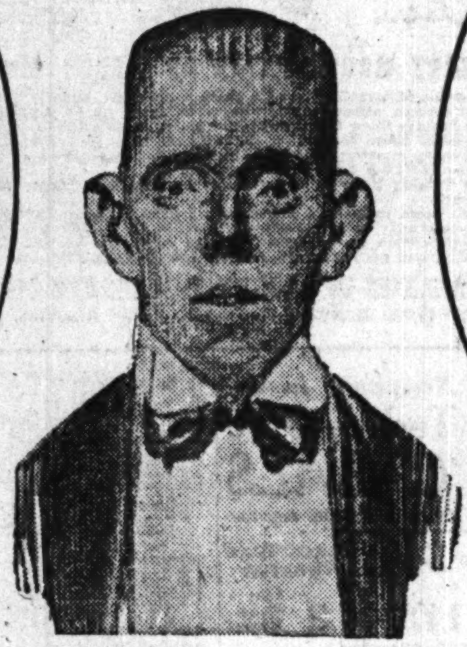
AMONG US MORTALS

DRAWN By W. E. HILL

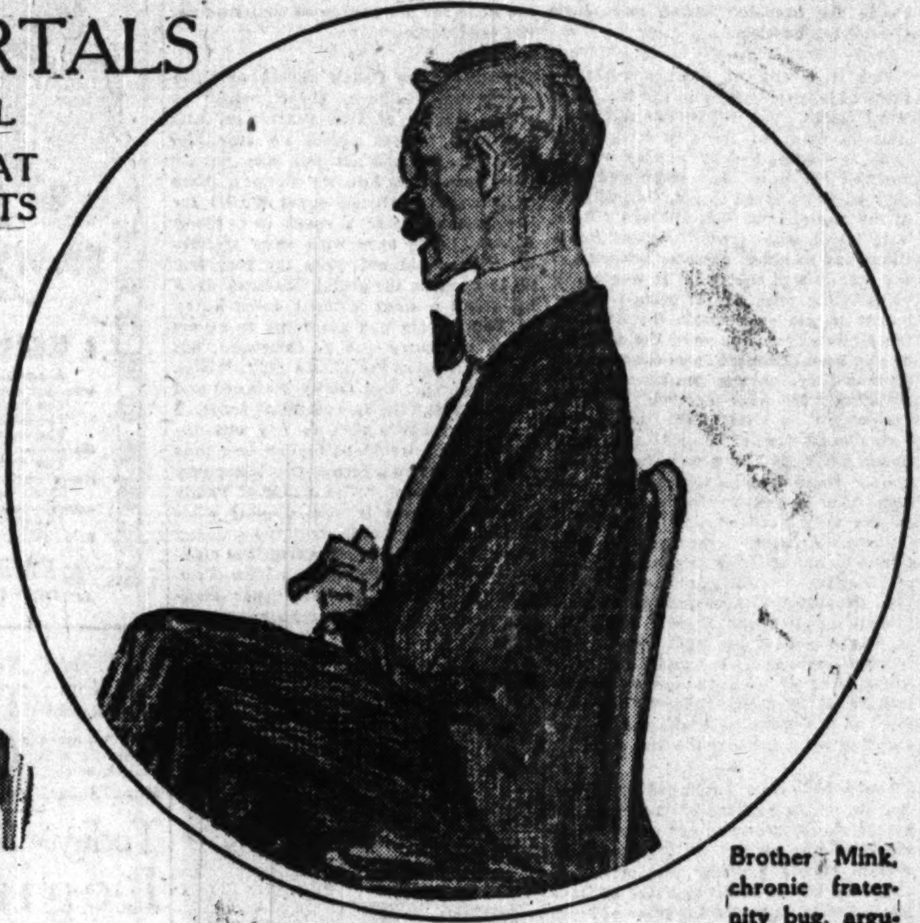
PEOPLE YOU MEET AT FRATERNITY BANQUETS



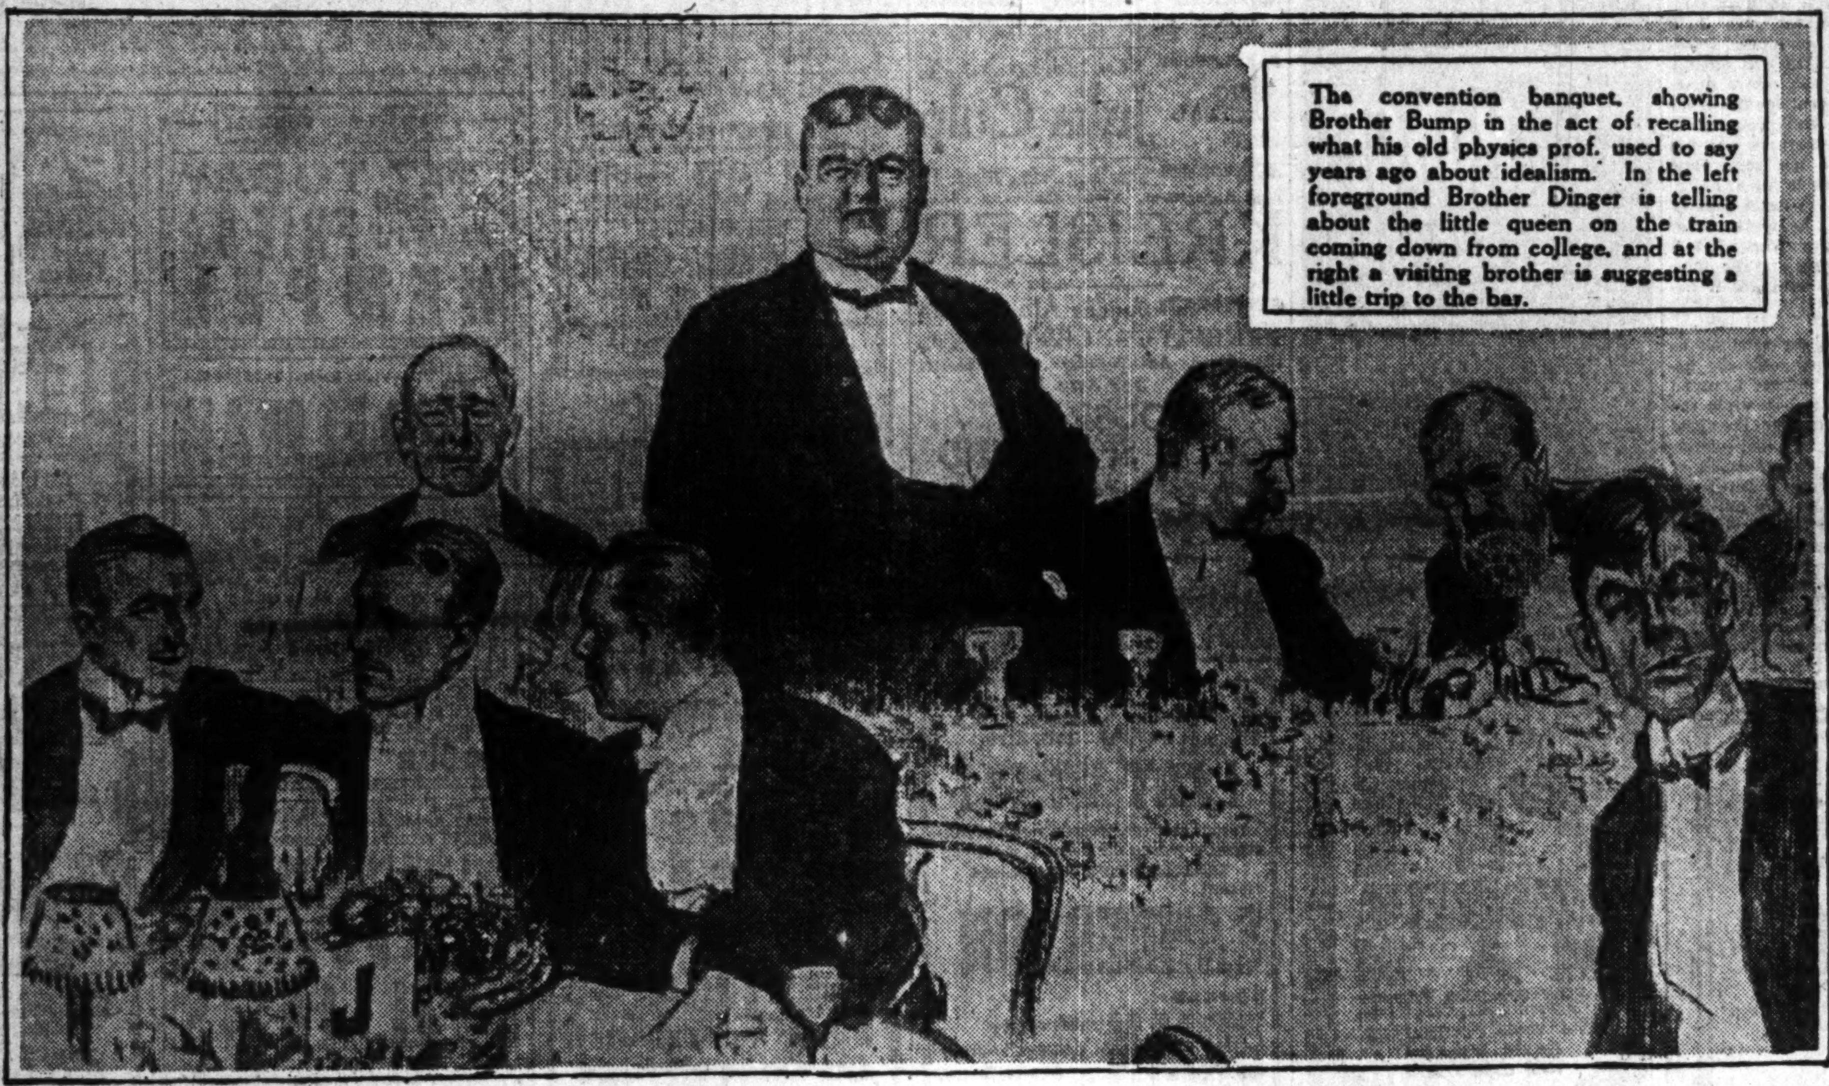
The old boys who feel as young at seventy as they did at twenty and the undergraduate who hopes he will never be such an old fool.



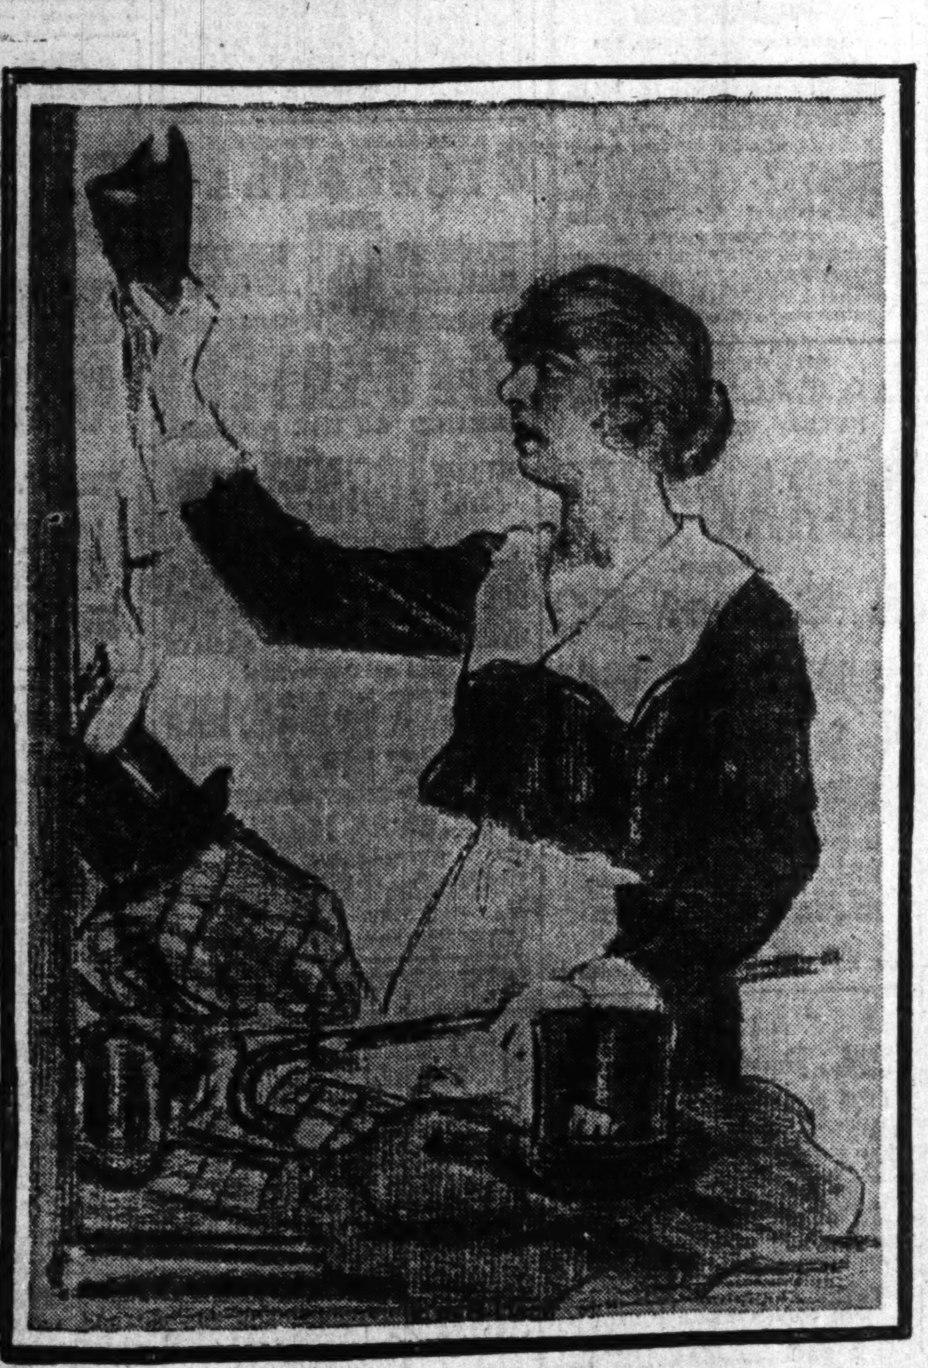
Brother Beckmesser has come a thousand miles to speak of the excellence of his fraternity.



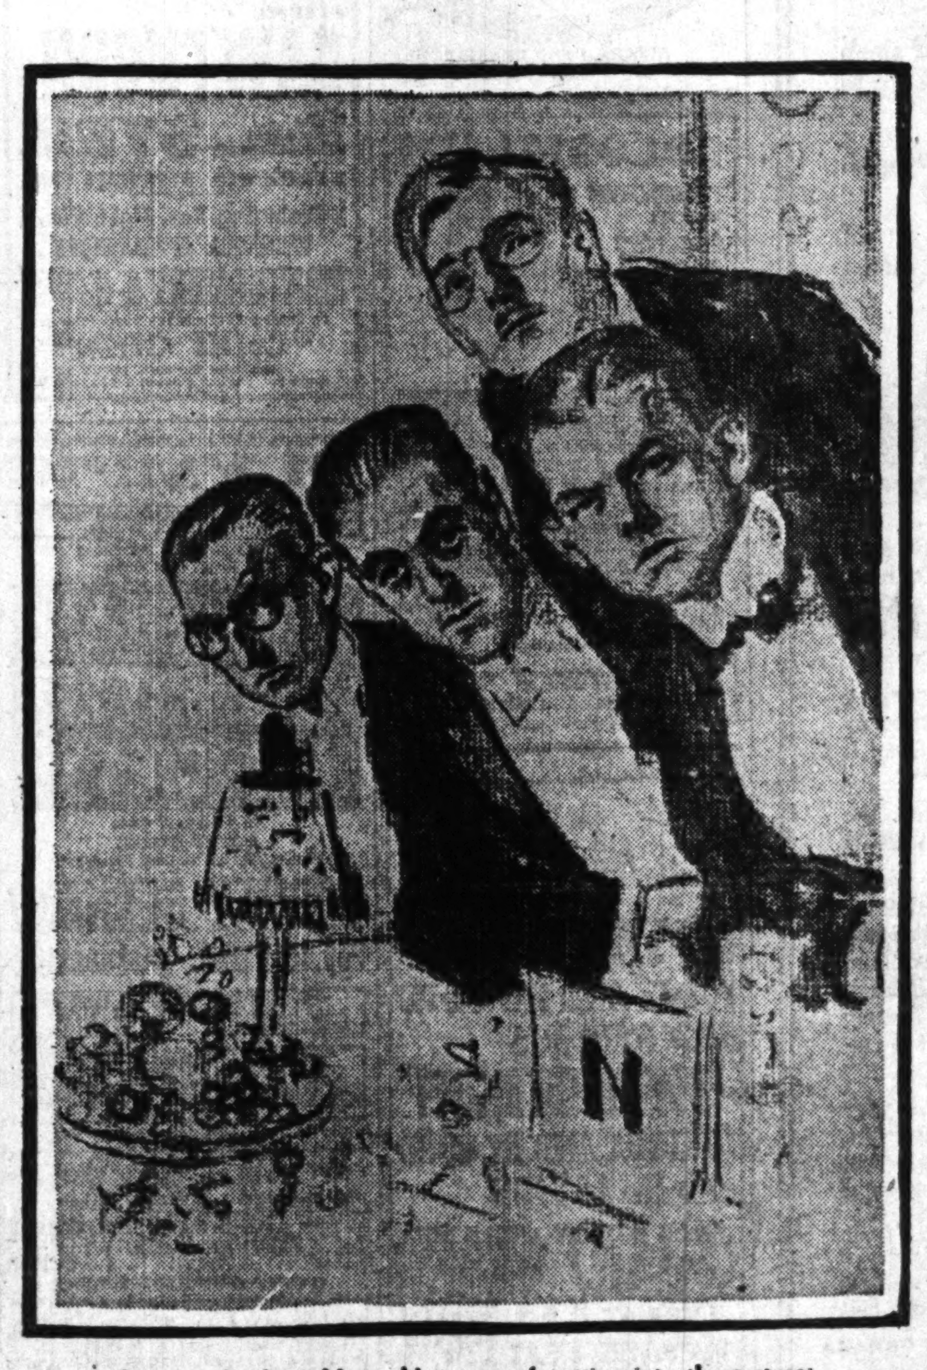
Brother Mink, chronic fraternity bug, arguing the advisability of establishing a precedent with regard to the reading of the minutes, etc.



The convention banquet, showing Brother Bump in the act of recalling what his old physics prof. used to say years ago about idealism. In the left foreground Brother Dinger is telling about the little queen on the train coming down from college, and at the right a visiting brother is suggesting a little trip to the bar.



The coatroom girl, giving the tall hats a rough deal.



Boys at the far table making sure of getting into the picture.

News and Views of the Theater

By Percy Hammond.

EUGENE WALTER left his audience on Wednesday night with at least one curiosity ungratified. Among the essential participants in the fable of "The Knife" is that sinister figure, who, lurking in the gloom of the white slaver's house, ravishes the heroine while she is drugged, and who is regretful thereafter. You may recall the lady's story of him—with what remorse he regards her plight, and how he reproaches himself for having so maltreated a woman who seemed to be gentle and well-born. "I shall pay for this," he is reported by her as having said, withdrawing as he does so his iniquitous presence.

He is so evil and so repentant a malefactor that you become interested in him, and you desire his identity to be less shadowy. Certainly, you say, Mr. Walter, after taking all this trouble to describe him, is not going to abandon him to the audience's imagination. Who is this malignant compounder of super-sins, this enactor of carnalities so incredible that they can be told only by innuendo? You would like to know.

But here are four shrewd men, personally interested, addicted to investigations and listening to the lady's recital in absolute indifference to the villain's identity. The doctor who is hot-foot upon the trail of propitious vaccines is lethargic when it comes to a pursuit of the real violator of his lady love. His pal, the graceful lawyer, the Irish sleuth, and the dutiful son of the district attorney, avid in their hunt for the miscreant who has sullied the heroine, grow cold to the chase when discovery seems imminent. So he is left, a malevolent adumbration of the slinking Tarquin, wandering among the mental recesses of those who go to "The Knife," and paging an atonement which he may not find.

Mr. Walter, I suspect, knows who he is. But since Mr. Walter doesn't tell us we have a right to guess. My bet is that he is the District Attorney. They talk a lot about that official in the play, and soon after the victim has ceased the pitiable tale of her desecration this district attorney is announced. It is the moment for the wallop. Everything is prepared for his entrance into the drama, with its subsequent revelation, but he fails to show up. Perhaps it is just as well that he does so. Mr. Walter takes enough chances with our risibilities as it is.

Portmonteau

IN some remarks not long ago about the Portmanteau theater I ventured the opinion that Mr. Stuart Walker, its director, was a showman. I suspected that his association with Mr. Belasco had taught him that the art of the theater is a charlatan art, which might appeal to the esthetically chaste if its pseudo-magic were blended with an intelligent optimism. I thought that he had learned from Mr. Belasco the value of the theater's mystery; that if it could be surrounded by certain incenses and genuflections adult minds might be tempted to enjoy it, in case its contents were reasonably literate.

It seemed to me that Mr. Walker had amended Mr. Belasco's creed of big lies and little truths in something like a proper proportion—that if Mr. Belasco's coffee in a Childs restaurant scene was real coffee and his characters were not real characters, Mr. Walker might adjust it so that the coffee would not be so real and the characters more so. At present Mr. Walker is traversing the low-brow circuit and he has no chance. His audience is eager, though from inexperience it is impervious to anything that is not ritualistic. When it becomes more generally bruited about that Mr. Walker dilutes his Dunsany with a bit of Ringling we shall all attend and be the better for it.

Confirming my suspicion that Mr. Walker is a showman, he intimated the other day at a convocation of bright young women, "The Scribblers," his sanction of "Within the Law," than which Barnum and Bailey never contrived a spectacle more Martian. "Within the Law" was the supreme and ultimate inversion of all the sanities, and yet Mr. Walker is enough of a showman to cite it seriously as proof of his theory and of Aristotle's that the tale is the thing.

I hope that Mr. Walker will be glad when I tell him something about "The Easiest Way," of which also he spoke to "The Scribblers," enumerating it among the great dramas. "The Easiest Way" was played, under the auspices of Mr. Belasco, exactly in the opposite manner from which it was intended by its author, Eugene Walter. Its chief character, though retaining Mr. Walter's lines, was not the lady of the author's thoughts, for he has told me so and I have read it in his manuscript.

Aside from all that, Mr. Walker is evidently a good actor of any part he undertakes. His own little pieces, "Nevertheless" and "The Very Naked Boy," are savory soufflés, admirable examples of adroit and enjoyable piffling. And he knows enough to know that Dunsany's anecdotes are vendible in the Little theaters. Mr. Walker, I should say, is an engaging merchant, whose wares are better than their reputation. The sooner he emerges from the penumbra of little theaterism the worse it will be for the little theaters and the better it will be for the big ones, if there is such a thing.

Notes.

VACHEL LINDSAY, the Springfield troubadour and movie expert, has a bright scheme to augment the enjoyment of those who attend "Intolerance." He says, in the New Republic, that one should first read Hugo Münsterberg's "The Photoplay; a Psychological Study," go to "Intolerance," reread the book, and then go to "Intolerance" again. Mr. Lindsay's grief over the death of Prof. Münsterberg is acute. "I had anticipated a glorious evening with him in some photoplay theater," says the poet mournfully, "where we would have been absolutely at one in our joy in the hopeful young art."

The way Miss Laurette Taylor tells a story:

"There is one tone of voice that I am going to reproduce some time in a play, and I can tell you beforehand that I'm going to be danced on to the queen's taste for it, but I will simply be reflecting real life as I have observed it. Hartley and I were guests at a friend's country place out in California some years ago. One morning about 4 o'clock I was awakened by the telephone bell ringing out in the hall. I heard our friend hurriedly arise and a minute or two later I heard him grumbling under his breath as he pattered down the corridor.

"I wasn't trying to eavesdrop. The house was so still that I just couldn't help hearing everything that went on. He went to the phone and called 'Hello.' Then I heard him say 'Yes,' and then there was a pause. Then I heard him say 'Don't say that' in the most unearthly voice I ever listened to. He kept repeating 'Don't say that, don't say that.' The tones were hollow. That's the only word that fitly describes them. They seemed to come from the depths of some great emptiness. There was no life in them. They were dead words. When he hung up the phone he came to the door of our room, which was ajar. 'Billy is dead,' he said in the same lifeless voice. 'Billy is dead.' Now Billy was his best friend and closest chum. I had heard a man receive the news of the death of the one whose friendship he prized more dearly than that of any one else in the world, and believe me I have never heard on the stage anything approaching the tone of his voice.

"I know it was shocking of me and improper and everything, but when he had gone down the hall to his own room again and had closed the door, I began to imitate the dead tones of his voice, and I can get that effect perfectly now. I have never used it, but I am going to some time when I play a part into which it will fit. But I'm sure some one will say that I am lifeless or negative, or something of that sort. I believe acting should be the simulation of real life, and whether the critics like it or not, that's what I'm going to keep on doing."

Mme. Bernhardt will give a week's performances at the Auditorium beginning Sunday evening, March 25. She will act two short plays, "Cleopatra" and "The Field of Honor," and there will be other vaudeville numbers.

It seems, by the way, that "Justice" was sent to the theatrical junk pile more on account of John Barrymore's yearning to get back to the movies than by public indifference to the play, which was not unsuccessful outside the middle west.

Wedekind's drama on sex-preparedness, "The Awakening of Spring," is to be performed in New York under the auspices of Geoffrey C. Stein and the Medical Review of Review's sociological fund. Mr. Stein was the star of "Where the Rooster Crows" not long ago.

The hero of E. H. Sothern's new play is named Salaw Jasin, and he is a London journalist engaged in thwarting kidnapers who abduct the daughter of a countess. "Stranger than Fiction" is its title, and New Haven was the place of its premier, with John Craig, H. Coopercliffe, and Miss Mary Young in the cast.

Playbills

La Salle—Miss Nora Bayes presents herself and a troupe of dancers and cakewalkers in a vaudeville entertainment of her own manufacture called "Songs as Is and Songs as Was." Miss Bayes' independent enterprise was successful in New York.

Cort—"Good Gracious, Annabelle," a popular farce by Miss Clare Kummer with a cast including Miss Lola Fisher, Miss May Vokes, Walter Hampden, Edwin Nicander. It is about a careless bride who, having escaped from her cave-man husband on her wedding night, is now in many troubles in New York City. Tonight.

Garrick—"The Passing Show," a big Shubert extravaganza with Ed Wynn as the leading entertainer.

Chicago—Eugene Walter's latest play, "The Knife." "Very Good, Eddie," arrives March 18.

Blackstone—Margaret Anglin in "The Lioness," by Rupert Hughes and Gertrude Atherton. Final week. Mrs. Fiske in "Erstwhile Susan" comes on March 12.

Grand—"Turn to the Right."

Olympic—"Potash and Perlmutter in Society," with Barney Bernard in the leading rôle.

Powers'—Seventeenth week of "The Boomerang."

Illinois—Last week of Sanderson-Brian-Cawthorn in "Sybil." Montgomery and Stone in "Chin Chin" are next.

Princess—Final performances of "Fixing Sister," by William Hodge. "A Cinderella Man" March 11.

The Playhouse—Last week of Stuart Walker's Portmanteau Players. The repertoire will be found in the announcements.

National — Walter Lawrence in "Come Back to Erin."

Imperial—"Katzenjammer Kids."

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"Ragdoll in Ragland," with George Stone and Etta Pillard.

VAUDEVILLE.

Palace—Fay Templeton and Julius Tannen, the monologist, are the headliners.

Majestic—Jack Norworth, Florence Moore and others.

Great Northern—Vaudeville in a double program.

Rialto—Jones, Linick & Schaefer vaudeville.

McVicker's—Jones, Linick & Schaefer vaudeville.

Vaudeville Notes

Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, has contrived a vaudeville called "Hark from the Tomb." It is about a mummy coming to life.

Miss Marjorie Rambeau, the star of "Cheating Cheaters," desires to be a divorcée and, to that end, charges her husband, Willard Mack, author of "Kick In," with infidelity. Mr. Mack makes no defense.

Among the songs which Miss Nora Bayes will sing during her engagement at the La Salle is "Pull the Cork Out of Erin—Let the River Shannon Flow." It is by Arthur Burkhardt, author of "Louisiana Lou" and other successful entertainments.

Burns Manıle's New York Theater Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.—The pajamas in "Oh, Boy!" are blue satin. Which distinguishes it as a musical play from most of the others, in which the pajamas usually are pink. "Oh, Boy!" is the novelty of the week and adds one more to the foolish play titles of this foolish season. It could quite as legitimately be called "Gee Whiz!" and "I Possess You, Stephen!" would be twice as subtle.

Just where this prevalent craze for slang titles will lead there is no way of telling. Just now it has passed the foolish stage and become deliciously silly. "The Washington Heights congregation has selected 'Love o' Mike' for its annual benefit," reads a notice we received recently. Which must have been a bit of a poser to at least a few of the deacons in the congregation. We hope the Daughters of the American Revolution will not hit upon "Puss, Puss!" as their choice. "Love o' Mike!" "Have a Heart!" "Johnny, Get Your Gun!" "Oh, Boy!" Can you think of a sillier list?

However, "Oh, Boy!" is a hit, and the rest doesn't much matter. It is studded with popular tunes. There is little attempt at writing consistent musical scores for musical plays these days, the effort plainly being to sprinkle so many song hits through a farcical story that the result shall be diverting and satisfying.

Neither does it take much to satisfy this season's playgoing public. A chorus of cuties and a sentimental song or two and the trick is turned. Youth, youth, youth is all that Broadway demands. There has never been a season in which so many new chorus girls have been introduced, so insistent has been the demand for the very young, the very pink, and [on the face of things] the very immature and unsophisticated brand of youngster.

This makes for beauty in the stage pictures and solves at least one important costume change—that of the pajama before referred to. For the younger and prettier the choristers the more certain is the stage director to insist that they shall appear in pajamas at some stage of the proceedings. We cannot recall at this moment a single musical play on Broadway that has not a pajama number of some character. And those that are strong enough to resist the lure of the pajama go in strong for a display of lingerie. . . .

The pajamas in "Oh, Boy!" are, as said, blue satin, and belong to a pretty young bride. She is brought by her new husband to his bachelor quarters because, having eloped with her, he is afraid to let her parents know the truth before the last curtain. But arrived there the eloping pair discover a chorus girl party in progress, with husband's bachelor chum as host, and it becomes necessary to send bride back to the home of her parents in order to avoid a scandal or something. It is then she forgets her pajamas. A soubrette lady, climbing through the window of the apartment to escape from a policeman she has inadvertently kicked in the chin, asks to be allowed to remain the rest of the night and helps herself to the blue satins. She is thereafter mistaken by everybody but the groom for the wife who has gone home. Which, as you may easily deduce, causes a sufficient number of complications and song cues to fill out the evening.

Jerome Kern wrote the songs and P. G. Woodhouse and Guy Bolton the book and lyrics. All three are much above the average. The old victrola is quite sure to be stuffed with song records from the score this summer, and all the fish in all the summer vacation lakes will know them by heart. Tom Powers of Louisville, previously devoted to the drama, and one of the best liked of the new juveniles the season has produced, tries a few of the "Oh, Boy!" songs on his voice, and does very well with them. As a baritone he is weak but willing, and his geniality does the rest. Anna Wheaton is the principal soubrette, Hal Forde the bachelor friend, and Marie Carroll the heroine.

This is a city of strange contrasts these days, particularly in the matter of amusements. The day we had our bread riots in front of the city hall, when 2,000 or 3,000 allegedly hungry women stormed the gates and demanded that they be given bread to eat, Caruso sang at the Auditorium. The bill was "Rigoletto," and, aside from the great tenor, there was no other operatic celebrity of the first line in the cast. It was a day of drizzling rain, and it costs a lot of money to get even inside the doors of the Metropolitan this year, the schedule having been advanced from the $5 to the $6 rate for orchestra seats and correspondingly for other locations. In spite of which a line of prospective "standees" formed outside the opera house early in the afternoon and remained there through the rain until the doors were opened in the evening. And at the very head of the line stood a Chinese. A cultured operagoer he was, for he talked of many things with those of his neighbors who cared to talk with him, speaking with reasonable fluency in both English and French. The line for the most part was made up of Caruso's countrymen, as is usually the case. There is never room enough to accommodate all of them, either in the topmost of the galleries or in the limited standing room fringing the first floor.

The bread riots continued the next few days. In sections of the east side peddlers' carts were overturned and kerosene was poured on the stocks of certain corner grocers, who were accused by the excited neighbors of having deliberately placed the price of fresh vegetables beyond their reach. And then "Carmen" was announced at the opera house. The line this time was formed at noon, and all afternoon the patient ones who wanted to hear Geraldine Farrar and Caruso sing held their places before the box office. Probably the intake that night was $30,000. In other theaters and cabarets a quarter million was being spent for the evening's entertainment. And probably in all the list of celebrants there was not a single one who had not some time stopped the conversation in his own dining room long enough to insist that so far as he is concerned he would never let any person go hungry. Verily it is a world of strange contrasts and the older it gets, or we get, the stranger it becomes.

Speaking of Miss Farrar reminds us of her recent experience with the reporters. After she had refused to stand in her place in a theater box while the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner," she was besieged with requests for a statement. Was she ashamed of her country? the reporters wanted to know. Or did she dislike the anthem? Would Sid Farrar, her honest old ball tosser of a father, approve of her as a pro-German of this particular breed? Was it temperament or was it merely a fit of stubbornness? To all of which "Gerry" refused to make reply. "My wife," declared Husband Lou Tellegen, who had himself honored, the country of his adoption, and present source of livelihood by standing, "my wife, she is not well, and she has nothing to say." And so Miss Farrar this day is in some circles much more popular with the Germans than she is with the allies. There were, however, quite as many calls for her at the opera as usual. She studied and lived for years in Germany, and there is reason, therefore, for her pro-German sympathies, even if there are none for her expressed contempt for the land of her birth.

When George Cohan agreed to write a play for Chauncey Olcott, which he did a matter of two years ago, and Cohan & Harris agreed to star Mr. Olcott in the play, it was also agreed that, succeed or fail, Mr. Olcott's share of the profits should equal $30,000 for the season—$1,000 a week for thirty weeks. Being busy with other matters Mr. Cohan did not write the play and all last season the genial Chauncey drew his $1,000 a week without doing a tap of work. This was according to agreement, and there was no complaint, but this year, after the Cohan play, "Hon. John O'Brien," was finally produced and proved a failure it evidently occurred to the managers that to pay out another $30,000 would be foolish. So they agreed to revive a former Olcott success, Rachel Crothers' "The Heart of Paddy Whack." Olcott is now playing what is known hereabouts as "the subway circuit"—a series of popular-priced playhouses that are fed by the New York subways in Brooklyn and upper Manhattan—and doing a fine business with it.

BURNS MANTLE.

How often have you wished

That you could get that last hour of sleep—the hour you lost by having to get up to tend the fire?

That the radiators would stop knocking, pounding and hissing?

That you could turn the heat on or off without stooping and without wrist-tiring turning?

The DUNHAM VAPOR HEATING SYSTEM

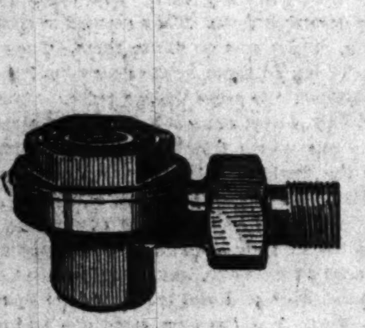
realizes every single one of these wishes. Because of the Dunham Thermostat you get that extra hour of sleep. For it automatically assures any desired temperature at your hour of rising (or any other hour) without your even thinking of the fire.

The Dunham Radiator Trap prevents knocking and pounding in radiators. For it automatically expels the cause of the noise—air and water. It does away with the spurting, hissing air valve.

The Dunham Inlet Valve enables you to turn the heat either on or off, with a single turn, without even stooping.

You can't know real home comfort or coal economy until you install a Dunham. If you are building a new home or moving into another apartment, make sure that it is heated by the Dunham System. A steam fitter can Dunhamize your present heating system at a wonderfully low cost and with little inconvenience to you.

Any Dunham office will be pleased to give your needs individual study, to furnish you precise information as to cost and best methods of installation. Send for our booklet, the "3 H's." It throws a new light on the heating problem.



DUNHAM
Radiator Trap

This device is one of the fundamentals of the DUNHAM VAPOR HEATING SYSTEM. Because it makes impossible the presence of water in radiators, it prevents their pounding and knocking, reduces fuel consumption, causes the radiator to heat evenly and quickly, eliminates the hissing air valve and spurting water.

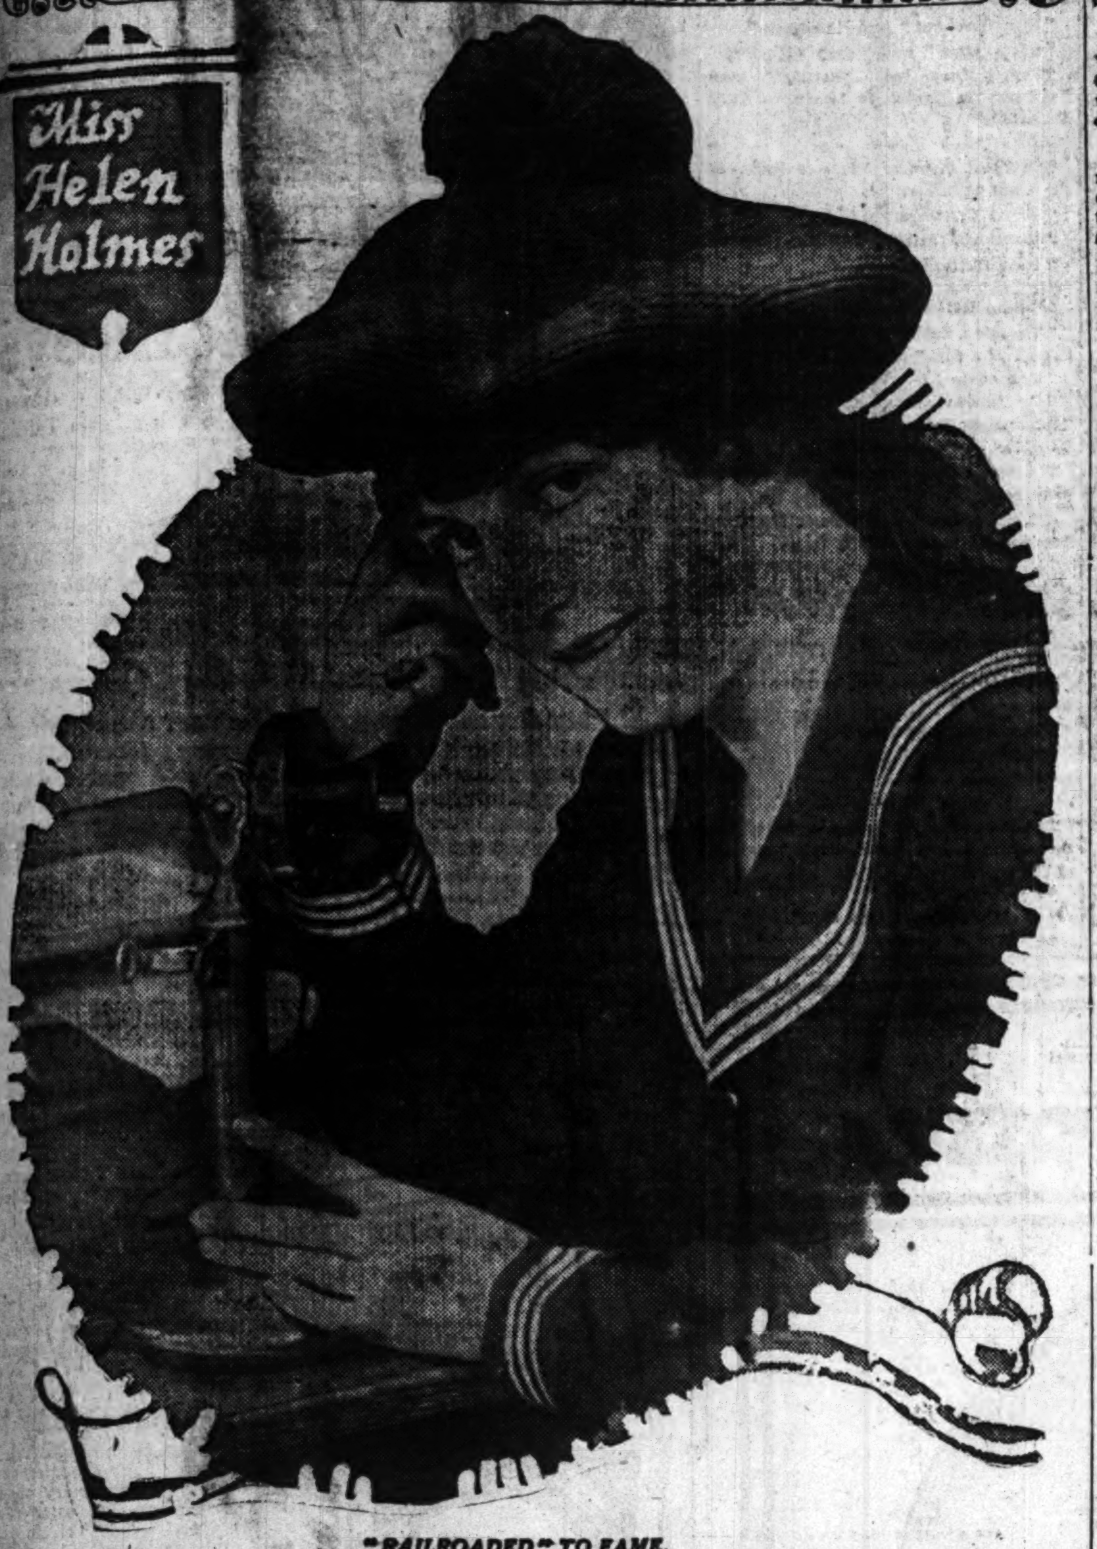
Right off the Reel



"RAILROADED" TO FAME.

This is a late picture of Miss Helen Holmes. Since pictures were in their infancy she has been known as "the railroad girl," because of her daring deeds aboard trains and driving locomotives. No matter what the "stunts" prescribed by story or director, Miss Holmes has been Johnny-on-the-spot. She is just recovering from an attack of illness brought on by work and exposure while filming "The Lass o' the Lumberlands."

BY MAE TINEE.

MARY'S PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM.

MARY PICKFORD RUPP, better known as "Mary Pickford the second," who is Lottie Pickford's small daughter and a niece of "little Mary," is having interesting times planned for her by aunty. Moving picutres have been taken of practically all the events of her little life. They have her in all sorts of cunning baby poses, crying, laughing, being perambulated to important events, and in all sorts of interesting adventures with various members of the screen and stage, not referring to the entire Pickford connections. The reels are to be carefully put away and they will be presented to Mary II. on, say, about her twelfth birthday.

Off the reel, out of the reel, and into the real will come various moving picture stars at the actors' fund benefit, to be given at the Auditorium on Friday. The metamorphosis will take place in connection with the playlet called "The Powers of Peril; or, Who Rocked the Cradle," written by Alexander Leftwich of New York. The scenes of the playlet are laid in a modern studio and are supposed to depict the trials and tribulations of a director. A moving picture and not a moving picture! A playlet and yet not a playlet! In other words, a sort of conglomeration that will undoubtedly be interesting to witness. Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson are two of the Essanay stars who will participate.

If you care to work your way into Crane Wilbur's good graces, don't think that you are do it by telling him he is "so pretty." The gentleman hath balked. He declares that he is not pretty, has never been pretty, and if he ever found out he is pretty will take a leap into the ocean at some place considerably beyond his depth.

Virginia Pearson is said to have had a "$500 rampage" in a coming photoplay. That is, producers declare that they gave her $500 worth of furniture to smash up in a mad scene she pulls off. The high cost of living worries not the vamps, does it?

Fifty prints of "Max Comes Across," Max Linder's first Essanay comedy, are said to have sunk when the steamship Laconia was torpedoed. The prints were destined to be distributed throughout England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland. Regrets.

You may be interested to know that Alice Joyce and Harry Morey will work together in the future as a permanent team. Dash nice.

They say you'll all have to sit up and take notice when Fay Tincher appears in her new spring wardrobe.

Thomas H. Ince has engaged Adele Belgarde and Florence Dagmar to appear in Triangle-Kay Bee plays. Miss Belgarde is a recruit from the "legitimate" stage.

Vola Vale has taken a house for the summer on Ocean Bluff, Long Beach, Cal.

James Cruse, husband of Marguerite Snow, has been engaged by William Fox. Mr. Cruse has been out of pictures for a time, having broken his leg while making a feature production.

Tsuru Aoki, desiring a bulldog and having no birthday of her own in the near future, presented her husband, Sessue Hayakawa, with one on his birthday. "I had to get the dog right away or lose him, so I got him for you, but, of course, he is mine," the lady naively remarked to her spouse.

George Stewart Christie has gone to Metro.

The girls of "Camp Michigamme" have a movie directory all their own. The members of the camp are a bunch of young women who congregate every summer and go into the woods for a regular good time. No men are allowed. Here's the directory:

The Eternal City—Michigamme—Name of the camp.
The Battle Cry of Peace—The Silence Ball.
The Birth of a Nation—July 11, 1917—camp opens.
Still Waters—Brown's bay—Part of lake that is quiet.
The House of a Thousand Scandals—The bungalow.
The Eye of the Night—The C. O. D.—Counselor of the day.
Neptune's Daughter—Miss—Best swimmer.
One Night Out—The night of the snow.
The Morning After—The uninspired staff who write for "Tent Flaps."
The Lure—Swimming.
The Captive God—Emens—Embarrassed youth.
The Midnight Riot—The midnight plunge.
The Eternal Question—Did I get any mail?
The Grasp of Greed—The dinner table.
God's Country and the Woman—Camp and the duchess (Mrs. Powell).
Freckles, or the Girl of the Limberlost—Jince—Red haired, freckled girl.
The Floor Walker—Chuck—Man counselor.
The Music Master—Shirley Wadsworth—Played piano.
The Cup of Life—The pump.
Soulmates—The mislaid shoes.
The Littlest Rebel—Barbara—Smallest girl in camp.
Sweet Kitty Bellairs—Katrina.

Mrs. Sidney Drew, who has a genuine talent for interior decorating, has just had her dressing room at the Yorke-Metro studio done in blue and jonquil yellow.

Having been arrested for speeding, Mae Murray declares she will never speed again. She may not, but——

Zambreno and Dunn have purchased the state rights to "The Black Stork," written by Jack Lait, photoplay story based on the Bollinger baby case, for Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Kentucky. Dr. Harry J. Haiselden himself acts the rôle of Dr. Haiselden in the picture. Ah, but won't the medical societies rave!

An anonymous writer has dedicated the following poem to William S Hart. It's almost as good as I could write:

If I should pass you on the street,
And you should hear me say,
"There goes the devil's double,"
In a criticizin' way,
Right there I reckon I would need
An ambulance and nurse,
A surgeon and a stretcher,
Or perhaps a shiny hearse.

But that's not what I'm sayin',
And be that as it may,
You were not just like the devil
In your recent photoplay,
Why, his costume is mostly nil,
And mighty scant at that.
He wouldn't wear no togs like yours,
Nor a cowboy's fancy hat,

And the badness isn't in you,
Or else your looks deceive,
And that they really do not,
Your friends back here believe.
Of course I wouldn't take you
For a real, rip-roarin' saint,
But what's the use pretendin'
You're a devil, when you ain't?

"I am not married."
"I am not going to get married."
"I do not want to marry you."
"I have one bungalow now, I do not want another."
"I can earn my own living, thank you."
"I live with my mother."
"I am perfectly contented as I am."

This is what Lillian Hamilton has had printed on postal cards. She sends them out to those who would her wed. Gee, must be great to be popular!

"ASK ME!—ASK ME!—ASK ME!"

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

INTERESTED: A letter addressed to Wheeler Oakman, care of the Keystone Comedy company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach him. You are entirely welcome.

M. J.: I shall take great pleasure in mailing you the printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. I think this will give you all the information you desire.

N. C.: Well, my dear, if all the handsome heroes went to war, I suppose there'd be nothing left for us to do but to be Red Cross nurses.

BETTY B.: Following is the cast of "Rumpelstiltskin: Rumpelstiltskin, Clye Tracy; Polly, Elizabeth Burbridge; Prince Cole, Kenneth Browne; Jim Crow, J. Barney Sherry; King Cole, Louis Morrison; Capt. Pilkin, George Fisher; Good Fairy, Margaret Thompson; Simple Simon, H. C. Kern. You are entirely welcome.

D. G. L.: I'd tell you the story of my life "in one gasp" if I could, but it takes three gasps to tell it in and I haven't that many this morning. I'm sorry.

VIVIAN: Following is the cast of "The Sign of the Poppy": Alvan Marston, Hobart Henley; Chang, Hobart Henley; Edith Marston, Gertrude Selby; Helen Durant, Mina Cunard; Jerry Marston, Wilber Higby; Rex Durant, Robert Clarke; Hop Li, Garland Briden. You're entirely welcome.

MISS J. G. F.: I wish I could express in words just how much pleasure your letter gave me. I couldn't, however, so I won't try. I'll just say thank you, and I want you to know that I mean it with all my heart.

M. E. C.: Billie Burke is 28 years old. It was in August of 1907 that she came to the United States from London. I cannot tell you the exact dates when she appeared in Chicago with John Drew.

MARION E.: I have referred your letter to Miss Doris Blake, who will, I'm sure, give you competent advice.

READER: Marguerite Clarke has brown hair. Billie Burke's hair is red-dish gold. I understand that the latter will appear on the stage in the near future.

F. E. M.: According to my information Lou Tellegen was born in Amsterdam, Holland. His father is said to have been a Greek general and his mother a Dutch dancer.

MOVIE NUT: O, call yourself not so! I'm awfully glad you brought your courage up to the point of writing. Harold Lockwood is not married. Neither is May Allison. Yes, where does "friend get that stuff" that he's homely? Surely. Twenty-nine. Jack Pickford is not a half brother. He's a regular brother. Harold Lockwood and May Allison are with Yorke-Metro, Hollywood, Cal. Marguerite Clarke is with Famous players, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. Florence La Badie is with Thanhouser, New Rochelle, N. Y. No, she's been playing right along. Not a bit of bother. You're a nice child, write again.

ARBUCKLE IT: Mr. Arbuckle, I'm delegated to inform you, will send you his picture without money or price. In fact, he says he would be insulted if any one should send him a quarter. Better not insult him; you know he's awfully big!

THE TWINS: Following is the cast of "The Americano": Blaze Derringer, Douglas Fairbanks; Presidente Hernando de Castalar, Spottiswoode Aitken; Alberto de Castille, Tote du Crow; Salza Espada, Carl Stockdale; Col. Gargaras, Charlie Stevens; Señorita Juana de Castille, Alma Rueben; Señora de Castille, Lillian Langdon; Harold White, Tom Wilson. Y'wekkim.

GISH GIRL: Frank Bennett will Dorothy Gish's leading man in a ing feature.

INQUISITIVE: In "Less T Dust" the man who played Mary Pickford was David P with the Artchaft company avenue, New York. I welcome.

In the two issues this week are shown:

Number 18

FOOD RIOTS IN NEW YORK.

Voicing violent and shrill protests against the high cost of food necessities, thousands of women and children recently invaded City Hall park, New York, clamoring to see the mayor. Police reserves were called out.

Number 19

'TWIXT BENDER ET ALEXANDER.

Much interest was aroused in Camden, N. J., by a clay pigeon shooting contest. Among the famous to contest were Chief Bender and Grover C. Alexander of baseball fame. They proved they could shoot as well as "Play ba-a-all!"

Are You Married? Expect to Be? Hope to Be?

By all means see this series of big, intensely important pictures—

Is Marriage Sacred?

No other problems are half so interesting as the problems of love and marriage.

All the perils, temptations and beautiful possibilities of married life I am featuring in a series of photo-dramas, "Is Marriage Sacred?"

Each deals, in a frank but wholesome way, with some different phase of the vital problems upon which your happiness depends. Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew and Sydney Ainsworth play the leads. You can see one of these thrilling, startlingly life-like pictures each week. Each is an absolutely complete story.

Singers and Things to Sing and other items of ock, of the opinion

, is bent not only upon with it, but also upon go like it. Even the fact r ago, our celebration of enary of Shakspere con-comic-opera ruling on the of the plays does not deter

a good showman's desire to the week as attractive as possi-that considerable part of the c whose interest in Mahler's comitions does not extend beyond the venth symphony, Mr. Stock engaged Miss Gluck with regard for her talents as both singer and salesman: that Madame Matzenauer may serve his artistic purpose just as well is not complete consolation when it is considered that she is not as yet an excitement at the box-office. And Miss Gluck's being in Mr. Stock's week could affect the financial outcome of the North-Shore enterprise favorably, if at all.

Miss Gluck is to be next week's soloist with the Orchestra, with an appearance in both parts of the program. Zimbalist, too, returns soon: he and Julia Claussen are to be the soloists on the 25th instant with the New York Symphony. Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch are to appear together in the Orchestra program of week-after-next.

Matzenauer, who was this season's Isolde with Campanini, will be the Brangäne of a Metropolitan performance tomorrow night, with Gadski in the soprano part: the former is one of the few singers in the world able to qualify in both rôles. She, too, is to sing again in Chicago this month: she will, on the afternoon of the 25th, sing in the Auditorium as a contributor to a concert for the House of the Good Shepherd. Father Finn and his choristers will take part.

Mary Garden's film-maker sends information that she is going back to Paris merely to obtain the things to wear for the films, and will return before the end of April to take up work in the studio and, presumably, "on location."

Farrar is to atone for remaining seated while everybody else in a big audience stood for "The Star-Spangled Banner": she, herself, is to sing the anthem in a concert. Her Thaïs, despite what the London actors call a "bad press," is drawing: the second performance was a sell-out. The music-reporter of the Evening Sun said that the impersonation, for completeness, required a little more stress and a little less dress.

De Koven's opera of "The Canterbury Pilgrims" is to be mounted Thursday night in the Metropolitan. It will be Gatti-Casazza's fifth venture with the vernacular: he has already given English performances of "Mona," "Cyrano de Bergerac," "The Pipe of Desire," and "Madeleine." The singers cast in the De Koven piece [the libretto is Percy Mackaye's—a rewrite of his like-named play] have not, from accounts, been making it easy for the ex-Chicagoan: their trade-name for the work in rehearsal is "The Cranberry Pill."

The list of singers for the meticulous Mackaye's English includes Margarete Ober, Johannes Sembach, Paul Althouse, Albert Reiss, Max Bloch, and the big Ruysdael. Edith Mason, whose native tongue is English, also will be in the cast, as the Prioress: the others belong to the imported Wagner wing of the Metropolitan's roster.

Gatti-Casazza has taken for next-season mounting a ballet by a Bostonian whose name, when he spells it out, is Henry Franklin Belknap Gilbert. It is called "The Dance in Place Congo," and is based on an episode in one of George W. Cable's books about the Creoles and New Orleans.

Giordano, whose "Andrea Chénier" was one of the season's Opera novelties, figures, as to his "Siberia," in Campanini's plans for next season. Another Giordano piece, "Fedora," was given a slovenly mounting in 1913-'14: Muratore would like, he says, to try it again in proper conditions—involving, among other items, a first-class singer of the name-part.

Jeska Swats [this is, at least, a phonetic transcription of the name] is to be among next season's new singers under Campanini: she is a contralto; and, if possessed even of a half-way talent, she will be welcome. This season's company was a cripple in the matter of contraltos and mezzos save for the few operas in which Claussen took part. Jessie Christian, who in the illness of Galli-Curci sang Marguerite de Valois for the single performance of "The Huguenots," also has been engaged.

Galli-Curci has been heard as near to Manhattan Island as Albany. The New York World printed about her singing in a local concert something written, presumably, by the staff critic: it is not probable that the World proconsuls at Albany include a specialist. His opinion is that "she is not yet a flawless singer," but that, "all-in-all, she is a gifted artist who, though already of high rank, holds promise for the near future of the highest character." He thinks she erred in playing her own accompaniments for "The Last Rose" and "Home! Sweet Home!" A Detroit critic listened to her last week, and decided that her fame was the creation of hysterical reporters for the Chicago papers.

James G. MacDermid is a resident troubador in definite possession of the right to be happy, so far as happiness is an exudate of success. Both Galli-Curci and John McCormack have taken songs of his making. She has written to tell him that, after she has made herself known on the circuit with standard matter, she will put his "The Magic of Your Voice" on her ready list: he wrote it, words and music, for her. McCormack some time ago accepted his "The House o' Dream," which has words by Kendall Banning. The great bravura and the Irish tenor are in easy control of a bit more than sixty-six percent of the song-recital field: the explement is Gluck's.

Concerts and Recitals of the Week

HARRY WEISBACH, concertmeister of the Orchestra, will be its soloist in the twenty-second program, Friday afternoon and Saturday night: his medium will be Spohr's eighth concerto, "Gesangscene," long absent from the organization's bills. The symphony will be Brahms' third, last given in 1914-15; and other matters listed by Mr. Stock are Cherubini's "Die Abencerragen" overture, Grétry's ballet-suite from "Céphale and Procris," and a new piece, an elegy, by Dr. Felix Borowski, whose musical activities in Chicago are well known and multiangled.

The eighth Pop will be on Thursday night, with a program made up of Weber's overture to "Oberon," Schubert's march in E-flat, the Dance of the Happy Spirits from Gluck's "Orpheus and Euridyce," Grieg's suite called "Sigurd Jorsalfar," four excerpts from Tschiakowsky's "The Sleeping Beauty," Massenet's Scène-Religieuse from the suite called "Les Erinnyes," and two Slavonic dances by Dvořák. Mr. Quensel will have solo opportunity with the flute in the Gluck number, and Mr. Steindel for the 'cello in the Massenet.

TODAY:

3:00—American Symphony Orchestra in seventh concert of Glenn Dillard Gunn's series of ten: Della Thal, pianist; Charles W. Clark, baritone; and Richard Wagner, 'cellist, are the soloists of a program made up of the writings of American composers. Grand Opera-House.

PLAYING CARDS

Put "Pep" Into ALL Card Games

Play any card game with Telbax: rhum, bridge, pinochle, five hundred, hearts, poker—any game at all. You'll have more excitement, more genuine, good-natured, wholesome fun than you ever imagined possible in card playing. Every minute, every play is full of tense, gripping interest when you use the Telbax cards.

TELBAX Hint How the Faces Look But It's Hard to Tell What They Say

The big cross on the Telbax back is a suggestion of the face value of the card. But it's only a suggestion. Few people can read it correctly. The difference in the crosses is so very small that it's easy to make mistakes. So Telbax are fair to everyone. Nobody has any advantage.

Brightest Players Make Funny Mistakes

The more you know about Telbax crosses, the more they'll double-cross you. No one yet has mastered the Telbax backs. Most expert players have failed to memorize them perfectly.

Standard Faces—Standard Size

The faces of Telbax are just the same as ordinary playing cards—same suits, same denominations, same size. Play any game with them.

No Backs Like TELBAX

There can be no substitute for Telbax. Your druggist, department store, stationery, cigar or sporting goods dealer can supply No. 1 grade Telbax. If not, make sure of Telbax by sending us the coupon and 25 cents.

SHIRLEY MASON in PASSION

EVE LESLIE BREAKS THE HOME TIES

EVE LESLIE is leaving home. She has been offered a position at Coney Island. Leonidas, a great strong, handsome athlete, "the perfect physical specimen", wants her to come. He promises her "opportunities".

At Coney Island, Eve has a terrible awakening from her dreams. She learns that the true love of Adam Moore, the lad she has thrown over, is infinitely sweeter than the kind of love Leonidas offers her.

See Eve Leslie learn her bitter lesson in "Passion", one of the seven thrilling plays in the wonderful McClure Series, Seven Deadly Sins.

The Germination Test

A Corner in the Flower Trial

Noting Peas

Where Seeds with a Pedigree are Bred

OUTSIDE the bustling, hustling automobile city of Detroit—out in the quiet countryside where Father Time seems to linger and lose some of the mad urge from his stride—is the beautiful farm of Oakview.

Here, where the air is clean and sweet and the mellow sunshine is like unalloyed gold, where the bees hum and the wholesome smell of new turned earth fills the nostrils, is a wonderful organization of men engrossed in a business of far-spreading influence.

Oakview Farm, to the eye of the visitor, is a mammoth and luxuriant garden of 684 acres. Here, each in its season, in the glory of their greatest perfection, are thousands on thousands of rows of the finest garden vegetables and flowers in wonderful variety and profusion.

Why Ferry's Seeds Are Preferred

Oakview is more than a farm and more than a garden. It is the breeding place and trial ground where the millions of flower and garden seeds, grown all over the world for D. M. Ferry & Co., are tested for vigor, trueness to type, productiveness and quality.

Ferry's Seeds own a wonderful reputation among professional and amateur gardeners all over this country. They are preferred, year after year, because they grow, because they produce generously and luxuriantly and because their flowers or fruit are of exceptionally fine quality.

This name has been won for Ferry's Seeds by the great care and patience and study practiced in seed selection and testing at Oakview Farm.

Almost every country of this earth, almost every belt of climate is peculiarly adapted to produce some certain plant, some vegetable, some flower in its highest degree of perfection.

England is famous, among other things, for her garden peas and turnips. In the ancient kingdom of Anjou on the River Loire in France is a fertile valley where wonderful radishes, beets, celery and carrots grow and flowers of various kinds reach the pinnacle of perfection.

FERRY'S SEEDS

Where Some Ferry Seeds Originate

Denmark's cool climate is especially favorable to many kinds of vegetable seeds, while in Holland near the Zuyder Zee are grown flowers of rare beauty and quality.

Idaho and Montana grow some of the finest peas. The Middle West is the home of the most delicious sweet corn. Michigan produces some extra fine types of tomatoes, melons and cucumbers. Sun-kissed California brings forth peerless types of crisp lettuce, glorious sweet peas and the humble onion. Asters grow magnificently on the shores of the Great Lakes. Colorado and Kansas contribute those wonderful melons, the Emerald Gem Musk Melon and the Admiral Togo.

It is in these special places that the crops of Ferry's Seeds are grown. Scattered around the world, there are 33,496 acres of seed farms growing vegetable and flower seeds of special quality strains for D. M. Ferry & Co., under Ferry direction, to meet the requirements of the Ferry ideal.

It is to preserve this ideal, to perpetuate pure-bred seeds, to reduce the loss sustained by gardeners from planting mongrel seeds, that Oakview Farm is maintained.

To Oakview come the choice seeds grown for Ferry in the world's other garden spots. Here they are first tested for germination—the power to live.

In little boxes of earth are planted as many "tests" as are thought necessary to indicate the germination of any given lot of seeds. A hundred seeds are planted. When the sprouts appear, they are counted and the average of all the tests is taken. The percentage secured is credited to that entire lot of seed. More than 60,000 viability tests are made at Oakview annually.

But the seeds of a weed will grow. Seed of poor strain will reproduce. Quality of production, trueness to a perfect type, is the supreme test. So, after the germination tests in the Oakview greenhouse more seeds of the same lot are planted in the Oakview trial gardens.

Proving Ferry Quality

These gardens are plotted and each planting is staked, numbered and dated. Each individual plant, when it appears, is watched. A fixed standard of quality is established at Oakview for every kind of vegetable and flower, and when the first fruits or bloom of each planting are mature, the men in charge go into the gardens with note-cards and standard records and note every attribute of quality and vigor of plant and product.

Here again a rating is made which determines whether the lot of seeds represented by each planting is worthy of the Ferry label, or only fit for fodder for the sheep or fuel for the boilers.

Oakview Farm is a commercial institution. It is maintained to make Ferry's Seeds a commercial advantage to the thousands of farmers and gardeners who depend on Ferry quality to bring them a just reward for their investment of money, time and labor.

Ferry's True to Type

To the buyer of Ferry's Seeds the slight extra cost, made necessary by the great extra care in preserving trueness to type, is more than equalized by the greater certainty of satisfying returns. Ferry types or standards are the results of working from seed generation to seed generation for a long period of years.

And this is why Ferry's Seeds are the safe and sane investment for the planter. They are pedigreed, selected seed that have been tried and tested from every angle of human knowledge.

If you are interested in a garden of any size or kind, you will plant for greater certainty of perfect success by going to your dealer (all good dealers sell Ferry's Seeds) and securing your seed supplies.

Write for Ferry's Seed Annual—a list of seed of greater surety. We will be particularly glad if you use the coupon.

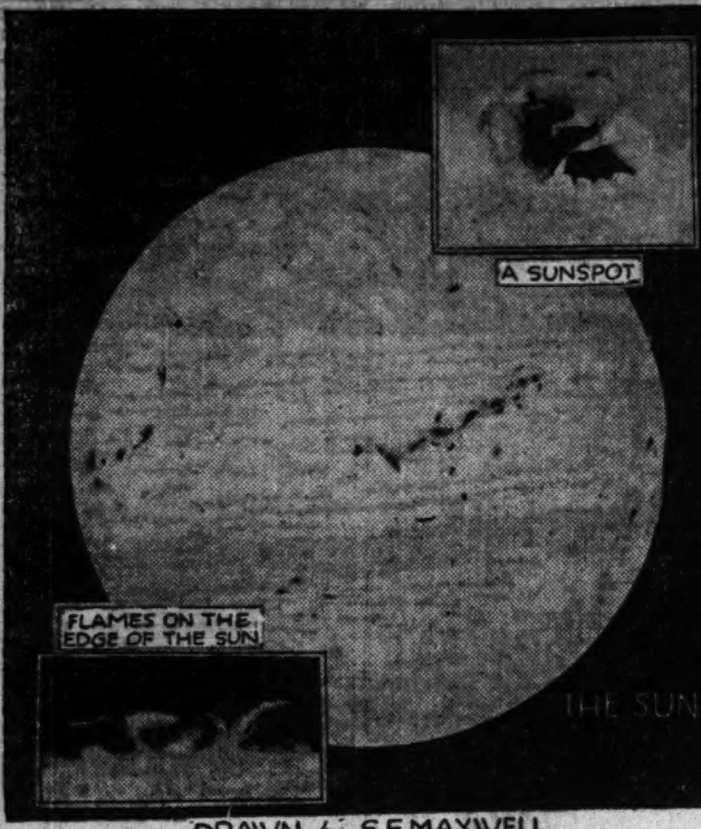
ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



A SUNSPOT
FLAMES ON THE EDGE OF THE SUN
THE SUN

DRAWN by S.F. MAXWELL

THE SUN.

THE sun is a star which has progressed further in the evolution of a star than Sirius and which has not progressed so far as Aldebaran. As stars in their evolution grow colder, the question of the sun's heat arises as one which is theoretically interesting to life on the earth.

The theory of inorganic evolution decrees a time when a star shall have lost its heat. When this star loses its heat or loses so much of it as to reduce temperatures below what organic life, as now constituted, can endure, then the period of organic evolution on this earth has reached its end.

By various hypotheses there has been endeavor to explain the sources of the sun's heat, and, having explained them, to estimate the probable duration of the sun as a heat giving body. At first it was thought that chemical combustion produced the heat. That idea disappeared in the face of a little calculation. A mass the size of the sun could not sustain its supply of heat by chemical combustion for 5,000 years.

The next theory was that the energy was maintained by meteorites falling into the sun. That could not be maintained because belief in a sufficient number of meteors could not be maintained.

The theory of contraction from a nebular state was suggested and that theory prevailed for a long time, but geologists could not reconcile what they found in the earth to what the astronomers maintained for the sun.

By contraction the sun could not have maintained its heat long enough for the geologists to account for evidence they found indicating that the earth was much older than it could possibly have been. The astronomers wanted to give the geoligists and biologists 25,000,000 years and the geologists and biologists wanted not less than 100,000,000.

It was impossible for the theory of contraction, no matter from what remote distances the diffused elements which compose the sun were drawn in the evolution from a nebulous state, to give any such period of existence to the earth. Therefore the theory of the sun's heat had to be changed. The present theory is based on radio-activity. The sun has great quantities of helium. It is a product of radio-active substances which generate great heat. It is one of the products of the disintegration of radium and uranium, and their disintegration is accompanied by the production of enormous heat.

Radio-activity is accepted as explaining the sun's heat at present. The theory is not free from questions, but it gives the earth a sufficient time to account for the evidences of age and it also gives it a promise of continuance for the development of life.

The sun is a globe of white hot gases, almost 1,000,000 miles across. It has no surface of the kind that furnishes us the "face of the earth," but only encircling banks of rushing fire clouds, dense in the interior, and becoming progressively rarer in the outer strata. The inner layers are subjected to heavy pressure and intense heat, and radiate a white, almost blue, light. The outer atmospheres are cooler and are resplendent in rainbow colors, which modify the raw white glare into our familiar daylight. Sunlight, compared with the usual starlight, is yellow, about the color of Capella.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH

The West Window.

LIFE is tested by its west window view. The east window is the common casement for all optimism and aspiration, hope and faith. It receives the sunrise. It does not know experience. It opens upon expectation. All east windows are alike. West windows are as different each from the other as the folk who sit by them and through them watch the sunset are different each from the other.

The east window expects experience; the west window has known it. The west window has the day in retrospect, and its view is placid as the experience has been justifiable. It may have contained pain, but it has known joy. It has brought a content and acceptant person to the colors of the sunset, satisfied to have had the day—in the real sense of the west window, to have had the life—and finding in the glory of its end no regrets for the splendor of its beginning or the brightness of its meridian.

The day is tested at the west window at sundown, the year at the west window when the woods are brown, life at the west window when the meridian has been crossed.

Willow catkins have broken through their shells, buds are swelling, sap is starting, and the east window is ajar to receive the fragrance of returning life. It will open to renewed hope and aspiration, illusion, and anticipation, but the test is at the west window.

NASH Jeffery MOTORS

It Sounds Too Good To Be True

YOU have read a lot of statements telling what motor cars will do. And in many cases you have taken these statements with a grain of salt, believing them to be the enthusiastic brain children of the man who writes them.

Well, here is one thing that you can always do—you can call for proof. Ask the motor car man to put the cards on the table face up. And then pick the car that lives up to the promises that have been made for it.

Here's the point. We stand ready to put the Jeffery Six through any test you desire to show you that what we say about this car is true. You can think of many things that you would like to have a motor car do. Maybe there is a hill or a bit of bad going that you would like to see negotiated on high; or perhaps you have never really seen a car throttle down to three miles an hour on high and leap into fast going without a quiver in less time than it takes to tell it. A Jeffery Six will do these things and many others.

At the same time this car will perform day in and day out with less trouble than any other car in its class. Over 2,000 Chicago Jeffery owners will bear out this statement.

Jeffery perfection is due to the fact that it is built almost in its entirety in the Nash factory. From bearings to bodies it is their conscientious product. No car at anywhere near its price can be called factory built in the same sense of the word as it is applied to the Jeffery Six.

The fact that the Jeffery costs as little as it does is due to the wizard production ability of the Nash Motors Company, one of the greatest organizations for the production of motor cars in the world.

We will put the Jeffery Six through its paces alongside of any car on the row selling for within $200 of the Jeffery price. Try it out for yourself.

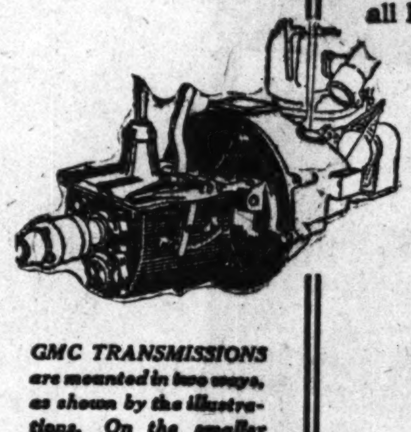
TRUCK TALK
No. 8

ALL GMC Trucks except the two smallest models have four-speed TRANSMISSIONS —four speeds forward and one reverse.

We are convinced, that the four-speed TRANSMISSION is essential on heavy duty trucks, and know that GMC Trucks, because of the four-speed TRANSMISSION, possesses many advantages over all heavy trucks of the three-speed type.



GMC Trucks are more flexible—running in any speed there is less strain on the motor, clutch, shafts and other parts. They possess greater pulling power under all conditions—in hard going, bad ruts or holes, GMC Trucks pull thru with less trouble, effort and strain.

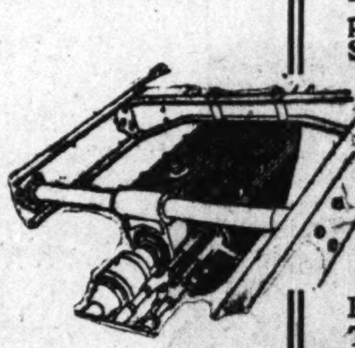
Because of the four-speed TRANSMISSION, GMC Trucks are more economical to operate—they are easier to operate—are more dependable—require less attention, and cost less to maintain.

Gears and shafts are of nickle alloy steel, heat-treated and hardened. The teeth have an unusually hard surface, are tough, strong, and will resist wear and shock.

There are no "cluster gears", that is, two or more gears made from one solid piece. The Unit-gear type as used in all GMC TRANSMISSIONS—is more satisfactory. In case of damage to any one gear it can be replaced at nominal cost—it is not necessary to replace the entire gear system.

Timken bearings are used thruout. They are conveniently located, and are adjustable. There is a positive interlock built into the transmission which makes it impossible to engage the gears of more than one speed at a time, impossible to unintentionally go into reverse.

GMC TRANSMISSIONS are mounted in two ways, as shown by the illustrations. On the smaller models we have the UNIT POWER PLANT construction, and on the larger, heavier models, the INDEPENDENT TRANSMISSION. In each case the TRANSMISSION is the same in type and construction, and differs only in size and method of mounting.



All GMC TRANSMISSIONS are simple—trouble-proof (we have never had any serious TRANSMISSION trouble of any sort on any model)—gear-shifting is easy. There is no grinding or chatter. The gears engage and run quietly and smoothly. The transmission is readily accessible, can be taken down or gotten to easily. Adjustments can be readily made. Gears run in a bath of oil, and are self-lubricating,—the TRANSMISSION requires only reasonable attention.

From the standpoint of owner and driver, the GMC TRANSMISSION is without question the supreme truck transmission on the market today.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Time to Overhaul Car, and Here's How to Do It

By John De Long.

THE time is at hand for the motorist to begin planning his spring drive against the forces of General Depreciation, who during each winter campaign decimates the ranks of perfectly conditioned cars. Winter weather is hard on automobiles, tires, and accessories, and in order to insure efficient service and the consequent pleasure derived from driving a well tuned machine, the car should be overhauled and necessary adjustments and replacements made.

If many serious mechanical defects, such as loose main or connecting rod bearings, are found to exist, or if the clutch thrust bearings are badly worn, the safest way is to have some expert mechanic attend to them, but if the motor is in fairly good condition and if the owner is of a mechanical and economical turn of mind, he may be able to save the price of an egg or possibly a potato by doing the work himself. If the motor knocks it should be comparatively easy to tell whether the trouble is due to accumulations of carbon or to loose rod bearings. Nowadays it hardly pays one to go to the trouble and expense of having the carbon scraped out. Take the car to almost any good garage and have the carbon quickly and cheaply burned out by the oxygen process. Carbon in the cylinders means loss of compression, low power, and excessive consumption of gasoline.

The advice given in this article applies both to the cars that have been laid up over winter and to those that have been kept in commission during the cold months.

Let us suppose that the owner decides to do most of the work himself. First of all the garage should be made ready to receive the car. Cleanliness is of prime importance. The supply of tools should be gone over and the necessary articles laid out where they may easily be reached. Before work is started the machine should be made clean all over. Have the body and chassis washed. Pull the car out into the open air, and with a pail of gasoline and a good sized squirt gun and brush go over the motor and driving gear and remove all grease and dirt. Go to a supply house and obtain an assortment of cotter pins, washers, gaskets, bolts, and nuts, which will come in handy.

Remove the plug from the bottom of the crank case and allow the old oil to run out. Then take a couple of quarts of kerosene and pour it alternately into the cylinders until the fluid is used up. Then turn the motor over with the starter for a short time and allow the kerosene to work down through the moving parts. The gear case also should be drained and flushed with kerosene. While the cover is off the gear case feel of the gears carefully to ascertain if any of them have become worn or chipped off at the edges. If the gears are badly worn or do not mesh properly they should be replaced with new ones, but it is likely this work would have to be done by a mechanic.

Poor compression and loss of power may be due to leaky valves or worn out piston rings. It is easy to test for leaks around the piston rings. Before the oil is removed from the crank case take an oil can and, with the motor running, apply the oil freely around the spark plugs, inlet manifold connection, and other joints. Wherever there is a leak little bubbles will appear. Often leaks appear around the cylinder plugs, and may be stopped by using new washers or by applying a thin coating of graphite to the threads. Sometimes it is a good thing to apply shellac to the gaskets, but only a little should be used. When in doubt at any time the work of overhauling is being done, play safe by consulting an expert. If any difficult repair is found necessary, do not attempt it yourself unless absolutely certain of your ability to do it successfully.

In most cases it is necessary to grind the valves, for in these days of poor gasoline the valves soon get in bad condition. If the owner does the work himself he will need a valve spring lifter and grinder, which may be obtained from any automobile supply house. Repair shops usually charge about $5 for grinding a set of valves. If the owner considers himself proficient enough to remove the cylinder head, care should be used in replacing it. One nut should be tightened slightly, after which one on an opposite corner should be treated the same way, and so on until all are slightly set. Then go over all and make them tight. If one side is tightened more than the other the head may become sprung. Before applying the cylinder head it should be made clean. The gasket also should be wiped carefully.

All bolts and nuts of the motor and chassis should be gone over and tightened, and wherever a washer is missing it should be replaced. The radiator and its connections must be attended to. Drain out the radiator and fill it with a solution of washing soda and boiling water. Let this stand for a few minutes to soften deposits that are sure to have collected and then drain out, after which refill with clean water. Drain this water off to remove the soda, which would rot the hose connections, and later fill the radiator for use. Leaks often appear around the pump connections, which should be packed with asbestos rope covered with graphite. If the radiator itself leaks, do not attempt to repair it, but take it to the proper place and have the work done right.

The ignition system should be carefully gone over to determine if there are any breaks in the wiring. Look out for corroded terminals, loose connections, and any places where the insulation may have become chafed and worn through. Adhesive tape may be wound around any worn places. If there are any defects in the starting and lighting system it is not likely that the owner will have much success in remedying them. Better be on the safe side and have this work done by an ignition expert. See that the battery is in good condition. Test the electrolyte, or battery fluid, for specific gravity. This may be done with a hydrometer syringe, which costs $1. The instrument should indicate at least 1,280. If the reading is below that figure the battery is not fully charged. All battery terminals should be cleaned. After cleaning put a little vaseline on the terminals to prevent corrosion.

Inspect the clutch and ascertain its condition. If it has been slipping, apply Fuller's earth or neatsfoot oil lightly to the surface of the leather. If the clutch is faced with fabric, a little kerosene will remove the accumulation of oil and dirt. Take every grease cup on the car and fill each one, after which give them a half turn down. Universal joints should be cleaned and repacked with either graphite or grease. Take the cover off the differential and pack it with grease. The braking system must not be overlooked during the overhauling process. If the brake bands are found to be worn they should be replaced with new ones. All joints connecting the brake pedal with the bands should be well oiled. Take care of the emergency brake also.

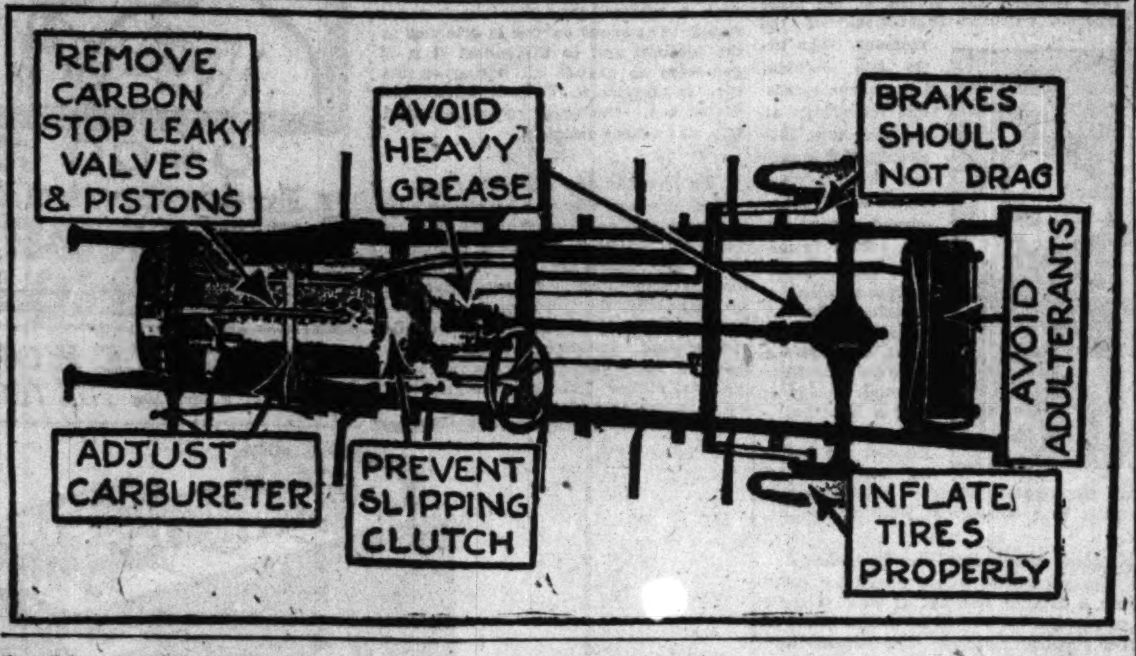
Jack up the rear wheels and find out if the brakes drag. Turn the wheels, and if they scrape or drag take a flat tool or screw driver, force it between the drum and the brake, and loosen it up. Take an oil can or squirt gun and put kerosene on the fabric. This will have a tendency to make the brakes hold better. Test the brakes on the road by getting up a speed of about twenty miles an hour and then putting the pedal down hard. If both wheels do not slide at the same time the brakes are not evenly adjusted and the car will skid on wet surfaces. Adjust both sides evenly. Go over the steering gear. See that all excess play is taken up and oil where necessary. Jack up car and test each wheel for side play. If any is found have the play taken up. If wheels are not lined up properly the tires will become damaged. The lining up work should be done by an expert.

Tires should be well looked after. If possible they should be removed from the rims, to which graphite should be applied to prevent the tires from rusting on. Inspect the tires carefully and wherever cracks or holes are found they should be cleaned with gasoline and filled with a preparation made for the purpose. Valves are cheap and new ones should be put into each tube as a safeguard against slow leaks. Keep tires well inflated to insure good mileage.

After the job has been completed the motorist should check to make sure that everything is right and that nothing has been overlooked. Take the car out and run it for a few miles. It is likely that the carburetor will have to be adjusted, and it is a good plan to have this done if possible at one of the service stations maintained by the various carburetor concerns. If everything is satisfactory take the machine to a paint shop for the finishing touches, but do not have this work done too early, as the spring rains, with the resultant mud, will be likely to spot the fresh paint. In every case where a car is newly painted it should be given a long rinsing with clear, cold water to set the paint.

TROUBLES THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING

Will Get You If You Don't Pay a Little Attention to Preparedness.



Gossip of the Auto Trade

To facilitate Chicago deliveries, the Marathon Tire and Rubber company has opened a warehouse at 1458 Michigan avenue. A new type of ribbed tread, guaranteed for 5,000 miles, is its most recent innovation.

Thomas J. Hay, Chicago Chandler distributer, is urging a plan for marking the roads of Illinois according to a system similar to those used for city streets. "Country roads," he says, "should be identified. Until we do this we are depriving the farmer of the privilege of a definite geographical location. Moreover, we are sending the motorist out to follow blind trails and cheating him of an opportunity to travel over better highways because he does not know how to locate them. A commission should be appointed to take charge of this work. We could have two central highways, one running east and west, known as Central road, and the other north and south, called Central highway. Thoroughfares running east from Central highway could be named First Road East, Second Road East, etc. And so the whole system could be carried out." Sounds interesting, doesn't it?

The Southern club of Chicago at a meeting held last week joined the long list of organizations which have indorsed by resolution the good roads platform of the Illinois Highway Improvement association. It "resolved" further that part of the federal aid money coming to Illinois should be spent on the Dixie highway.

The price of the new Doble steam car has been fixed at $2,500 for both touring and roadster models. Bodies will show slight variations from the cars exhibited at the New York show and the Chicago salon, and the wheel base will be somewhat longer. Deliveries, it is announced, will be begun in the fall.

A remarkably complete summary of available information concerning the 114 makes of motor trucks sold in the United States is the 1917 edition of "Motor Trucks of America," issued the other day by the B. F. Goodrich company of Akron, O. The volume is designed for free distribution among users or possible users of commercial vehicles.

The Smith Motor Truck corporation has acquired what has been known as the Goodyear building, at Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. The structure is being remodeled and all its six floors will be used in the marketing of Smith Form-a-Trucks.

The Barley Motor Car company, builder of the Roamer, packed up last week preparatory to moving, en masse, from Streator, Ill., to Kalamazoo, Mich. C. Y. Kenworthy, the Chicago distributor, expects to occupy the new Roamer building at 2240 Michigan avenue by March 15.

New arrivals in the motor world include the Belmont six, manufactured by a Toledo concern and featuring unusually complete equipment and a wide choice of body design and finish, and the Ben-Hur roadster, a light car built in Chicago. The makers of the latter announce that they "are not connected with any Ben-Hur company of similar name."

The first issue of Nash News, a new house organ of the makers of the Jeffery, appeared last week.

Franklin P. Adams, the B. L. T. of the New York Tribune, has bought a Franklin. "They'll be calling him Air Cooled P. Adams now," remarked a friend when he heard about it.

Robert C. Bruce, a moving picture man, is touring the United States in a Mitchell, making scenic films for the theaters. He reports that the Florida swamps have been completely vanquished by his car.

THE BEAUTY OF QUALITY

ANY car looks beautiful in its shining newness; but if your car is going to be a joy forever, the beauty must be more than skin deep.

The beauty of a Studebaker car goes beneath its beautiful paint and varnish work, beneath its conservative, dignified lines; and beneath its luxuriously soft upholstery.

The beauty that makes the Studebaker car a joy forever is the beauty of quality—the quality that gives durability, that gives uninterrupted usage, that makes your car as good at 50,000 miles as it was at 5,000 miles.

Studebaker has spent four years in refining, improving and perfecting the mechanical design, selecting the right material, developing the right manufacturing organization.

Improvements suggested by 300,000 Studebaker cars in service all over the world are all summed up in the new Series 18 Studebaker.

Experience has built perfection into the Studebaker.

The great resources of Studebaker have made it possible to manufacture every part, or practically every part, in the Studebaker factories; therefore the car is uniformly excellent throughout—not just an assembled car, no stronger than its weakest link.

Then, too, the Studebaker car is made by a company that you can depend on for service; for square dealing; for new parts at a reasonable price, years from now if you need them.

With many people a motor car is one of the principal investments they make. Studebaker must have the good will of these investors, just as it has had for years.

GOODRICH
BLACK SAFETY TREAD TIRES
Must Make Good

WHEN a Goodrich Black Safety Tread Tire is sent from the factory of the B. F. Goodrich Company, it carries Goodrich's avowal that it is free from imperfection of material and workmanship.

It is the best non-skid fabric tire, the oldest, largest, most skillful rubber manufacturer can make.

It must render service worthy of the good name it bears—the high service Goodrich requires of it.

If, as occurs in rarest instance, it fails, the B. F. Goodrich Company is more eager than you that its shortcoming be made good.

Autos Compete with Railroads in Oklahoma

BARTLESVILLE, Okla., March 3.—[Special.]—Regularly scheduled passenger and freight service by automobile over hard surfaced roads! Fred Brewer, a structural steel agent, is the father of such a plan, by which it is proposed to connect Bartlesville with Tulsa.

Automobiles now beat train service in hours over dirt roads between the two points, touching by the way every town in the two counties that lie between these important oil, manufacturing, and smelting centers. While the hard surfaced road is not a reality, the oil fields, farms, and commercial sales plans are already being bettered by the use of taxi transportation.

Washington county, with the hard surfaced road fever that is taking all eastern Oklahoma by storm, recently defeated a proposed big bond issue to hard surface a road across the county. But it was merely a matter of figuring. The voters thought the road should be built, but did not like the plan as proposed by its promoters. At the coming spring election the county will again vote on a road bond issue. It will be for $800,000 for a stretch of highway forty-two miles long, splitting the county in the center and touching every railroad town from the Kansas line to the Tulsa county boundary.

"When this road is built," say the enthusiasts, "you will see freight and passenger automobiles running between the cities on regular schedule."

Just before the Jefferson highway touches the Texas line in Bryan county it is intersected by the Oklahoma, Texas and Gulf highway, which is now being graded by convict labor from the Texas line to Arkansas City, Kas., another hard surfaced route for taxi service and tourist.

SAFETY

Illinois Motorists to Get Warnings of Grade Crossing Danger with Their 1917 Licenses.

TO HOLDER OF THIS LICENSE:

In sending you the enclosed card, I wish to call your attention to the large number of persons whose lives are unnecessarily sacrificed in accidents on railroad grade crossings each year. It seems to me that many of these accidents can be prevented if the drivers of automobiles will use ordinary care when crossing railroads at grade.

I urge you to examine the contents of this folder carefully and to be guided by the good advice contained therein.

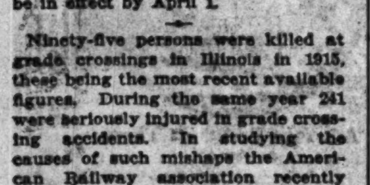
Louis L. Emmerson

Secretary of State

SECRETARY OF STATE LOUIS L. EMMERSON received yesterday 250,000 copies of the little folder whose first page is reproduced herewith. His clerks have been instructed to inclose a copy with each 1917 automobile license sent out hereafter from his offices in Springfield. Because of the great amount of work involved only a small proportion of the year's licenses have been issued thus far.

This move is part of a safety first campaign inaugurated two weeks ago when the state public utilities commission ordered the railroads throughout Illinois to equip all crossing flagmen with round hand signals bearing the word "Stop" in black letters and to paint all crossing gates with diagonal black and white stripes. The changes must be in effect by April 1.

Ninety-five persons were killed at grade crossings in Illinois in 1915, these being the most recent available figures. During the same year 241 were seriously injured in grade crossing accidents. In studying the causes of such mishaps the American Railway association recently made a test observation of 17,000 motor vehicles in California. The report showed that 69 per cent of the drivers failed to look in either direction in approaching various grade crossings, and that more than 3,000 of the total crossed tracks at better than thirty miles an hour.



"I'll Give Him a Dose of Buckthorn"

DON'T do it! Haven't you noticed how buckthorn prostrates the dog?

If you think your dog has worms—and most dogs have them—give him a dose of Vermilax Worm Remedy and get rid of all round, tape, or other stomach and intestinal worms within an hour—without prostrating or causing him any serious inconvenience.

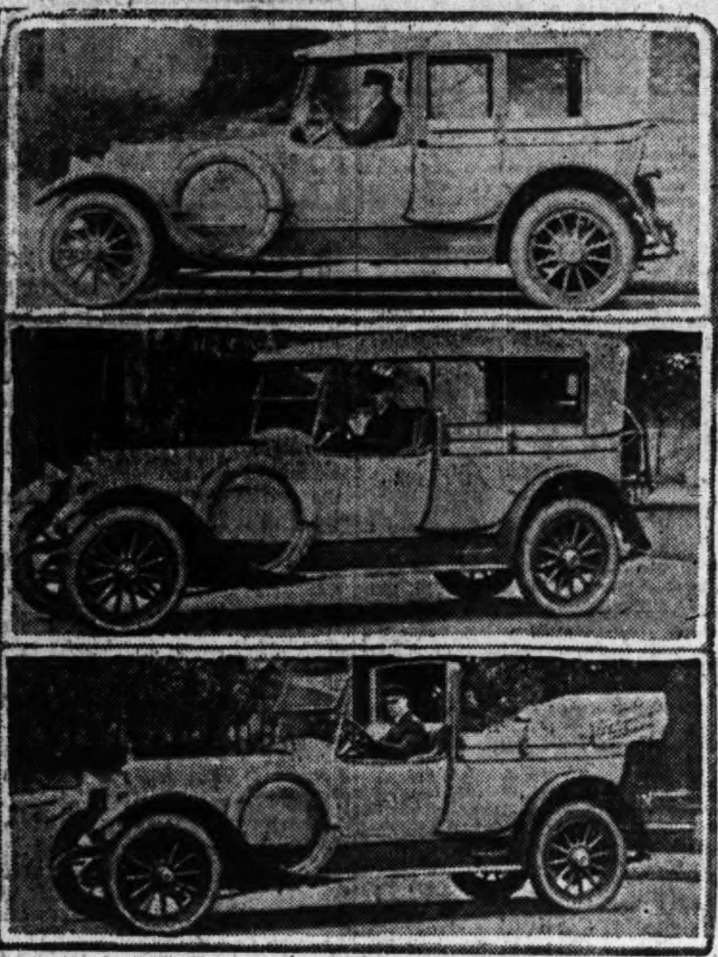
Vermilax Worm Remedy is the discovery of the well known veterinarian, Dr. T. Delaney. It contains not a drop of the dangerous buckthorn and is the prescription now used by owners of performing dog troupes and by famous dog handlers and breeders of dogs. They administer Vermilax Worm Remedy at frequent intervals, not only to get rid of any lurking worms, but to improve the dog's condition and appearance. This remedy was awarded the Gold Medal at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Vermilax Worm Remedy and other Vermilax Supreme Dog remedies are sold by Buck & Rayner's six stores, Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also for sale by Von Lengerke & Antoine, Kaempfer's Bird Store, and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Wholesale distributors, Fuller-Morrisson Co.

Ask the clerk at the counter for a copy of Dr. Delaney's Handbook on Dog Diseases—FREE.

CONVERTIBILITY

A Special Touring Landaulette Which Seems to Approach the Ultimate in All-Season Design.



Automobile body design, progressing conservatively from the days when the whip socket was left on the dash, seems to be hesitating, just now, on the threshold of producing a completely convertible closed-or-open car for touring purposes.

We have removable windows and side pillars, but these are usually accompanied by tops which cannot be lowered. On the other hand, we have tops which fold down, but, except in the case of a few two or three passenger models, these bodies do not have side windows which give the appearance of permanency when they are in place.

The design shown above—a special one, built according to the specifications of the owner, W. B. Schiller of Pittsburgh—is an interesting experiment in constructing a touring body completely adaptable to all seasons and conditions of weather.

It is a Brewster body mounted on a Simplex-Crane chassis. In the process of transformation the top folds close, the door windows disappear in the doors, and the rear windows are slid out and stored in special slides under the rear seat. The window lights in the sides and those in the partition between the tonneau and the driver's seat are lowered and stored in the same way. Then the pillars are folded down, even those in the lower picture disappearing.

Motor Caravan to Provide Data for War Plans

PLANS for the overland automobile caravan to be sent out in May by the San Francisco Advertising club took a military turn last week. In the belief that the tour will be of great value in testing actual road conditions between San Francisco and Denver, the club invited Gen. J. Franklin Bell, in charge of the western department of the United States army, to send a military observer or two with the motor hegira. Only three trunk line railroads extend through this region. If these were disabled through the mountain stretches, it is pointed out, the roads would assume vital importance and precise information would be needed, not only of the Lincoln highway but of an alternate route such as the tourists are planning to take.

A one and one-half ton motor truck will accompany the delegation eastward and will be required to keep up with the pleasure cars all the time. Equipped as a motor prairie schooner, it will have to average well over 200 miles a day at better than twenty-five miles an hour for 2,500 miles—a further test of military value in its bearing on the transportation of supplies and ammunition. The proposed route of the tour leads by alternate roads across Nevada to Salt Lake City, turns to the southeast, winds through the Rockies to Tennessee pass, the continental divide, and then goes eastward through the Royal Gorge of Colorado and across the plains of Kansas and Missouri. The objective point is St. Louis and an advertising convention to be held there.

INTER-CITY

Chicago Takes Leading Role in Plans for Picturesque Reliability Match This Summer.

THE contest board of the American Automobile association has chosen July 17, 18, and 19 as the dates for the 1917 intercity team reliability match. Buffalo is to be the starting and finishing point, the Automobile club of Buffalo having undertaken to lay out the routes and make all hotel arrangements.

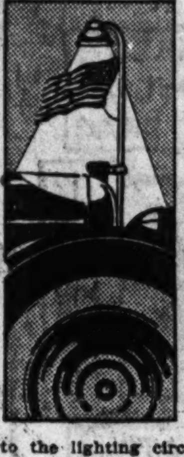
Entries in the picturesque event are to be limited to teams from ten cities, each team to consist of from five to ten cars. Thus far Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit, Buffalo, and New York have given definite assurance of participation, while Philadelphia, Boston, and Cleveland are considering the matter. Samuel E. Hibben of Chicago is chairman of the intercity committee.

Entry blanks were sent out last week, together with the complete rules, which are essentially those which have governed the Chicago interclub team matches for the last ten years. Each city must declare by May 1 its intention to compete and must announce the makeup of its team by June 1.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

Protection Against Submarines.

An illuminated flag to be attached at your radiator cap is one of the more tangible patriotic suggestions of the moment. The little silk emblem floats in the breeze like the ensign at the bow of a battleship. The standard which carries it is a small tube, curved over at the top. This terminates in a reflector equipped with a tungsten globe and so focused that, at night, the rays include only the flag. Through the tube runs a light cord, to be passed through the radiator and attached to the lighting circuit. The device is made by a concern at Monmouth, Ill.



How Much Are You Spending?

Compact little record books for keeping a detailed account of what it costs to run the car are to be had at many of the stationery stores. The newest form is a leather bound pocket edition with pages ruled for dates and the various items, such as gasoline, tires, garage expense, repairs, and the like. A larger book is divided into sections, each devoted to a general expense item and subdivided in the most minute detail. In the case of tires you record the date when each was purchased, the make and dealer, the price, when each blew out or was punctured, the repair cost—in short, the complete history of each tube and casing. A similar check may be kept on every part of the car, on your chauffeur's supply bills, on the comparative virtues of various kinds of oil and gasoline, etc.

Just Lock the Speedometer.

A speedometer which includes speed control and automobile lock features is to be placed on the market by a Nashville manufacturer. The device may be set at any desired speed from one to sixty miles an hour and locked so that the indicated speed cannot be exceeded. Left standing, with the control set at "0" and the key removed, the car cannot be started. In sending out the car with the chauffeur alone the owner may set the speed at fifteen miles an hour, or such a matter, thus discouraging joy riding. The speed control is attached to the ignition and to disconnect it it is necessary to change all wiring on the car. In addition to the control item, the device keeps the usual record of speed, trip, and season mileage.

To Protect the Driver's Legs.

Mats are now made to be placed over the lever and pedal slots in the floor of your car, to keep out cold drafts in winter and engine heat in summer. The manufacturer claims they interfere in no way with the running of the car, yielding as lever or pedal is moved and then closing automatically. One type is made of heavy padded felt, covered with artificial rubber. Another, designed for Fords, is entirely of rubber.

Vesta Indestructible Isolator

This apparently simple device adds an extra life to every Vesta Storage Battery. Let us explain fully the very important part it plays in the Vesta. Write today.

Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats

In this exclusive Vesta wooden mats are ch ed—absolutely ing." It also doubles the mats.

THE VITALS OF THE VESTA Give it Double Life

INDESTRUCTIBLE ISOLATOR

IMPREGNATED WOODEN MAT

Among the various makes of storage batteries there is only one radically different and superior to the rest.

The one exceptional battery is the Vesta. The vitals of the Vesta are different. Three exclusive improvements give it double life.

The Vesta Indestructible Isolators positively lock the plates apart and prevent this form of short circuits. The Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats eliminate "treeing"—another cause of short circuits. The use of Titanium, a rare mineral, enters into the lead plates, hardening them and adding vastly to the efficiency of the battery. It also precipitates minerals and impurities in solution.

These exclusive, patented features in the vitals of the Vesta make this wonderful battery last twice as long.

This is a positive proved fact; yet the Vesta costs no more than ordinary batteries. Ask any Vesta Service Station man to explain Vesta superiority.

Florida at Its Best for Auto Tour in March

NOTE—The author of these words of touring wisdom is a former Chicago newspaper man who has spent the winter motoring over the roads of the south. Coincidently with the receipt of his report comes word that southerners call "the last big obstacle to motor traffic into Florida" has been removed with the opening of a bridge across St. Mary's river at Folkstone, Ga.

By Parke West.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 1.—From a half dozen or more viewpoints the motorist of the north who has delayed a trip to Florida until March is in good luck, both coming and going. A knowledge of conditions as they actually are and have been in Florida and throughout the southeastern portion of the United States this winter makes this fact an outstanding deduction.

In the first place, two abnormal conditions have obtained in the south during the first two months of the year. These have operated to affect winter tourists both in making the drive to Florida and during their stay in the land of the palm.

The more important of these, and particularly important to the family that intends to drive across Dixie, has been the abnormal winter weather. This has made the roads in Georgia, Alabama, and the Carolinas all but impassable. This statement is no reflection on the south's great pride in its highways, but the fact is the pride [illegible] enthusiasm somewhat faster [illegible] roads take on hard surfaces, [illegible] such surfaces as could withstand the pranks the elements have indulged in the last two months.

Arriving in Florida at last, however, the January and February tourist found himself in the midst of a condition unparalleled in the state. Never since the [illegible] call winged forth from Florida via the newspaper ad with its [illegible] for the zero belt and heralding the [illegible] winter playground has this state seen a winter season like this one. Trade has been so heavy it has [illegible] down the hotel elevators. The unheard of influx of tourists during the early season has been due, of course, to the widespread prosperity of the north, with more or less of the emphasis traceable to the fact that travel to Europe has been all but cut off. Hotels have been so jammed in the principal resort centers, such as Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Tampa, Palm Beach, and Miami, only to mention the high spots, that accommodations frequently have been obtainable only at considerable inconvenience and at such inflated costs, in many instances, that some of the newspapers, looking to the state's future good, have given more than passing attention to the slogan warning: "Don't gouge the tourist."

Unlike California, Florida is not yet prepared with the furnished bungalow. Why, then, the good fortune of the March tourist? The answer is easy. The crest of the tidal wave of tourists begins to recede with the coming of March in Florida. This is not for the reason that conditions are not more than ordinarily inviting in Florida in March, for they surely are, but because the great body of tourists comes late in January or early in February. Naturally it isn't every one you meet who can put in more than a month in the far away state, while on the other hand thousands of the tourists do not care to stay longer than that. So March 1 sees heavy laden trains moving north again, though the "season" is until April 1.

Florida itself has been glad to see March 1 this year, without doubt. Its arrival means an easing up throughout the resort lands, and thus the visitor arriving in March will encounter what might properly be described as a normal winter season. Hotels will be able to take care of their guests at normal charges, and the visitor will find himself in what is by all odds the best weather month the state enjoys. With March real spring arrives in Florida—that is, what Floridians call spring. The temperature of Florida's spring levels with Chicago's late June and early July, days ideal for touring over the state's excellent roads, and the nights are always cool.

As for roads, Florida is the wonderland for touring. It has its famous oyster shell highways, lined everywhere with the stately palm, and these wind, for the entire length of the east coast, through jungles in which the trees and shrubbery are all but obliterated by their shrouds of the sad Spanish moss on the one hand, with touches of the lightning fast beach stretches at fashionable Ormond-Daytona and the delightful citrous fruit sections and lake regions on the other.

In other parts fine brick highways have been made, these extending forty to sixty miles across an entire country. Between Jacksonville and Miami, some 400 miles down the east coast, the motorist finds himself on a highway which, for the distance, is without equal in this country, unless New England alone surpasses it. He can make this run in one day if he cares to. Near Palm Beach, and between there and Miami, some road work is being done, making short detours necessary, but this is not at all bothersome. Florida roads are, in fact, in such good condition right now that the tourist could easily take in everything in the state in from ten days to two weeks, and in doing so in March he will enjoy weather conditions entirely free from the "rawness" of day and evening that hung like a pall over the state during the February "big freezes."

As a parting word of advice: Ship the car to Jacksonville. The drive from Chicago down could be made more easily now than it could have been in February, but road conditions throughout Dixie still are in such shape that the trip would require considerably more than the time ordinarily calculated and this delay would erase from the allotment of time in Florida. You can figure it out safely that one day in Florida is worth more than ten of them in the mud between central Georgia and points north of there. The delays and likely repairs to your car will approximate the cost of shipping to Jacksonville, so you will come out about even in the end.

AN AUTOMOBILE THAT FLIES

Or, If You Prefer, a Triplane with a Limousine Body—Anyway, It Carries Its Passengers in Luxury, and Goes Equally Well in the Air or on the Ground.

Should traveling by yacht, private car, or limousine become tedious, one may now take to his air car and skim the clouds or the earth at will, in the most luxurious surroundings.

The photograph shows the new Curtiss air car shown at the first Pan-American aeronautics exposition held recently in New York. The contraption is a triplane, built on a complete motor car, with a limousine body which incloses a driver and two passengers and is electric lighted and upholstered in dainty tapestry. Instead of glass, celluloid is used for the windows, which have silk curtains to shut out the gaze of the curious.

According to its builders, the machine can make sixty-five miles an hour on land (if there aren't any trees in the way) and a greater speed in the air.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

Am planning to take a trip to Richmond, Ind. Will you please give me the best route in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE? I wish to start about March 15.

L. M. SMITH, Chicago.

Everything considered, I would advise you to go via Indianapolis, as the roads will be found much better that way. The route runs through South Chicago, Hammond, Dyer, Crown Point, Thayer, Rensselaer, Wolcott, Lafayette, Frankfort, Antioch, and Lebanon to Indianapolis 198 miles. From Indianapolis drive through Irvington, Cumberland, Greenfield, Knightstown, Dunreith, Cambridge City, Germantown, and Centerville to Richmond, 67 miles. This will be found a good route nearly all the way.

* * *

I intend making a bicycle trip from St. Paul to Chicago late this spring. Will you please print in your column what you consider the best route to take and also state the distance?

ST. PAUL.

You should delay your trip as long as possible, for as a rule the dirt roads, over which you would travel for a great portion of the distance, would not be in any too good shape in the spring. Take the Red Ball route, which, as its name indicates, is marked with a red ball painted on the telephone poles. Follow this route through Rosemount, Farmington, Northfield, Faribault, Owatonna, Austin, Mitchell, Charles City, Plainfield, Waverly, Waterloo, and Vinton to Cedar Rapids, 274 miles. At this point take the Lincoln highway, which is marked with red, white, and blue bands, with the letter "L" painted on the poles. Follow the highway markings through Marion, Mount Vernon, Clarence, Lowden, De Witt, Clinton, 92.6 miles; Lyons, Fulton, Morrison, Sterling, Dixon, Ashton, Rochelle, Creston, and De Kalb to Geneva, 111.4 miles. At this point leave the Lincoln highway and continue through West Chicago, North Glen Ellyn, Lombard, Elmhurst, and Maywood to Chicago, 37 miles.

Can you tell me what indicates poor lubrication of the pistons? I have been having much trouble with my car, and it occurred to me that possibly it was not being lubricated properly.

G. A. D., Moline, Ill.

If the motor is not getting proper lubrication there will be loss of power and the engine will slow down, or possibly stop entirely. If the lubrication is poor in one cylinder only, the remaining cylinders would keep the engine running, but scoring of the defective cylinder would follow. This frequently is indicated by a thudding noise in the cylinder. Investigate and have the trouble remedied before it is too late.

* * *

Will you please inform me where I may obtain complete maps and information regarding the Lincoln highway? I am planning a cross country trip from Chicago to San Francisco, and want to follow that route. What is the distance and about how long do you figure the trip would require on a bicycle?

H. ANDERSON, Chicago.

Address Lincoln Highway association, Dime Savings Bank building, Detroit, Mich. The distance from Chicago to San Francisco is 2,400 miles. The length of time required depends entirely upon how far you care to ride each day. Personally, I should not want to make it in less than six or seven weeks.

DAVIS

Save $100 on Your Davis By Buying Before April 1st

In order to maintain the high standard of construction of the DAVIS it has become necessary for us to raise the price of our car $100.

The new price will be effective April 1st. But cars ordered for delivery before this date will be sold at the old price.

So if you are contemplating buying a car, NOW is the time to buy. It means a clear saving of $100. For the Davis after April 1st will be identically the same car we are offering you now.

In the DAVIS you are getting a car of the highest standards. In no way has perfection been sacrificed for price or profit. It is a carefully built, honestly built car. So quiet and smooth running is its motor that you forget there is an engine. So powerful that the steepest hills seem to fade from under it.

At the price you can buy it until April 1st, it offers an unrivaled opportunity for motor car buyers. At its new price it has no equal.

Present Prices on Our Four Models

DORT

An Established Sensation

The Dort has made its reputation—it is respected by knowing motorists everywhere—it has been a continuous sensation in every part of the country for the past two years. And it is significant, too, that only the highest class of motor car dealers handle the Dort.

Satisfaction as complete as that given by the Dort is such an unusual thing that it is always a subject of comment among owners.

This car is more than smart in appearance—its lines are handsome and graceful—it is roomy, comfortable and completely equipped.

But the real value of the Dort lies in its wonderfully sturdy and dependable mechanical construction.

The powerful Dort motor, the strong rear axle, the stout frame, the full cantilever rear springs, the unfailing Westinghouse Starting and Lighting—these and a score of other features put the Dort in a place by itself among moderate-priced cars.

4 PASSENGER ROADSTER

This is the one four passenger roadster that is not only smart in design and flexible in operation, but convenient and comfortable.

The divided front seats and roomy rear seat will accommodate four large sized adults comfortably. There is plenty of foot room in the tonneau and a convenient storage compartment for luggage back of the adjustable rear seat.

Here, at last, is the automobile that combines the smartness and economy of the roadster with the greater capacity of the touring car without sacrificing comfort.

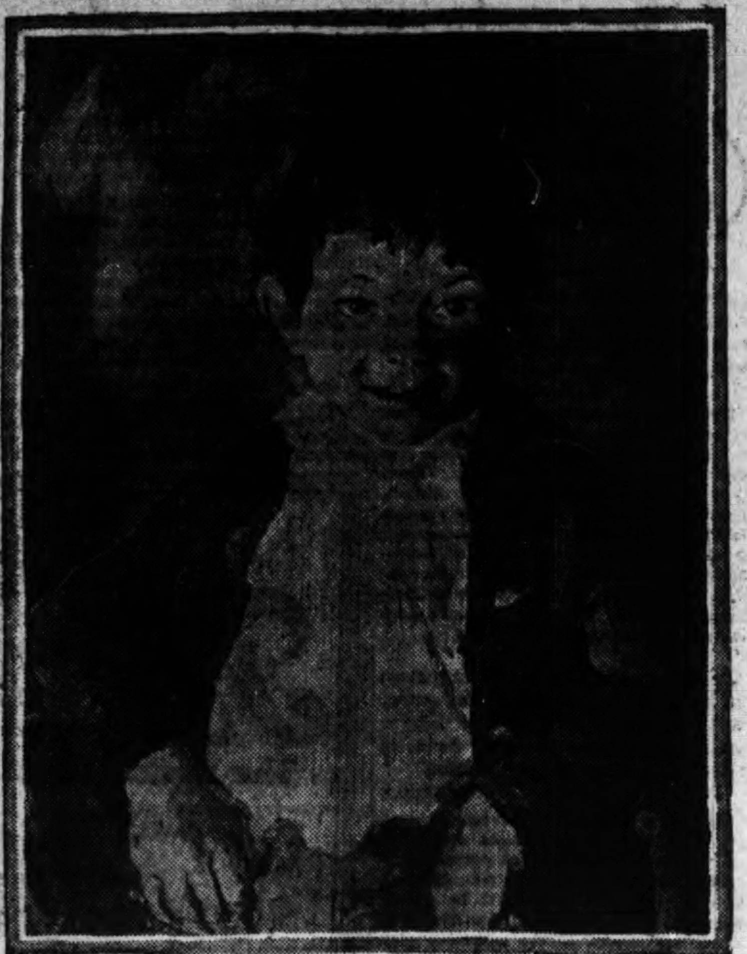
ART by Louise James Bargelt

"Witches' Trial" Valuable Painting by Unique Artist



"Portugese Boy" by Randall Davey.

ANENT the "Witches' Trial," by George Fuller, lately hung at the Art institute, there is much diversity of opinion expressed and much variety of emotion felt. If you have already seen it you either like it immensely or not at all. And if by chance you have missed viewing it do so soon. It is a valuable piece of work by a unique American artist. He is utterly dissimilar from his contemporaries of the last generation and he has no imitators in the present school of modernists.

To me the picture casts a spell, subtly magical, like a tale of Poe's or a story by Hawthorne. The colors are soft, in a minor key, and a misty harmony pervades the shadowy outlines of the figures, the vague background of the huge courtroom. Emotion is suggested without the aid of any definite story.

It is idealism, this picture, the kind of idealism that could only have sprung up on the stern New England coast which was for many years the only home that Fuller knew. The men and women on the canvas, though veiled in a haze of vaporous gold, are just as clearly American as Sir Joshua's girls are purely English and Greuze's women are typically French.

For, ethereal though it is, it is also in essence substantial. The girl on trial has the same reserve, the same strength of control beneath her exterior of loveliness that marks the Hester Prynne of Hawthorne's tale. It is the type of which New England boasted so in the days of her first fresh youth. The men who are grouped about her possess it, too. Peculiarly enough, the picture seems the embodiment of all the virtues and all the faults of our Pilgrim fathers.

Fuller developed slowly, like Corot, and, like Millet, his love for art grew deeper and more all absorbing as the years piled slowly upon him. He grew up amid the artistic dearth and desolation which marked the American town in the days when this country was young. In Europe there is not a tiny hamlet nor a diminutive village, hardly, where a boy can grow to manhood without at least the knowledge and acquaintanceship of one fine piece of art. The smallest public building the smallest town possesses is apt to emulate in some fashion the art of old civilizations.

As a young man Fuller went abroad, where he lived for a few brief years. But he made little impression among the people who knew him and after a while returned to his farm in Deerfield, where he gave himself up to a vigorous commingling of the plow handle and the brush. Here he kept himself distinctly aloof, working incessantly, dreaming the dreams that inspired his pictures and keeping steadily before him the ideal in his heart.

He carried out perfectly the theory of the German philosopher who insisted that a true artist could work contentedly in rooms filled with beauty or in rooms denuded of everything. Apparently his own ideal was all that he needed, and his studio was a literal copy of the German philosopher's second postulate. And he lived wholly and completely in the land of the idealist. Everything he painted he painted poetically. If his imagination lacked power it held seduction, and if it was not compelling it was marvelously alluring.

Among his finest pieces are numbered his "Romany Girl," his "Winifred," and his "Quadroon."

Various bits of information are drifting about now regarding the new exhibitions which are to come to the Art institute this week. Commencing on Thursday and lasting till the first of April there is to be a joint exhibition of paintings by Hayley Lever and Ernest Lawson, an exhibition of paintings by Charles Rosen, a memorial exhibition of paintings by Howard T. Cushing, an exhibition of small bronzes by A. Phimister Proctor, an exhibition of paintings by Bertha Menzler Peyton, and an exhibition of paintings by Charles P. Gruppe.

Gruppe is to have twenty pictures in the exhibit. Gruppe's landscapes, essentially of simple, unostentatious bits of nature, remind one in their technique and coloring of modern Dutch landscape art. He has lived for twenty-six years in Holland and in this time has naturally absorbed much of the Dutch spirit and idea. Since the outbreak of the European war he has been spending most of his time in New England. Among the pictures he will show at the institute are his "Farm in the Valley," a remarkable picture for its blue, blue hills; "A Creek in the Catskills," and his "Orchard Pastures."

Gruppe is a member of the Pulchre studio at The Hague and has received a number of gold medals and first prizes at different American and foreign exhibits and expositions. He is represented in a number of notable collections, both in this country and abroad.

A. P. Proctor, who is represented in several of our largest museums, is to have about twenty pieces of bronze.

Randall Davey will have sixteen paintings, including his "Fog" and the "Girl in Blue."

A piece of ancient Chinese pottery called the "Camel" has just been given to the institute by H. Suddard. It dates back to some hundred years following the birth of Christ and is considered far better than anything of its kind in this country. It is twenty inches high with saddle bags and decorated with gold.

William Tuthill offers a prize of $100 for the encouragement of water color paintings at the annual exhibition of water colors at the institute in May.

On March 12, it is announced, there will be a memorial exhibition of the Bryan Lathrop collection of etchings by Whistler. On March 15 there will be an exhibition of drawings by Dr. James Parton Haney. On March 17 there will be a loan exhibition of books on fine arts under the auspices of the Caxton club.

Martha Walter, a Philadelphia artist, has an exhibition of twenty pictures which opened on Friday last at the Arts club and which is scheduled to remain there for several weeks. If you are of impressionistic leanings you will be enthusiastic about it. If not, you will enjoy it anyway, for it is thoroughly worth while both in its landscapes and in its portraits.

The landscapes are greatly in the majority. There are a large number, proportionately, of beach scenes, the idea of the artist expressed in a few swift splashes of paint, bright paint in blue and green and billowy white for clouds, with results that are attractive and effective. "The Yellow Chairs, Coney Island," is the most individual of all the beach scenes, I think. The strokes are few, but each one counts, and the vague figures of the women are nevertheless much alive and really breathing.

There is an Indian baby which is one of the most delightful child pictures I have seen for a long time, and a portrait of a red haired little girl which is a stunning study in figure portraiture.

The "Yellow Parasol," which is one of the artist's most recent paintings, is decidedly of the ultra school of impressionism, and yet viewed from across the room conveys a startlingly vivid impression of the picture the artist had in mind. Even more atmospheric, though not so appealing, is the hint of a landscape in "Rainy Day, Market Place, Brittany." Before it one can sense the rain in the air and feel the slippery gleaming pavements under the feet.

Long Tour to Boost Highway Extension

WHAT may prove to be the longest automobile "sociability tour" ever made has been proposed by eastern motorists who will be delegates to the midsummer meeting of the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean Highway association on the top of Pike's peak, 14,109 feet above sea level.

The plan to motor across the continent from the Atlantic coast came to light at the association's annual convention, held the other day in Colorado Springs, Colo. At this meeting the problem as to whether San Francisco, Los Angeles, or Seattle shall be the western terminus of the highway and just what route shall be chosen from Salt Lake City west was placed in the hands of a special committee on western extension. Consideration also was given to branch routes in the east leading to Washington, New York, and Boston.

With reference to routing through Indiana and Illinois, it was decided to adopt a straight line from Indianapolis via Danville, Bainbridge, Rockville, and Montezuma to Chrisman, Ill.

Progress in road development was reported by representatives of every state. Particular emphasis was placed upon the improvements made by the citizens of Pike and Scott counties in Illinois, which now make it possible to cross the Illinois river at any season of the year.

WASTE

Motorists Might Have Saved $150,000,000 of Their 1916 Tire Bill, Say Experts.

LAST year the motorists of the United States took from their wheels and replaced some nine million tires which had apparently run their course, representing an original expenditure of about $800,000,000, according to a statement just issued by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The cry of the car owners who discarded this great multitude of tires is for better tires—less tire trouble—fewer tire changes—longer tire life—lower cost per mile. Yet through the application of the simplest methods of tire conservation, at the command of every motorist, it is estimated by the experts that fully one-half of this enormous mortality in tires and loss in money might have been prevented. Thousands of these tires were replaced because they had passed away before their time.

If $150,000,000 of the nation's tire bill could be saved annually five magnificent highways could be built across the continent each year and the nation so honeycombed with motor roads as to put every nook and corner of it in direct touch with the big centers of population. Another Panama canal could be built in three years, the national debt lifted in seven years, or a fleet of ten first class battleships built for our navy each year.

Q. What delayed the doctor?

A. It's only a puncture but the delay may be serious for his patient.

Q. Doesn't he know about the Lee Puncture Proof Tire—the pneumatic tire with the metal disc enforcement that prevents the punctures of ordinary tires?

A. He certainly should know—he's depended upon Lee gloves and all manner of rubber sundries in his profession for many years. "Lee" to him means correct manufacture and if he would use Lee Tires he could not have his present dangerous delay.

Q. Where can he find out all about the Lee line of pneumatic tires?

1½-2 Ton Military Duty Truck

THE MOTOR TRUCK which we today introduce to Chicago marks beyond the question of a doubt a distinct advance over the best it has heretofore been possible to produce.

Mark first of all this fact: The motor trade industry today is, in knowledge if not in practice, ten years further advanced than it was twelve months ago.

On March 8, 1916, after a period of four years of development in co-operation with the military engineers of the U. S. Government, it was considered by government and motor industry alike that the motortruck had solved its problems and was ready for any service.

Thirty days later it was known that all standards had failed in the light of actual wartime conditions.

IN A SERVICE the most severe to which a motor vehicle had or has ever been subjected, not excluding the battlefields of Europe, it was found that trucks developed for service on boulevard streets and carefully engineered grades could not withstand, and did not withstand, the rigors of military use over Mexican trails. Into the melting pot of Mexico were poured America's best, forty-seven trains of twenty-seven to thirty-three trucks each, produced by a score of the foremost builders.

ONE MONTH of this service equaled five years of ordinary use. Under our eyes we saw passing, as in a review, the whole life and faults, concentrated, not of one truck but of all trucks.

NOW THE PURSUIT of Villa and the victualing of Pershing does not interest you today, but this fact does interest you—it interests every man with merchandise to be transported, every man who owns, operates or pays for the operation of a motor-drawn commercial vehicle—every man who uses horses—every man who expects to be interested in motor hauling.

IT INTERESTS YOU because the same faults and weaknesses which destroyed America's best in the desert tracks of Mexico are the faults and weaknesses which have been until today common to all trucks in commercial use this country over. The faults, the delays, the expense of upkeep laid in the past in commercial motor hauling to overloading, to careless drivers, to abuse, were shown in Mexico to be really inherent faults in motor truck design.

OUT OF THIS marvelous experience was born a new truck—The Winther.

THE WINTHER TRUCK has been developed by the engineers who watched on the ground, in the heat and dust and fever of Chihuahua, the Mexican expedition.

WITH A CLEAN SLATE, a new factory, unhampered by "mechanical policies" or equipment investment to be protected, they have produced in the Winther a truck which not only measures up to 100% to what we now know military requirements to be, but it is, therefore, necessarily a truck which establishes a new standard of economy and service in commercial use.

ONLY ONE HUNDRED Winther 1½ ton trucks are available for Chicago in 1917. The demand is already so great that we suggest your attention at once. This truck will be backed in Chicago by C. V. M. Service—a service as advanced as the truck itself.

INQUIRIES MAY BE ADDRESSED to the undersigned with the assurance that you will be annoyed by no salesman's importunities, nor will your mail be cluttered with "literature."

WE ARE READY, however, with our engineers to discuss this truck with interested principals and decide whether it can be of service to you.

Deliveries will be made April 1.

Two Power Ranges

Extravagant Performance With Economical Operation

Peerless "All that the name implies"

NO longer need you forego—for reasons of economy—the pleasure of owning a big super-powerful car of the utmost class and distinction.

For now you may have power and speed in rare abundance without the expense it formerly took to operate the super-powerful cars in ordinary driving.

Two separate and distinct power ranges make the Peerless Eighty Horsepower Eight a car of "dual personality."

It has a total range of performance which hitherto has been possible only in totally different and opposite types of cars—both highly desirable but not previously to be had in combination.

■ ■

A "Loafing" Range

In its "loafing" range the Peerless Eight gives you that quiet, smooth, flexible, distinctive performance which you would expect of a car of real class.

But in this "loafing" range it is operating on half rations—consuming fuel so sparingly as to put many a lesser powered six to shame, even many a four.

■ ■

A "Sporting" Range

And when you want or need super-power or emergency speed, it's yours in this same Peerless Eight which serves your ordinary requirements with such grace, distinction and economy.

You have only to open the throttle wider to release the double poppets and give her full fuel rations and utterly change the whole character of your car.

For in her "sporting" range she is a brute of a car capable of a brush with any contender no matter what its class.

■ ■

See us at once and let us show you how measurably two power ranges increase the pleasure of driving yet meet the requirements of economy.

"THIS KNOCKS 'EM OUT OF THEIR SEATS" IN VAUDEVILLE

RIALTO.

Senator Murphy: Lately my mother-in-law has gotten the dancing craze and upon me devolves the pleasant duty of teaching her some of the latest steps. She weighs 300 pounds—400 on an ice scale—and yet I find it no more difficult to push her around the ballroom floor than if I were moving a piano.

The other night I showed her a new dance, the "banana flop." And flop we did—me underneath. I broke three ribs—and a New Year's resolution. My, but she got angry! She said, "I don't know what to call you." I said, "Call me an ambulance."

Last Thursday we all went to a Sunday school picnic. It was held in a beautiful spot called Mosquito grove. The tickets were $3 each, including the boat ride, admission to the park, and poison oak. A special boat had been hired for the occasion. My mother-in-law was the heaviest person on board, so they used her for ballast. I don't know what our boat was ordinarily used for, but if one's sense of smell can serve as a guide I should say it was a garbage scow. The odor was so pronounced that after a while everybody began to hold their noses. But the boat was crowded, and in the confusion some of the people who thought they were holding their own nose were really holding somebody' else's nose. One tough guy had hold of mine. He was the most absent minded man I ever saw. He had a cold in the head, and every time he sneezed he blew my nose.

After a pleasant sail of two hours—although it didn't seem over seven—our scow finally came in sight of Mosquito grove. And then came the trouble of landing. The captain was cockeyed. He looked where he was going, but he didn't go where he was looking, so he ran the front of the scow into the side of the wharf.

When we landed there were seven thousand natives waiting to receive us—the owner of the grove and six thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine mosquitoes. Everything was so nice and convenient. The picnic grounds weren't over seven miles fro mthe wharf. On the way we had to cross a meadow where a cow's brother was grazing peacefully. When he spied my mother-in-law's red shirtwaist he made a rush for her. There was a pool of water on the other side of the fence, but my mother-in-law didn't stop to put on a bathing suit. She plunged right into the pool—lengthwise. I fished her out again. I had no choice in the matter—my wife was watching me.

Frank Bush: I'm not a tramp. I'm a lily. I toil not, neither do I spin. And Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like. The other day I asked a woman for something to eat. She said she hadn't a thing in the house to give me, and besides she was busy as she had a couple of letters to write. I said: "Madam, let me lick the stamps. I can't starve." She said: "What's the matter with your coat?" I said: "Insomnia. It hasn't had a nap in ten years."

I went to another house and rang the front doorbell. A woman came to the door and I said: "Won't you help a poor man that lost all his friends in the Jacksonville fire?" "Why," she said, "you are the same man that lost his family in the Galveston flood and was in the Charleston earthquake." I said: "I know it, mum. I'm one of the most unfortunate gentlemen on the face of the earth." "Well," she said, "I'll tell you where you can find a job sawing five cords of wood." "Where," said I. "Around the corner of the next street," she said. "I'm much obliged to you," said I. "I might have run into it if it hadn't been for you."

I was walking around the block just a few minutes ago, when a policeman stops, gives me one look, picks me up, and throws me into an ash pile. "What you doin' that for?" I asks him. "'Gwan wid you," he says. "If the board of health won't keep the streets clean, I will." I had heard that sometimes angry men could be hypnotized so as to become quiet. Reo

Ten Reo Models
—One Reo Quality

REO ENGINEERING is sound engineering. That is now recognized by buyers generally—conceded by other engineers.

REO POLICY is as stable, as sound, and as dependable as is Reo engineering.

THE GOOD INTENT which was the foundation of Reo policy, is still the guiding principle.

REO FACTORY FACILITIES have increased from year to year until now the total area is nearly forty acres—and the Reo factory has long been known in trade circles as "The model automobile plant."

WE REO FOLK make more parts of Reo cars and motor trucks than any other concern in the industry, of which we have any knowledge.

IN THE REO LABORATORIES we determine what materials shall constitute every part; here the formulae are worked out—here the tests made to insure that every pound comes up to the Reo specifications.

THEN WE PUT "Just a little bit more for safety's sake" in every part.

"50 PER CENT OVERSIZE" in every vital part is not a mere catch phrase—compare and you'll find it is a statement of fact.

50% EXTRA STRENGTH is the aim—and we achieve that by using the best of materials and more of them.

NOTHING IS LEFT TO CHANCE. The Reo guarantee is not based on a guess but a certainty that the quality is there—determined by the most rigid and the most painstaking tests.

WE HAVE NEVER BEEN ambitious to make all the automobiles, —only the best.

MAKING FEWER WE CAN be more certain of making them better—provided of course, we make enough to enable us to avail ourselves of modern automatic machine tools and the most efficient methods.

THE REO VOLUME long since passed that point.

OUR CHIEF CONCERN now is to see that it does not pass the point where quality gives way to mere quantity considerations—that point where personal supervision gives way to a "system."

BECAUSE OF THAT POLICY there is at this moment, and always has been, an over-demand for Reos of all models.

ALWAYS HAS BEEN, we said—for it is a fact that, never since the first Reo was made and sold, has it been possible for us to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

A MORE REMARKABLE FACT is that the demand is for all ten Reo models alike. For motor trucks as well as for "pleasure" cars—demand for each is vastly greater than the possible supply.

SO THE ONLY WAY to be at all sure of getting a Reo—any model—is to see your Reo dealer at once, place your order and, at the earliest possible moment take delivery of your automobile or motor truck as the case may be.

PRICE IS SUBJECT to increase without notice.

REO DEALERS ARE forbidden to accept orders for future delivery at present prices—only for such as they can deliver immediately; or, on the expressed understanding that the delivery price shall be the list price at time delivery is specified or made.

SO DON'T DELAY—the big spring rush is already upon us and there won't be—can't be—enough Reos to go round. Order, and (if your dealer can supply you) take delivery of your Reo now.

WHEN YOU SELECT a Reo you know—and all experienced motorists will endorse your judgment—that you have chosen from among all that have been offered you, a thoroughly dependable automobile.

LET OTHERS EXPERIMENT if they will. For yours, the certain course. For yours, the car that is conceded to be "The Gold Standard of Values."

"THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES"

"Own Your Own" "Own Your Own"

No more garage problems--here's the answer

Own a Togan garage of your own; there's one ready made waiting for your car. Your rent or storage charges for a few months will pay for it. You'll get 100% more pleasure out of your car and cut down "upkeep" at least 50%

"IT'S easy enough to buy your car, but the upkeep—'ouch!'" You hear it everywhere; you probably say it yourself when the public garage man presents his bill. The bare cost of keeping your car under a roof is out of all proportion to your original investment in the car itself.

The only solution—"own your own"

When you own your own garage your car is ready for instant use every minute—no walking to and from the public garage; you have a place to store gasoline and oil if you choose—you dont have to pay "garage" prices. You're absolutely independent and the money you are paying for rent or storage will pay for a Togan garage in a few months. Then why not have it?

Togan garages are ready made

Togan garages are built in a modern factory—the only one in the country devoted entirely to the manufacture of ready-made buildings. Here these garages are built complete—there's one ready for your car to be placed where you want it. You dont have to wait for contractors or carpenters; you get your garage now when you need it.

Anyone can erect a Togan garage

Two inexperienced men can erect a Togan garage in two or three hours—no nails, hammers or saws are needed, the doors are hung, the windows fitted—nothing complicated to figure out—just assemble the sections according to the clear, simple directions, and bolt them together. No technical skill or "handiness" with tools is required—there is no chance to go wrong or make a mistake.

Togan garages are ready for you in either single wall or double wall construction. The double wall is designed on the "vacuum bottle" idea; the dead air space between the two walls acts as an insulation against heat or cold. You may have either type at your option.

Togan garages are economical

The prices are from 25% to 50% less than a carpenter would charge for a really inferior building. And here's why: The lumber is bought in enormous quantities; you get the price advantage of volume in buying, manufacturing and marketing. It's the principles of automobile making applied to garage building. You know what that means.

They're not "just as good" as a carpenter can make—they are better; we sell them with a positive guarantee of this superiority in every detail. Nothing but the best material money can buy goes into these buildings.

Facts about Togan construction

Togan garages are built in standardized sections; in most cases 3x8 feet; they're light, easy to handle. The special Togan lock joints are used wherever the sections join together. They perform a triple function:

1. They line the building automatically at the time bolts are tightened.
2. They insure an absolutely wind-proof, rain-proof and weather-proof joint.
3. They give the absolute maximum of strength and rigidity to the completed structure.

If you haven't room for a garage here's a way out

Erect your Togan garage in a nearby lot or on your neighbor's property; you can arrange it. The point is this—you can take the Togan garage down any time and move it—two men can disassemble it in an hour easily.

Briefly here are the things a Togan garage will do for you:

You get a home for your car at a nominal cost.

You save garage bills—you save at least 25% on the original cost of your garage.

You can get as durable a building as a carpenter can put up.

You have a good looking garage that you can be proud of.

Prices range from $81 for the most inexpensive model, size 10x16, to $395 for our highest priced double insulated wall type, size 18x21.

The fine days—the motoring days—are almost here. Days when you'll want to be able to use your car at a moment's notice.

We can deliver your Togan garage in any desired size or style—on exactly the day you name if you'll give us instructions now—before the spring rush starts.

Your name and address on the coupon to the left will bring you full particulars. Tear it out before you forget and mail it today.

EFFECTIVE SPEAKING.

Three separate beginners' classes for men and women now forming—Monday, March 5; Wednesday, March 7, and Friday, March 9. Enroll at once to secure a place.

Our director, DR. CHARLES EDWIN ROSTELL, Ph. D., formerly of Oxford, England, has the most practical and thorough system in the United States for mastering the art in Effective Speaking and Convincing Conversation. Train yourself to appear at club meetings, lodge rooms, banquets, political or social events.

Dr. Rostell will help you develop the ability to speak with persuasive power. His instruction develops your personal magnetism, turns timidity into self-confidence, and gives you a forceful, convincing style of speech. He gives you correct gestures, voice power, self-possession, and resourcefulness.

Make a private appointment with him and he will personally outline the course for you. COMPLETE CLASSROOM INSTRUCTION, $35.00.

Private coaching a special feature. Call, WRITE, or TELEPHONE RANDOLPH 2804 for appointment with SALES MANAGER—OF BROAD EXPERIENCE AND RIPENED JUDGMENT.

A man capable of engaging and managing men; analyzing market conditions and opportunities; formulating, directing, and carrying out sound sales policies.

Of sufficient ambition and resourcefulness to apply this ability in a virgin field where modern scientific sales management and policies are unknown and where the possibilities are unusually large.

The particular business in this field is of long standing, has excellent physical equipment and ample cash resources, and enjoys a high reputation where its product is placed.

A principal place in the business can be attained if by aggressive, sustained effort and correct business methods the capacity is demonstrated to increase sales and manage the selling organization.

Address FULLER & SMITH, 1504 Guardian Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

FACTORY MANAGER

WANTED BY PROGRESSIVE CHICAGO CONCERN; 30 TO 38 YEARS OF AGE, WHO HAS HAD PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE IN LARGE FACTORY WHERE THE HIGHEST EFFICIENCY WAS OBTAINED AND WHO IS COMPETENT TO INSTALL AN UP TO DATE COST SYSTEM, ETC. THE MAN I AM LOOKING FOR—As my assistant in the advertising department is about 30 years of age and has made good. He is now ready for a bigger opportunity and is qualified by previous training to fit into this rapidly growing manufacturing concern, now doing a tremendous business with the small retailers and variety merchants. Since our product is sold entirely by mail, to successfully fill the position he must be a trained correspondent and capable of producing sure-fire copy for broadsides that will sell the trade. Previous sales experience and knowledge of outside conditions, I feel, is an essential requirement. To such a man unparalleled opportunity exists. But do not answer unless you KNOW you are the man. Be prepared to submit examples of your letters and other work with data that will be absolute proof of your ability. Write me completely. The question of salary will adjust itself. Address A E 244, Tribune.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN—HIGH GRADE SPECIALTY salesmen, we have the newest and biggest profit producing device known to modern merchandising; all electric popcorn machine; big department stores, classy druggists, cigar stores, movie shows, confectioners, bakers, and many other live merchants operating the Lek-Tro as an adjunct only are clearing from $3 to $10 a day net cash profit on it—no gas, gasoline, or steam; it occupies only five square feet of floor space and is so handsomely constructed that it enhances the finest surroundings; simple turn of an electric switch starts the whole operation; as little trouble in loss of time as a candy or cigar counter and five times as profitable. Minimum sale of four machines per month means $420 to you—some of our present force are averaging six machines per month. The season for selling popcorn is just starting. We are adding to our sales force and have a limited amount of territory open for men who will give us all of their time and come up to our requirements. Tell us all about yourself in your first letter, as the territory is limited and you must answer quick. Remember, the Lek-Tro commences to earn big cash profits for your buyer the moment it is installed. LEKTRIC SALES COMPANY, INC., Logansport, Ind.

TO RENT—I HAVE WHAT I BELIEVE TO be one of the best apartments in Kenwood; the location, on E. 48th-st., near the lake, is unsurpassed; transportation the best; one block from 47th-st. cars and two and one-half blocks from Illinois Central. The rooms, seven in number, are all large and every one splendidly lighted; two of them are connected by fine bath, with tub and shower; the guest room has its own connecting bath, and the maid's room is equally well provided; the dining room can comfortably seat eighteen at one table; the living room is a beauty, large and light, opening on to a large concrete balcony; on the third floor, no one overhead; best of all, the price is only one hundred dollars a month, and I will vacate at any time. HOMES

The worst of the winter is over; time to think of pretty lawns and flowers. Come out now and make a selection for early spring occupancy of one of our real bargains. You can take possession any time before May 1st. No interest to pay till June 1st, no taxes to pay till May, 1918.

A small cash payment and $15 per month and interest secures one of these homes. Some ready now, others will be completed in early spring.

The houses are 5, 6, and 7 rooms, and contain every modern feature, and are complete in all details. Plenty of ground for a vegetable garden, chickens, etc.

Located at 1703 Arthur-av. Take Clark-st. or Broadway cars or "L" road to Loyola sta., or C. & N. W. R. R. Kenmore sta.

Also 2124 and 2130 Morse-av., overlooking Edgewater Golf club [the highest spot in Rogers Park]. N. Clark-st. and Broadway cars, "L" road, and C. & N. W. R. R. Rogers Park sta., and new Western-av. car line.

Also 1203 and 1205 Monroe-st., South Evanston.

Shall be glad to make an appointment to show you these houses and others which we are building. Also have some very attractive two flat buildings, with sun parlors, at reasonable prices, and on which we will make easy terms.

A Locality of Beautiful Bungalow Homes

We are offering a choice selection of 5 to 8 room bungalow homes built in brick, Elastic Stucco, or California Redwood in our Home Section, Austin.

If you have been thinking about getting away from the flat and apply that rent money on your own home, you should not fail to make an early inspection and select one to suit you for spring delivery.

In inspecting these homes you will readily see the great attention that is paid to construction, architecture, convenient arrangement, decorating, and exterior surroundings which is usually not found in homes sold at moderate prices.

We have them with 2 to 5 bedrooms, large living and dining rooms, sun parlors, and screened porches, most modern plumbing, with shower baths, guaranteed hot water or hot air heating plants, etc.

Prices range from $4,000 to $6,500 on terms to suit or cash.

Take a Chicago-av. car to Latrobe-av. and walk north to houses or a Division-st. car, which connects with Grand, Crawford, or Cicero-avs. and which pass our property.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate firstcomers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner, A., T. & S. F. Ry., 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

REAL ESTATE—COUNTRY.

FOR SALE.

Beautiful Country Home and Farm 25 Miles from THE BUSINESS CENTER OF CHICAGO.

FRONTING THE CLUB GROUNDS.

Hour's ride by motor from the city, boulevards, and asphalt macadam roads right to the place.

150 ACRES IN THE HIGHEST STATE OF CULTIVATION; handsome residence, every modern appointment, completely furnished, all the conveniences of a city house. Spacious porches, electric light, hot water heat, surrounded by lawn filled with trees, shrubbery, and flowers. Greenhouse alone cost $6,000. Gardener's house and garage, farmhouse, servants' quarters, barns, and all kinds of outbuildings, full equipment of farm machinery, horses, etc. All the improvements have been made in the last 8 years under the supervision of a prominent Chicago architect and the place is in perfect condition throughout. This property is now in an estate and can be purchased at less than one-half the original cost.

W. K. YOUNG & BRO., BANK FLOOR, Marquette Bldg., Dearborn and Adams.

FOR SALE—AN IDEAL COUNTRY HOME. Located on the banks of one of the prettiest of Michigan's lakes, 3 hours by rail from Chicago; modern buildings and 50 acres of the best fruit and potato land; all buildings new; 7 room house, modern in every respect, beautifully finished, large porches, very convenient; large barn, every improvement; garage, chicken houses, graneries; in fact, every needed building and convenience that goes to make a luxurious country place. The land is practically all under cultivation, with some fruit and berries and 20 acres of clover, is well fenced and kept, lying in a wealthy neighborhood where neighboring fruit farms are making big money for their owners; farm can be made to be one of best producers in the community; is well stocked with machinery and live stock, which will be sold with place if desired.

The lake has splendid bathing beach and good fishing. Many handsome homes around lake. Gasoline launch and row boats in good condition to be sold with place.

Terms: This property has more than $10,000 invested in it, but as owner has been transferred to the west and must sell quick, $8,500 will buy this handsome country place; $2,500 cash, balance to suit purchaser. This is a genuine bargain and you deal direct with the owner. Don't answer unless you have the money. Agents and warm air merchants save stamps. Address D 191, Tribune.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

Buy Bank Stock

Conservative investors' opportunity to buy bank stock, the safest investment for the people to buy, being under state supervision. An old established West Side bank now organizing a state bank with a capital and surplus of $225,000. 1,500 shares at $120 each. Only a limited number of shares will be sold at this price. Would prefer to sell only one share to each person. Prefer stockholders who buy real estate mortgages or carry substantial bank balances, as this will be the means of the bank paying LARGER dividends, doubling the value and causing deposits to increase to $1,000,000 first year. Address S K 344, Tribune.

NICKEL MOTORS— I have for sale a small block of stock in the above company; wish to realize cash for personal reasons. Will discount present market price; make best cash offer for 25 shares or more; will sell at a less price than offered by brokers to the public, but will not sell at prices offered by brokers to [illegible]. Address for interview, A F 560, Tribune.

INVESTMENT — I OWN $500 PAR value stock of Ryan-Galloway Co., which pays 7% on par; dividends payable twice annually. The company's principal customers are the Westinghouse Co. and some of the leading railroads of the U. S. To secure immediate cash I will discount this stock so that it will net purchaser a 10% income. Address A F 562, Tribune.

JULY TO DECIDE EUROPEAN WAR, EXPERTS' VIEW

Fight May Continue, but on Uneven Terms, Is Consensus.

BY NORMAN HAPGOOD.

[Copyright: 1917: By Norman Hapgood.]

LONDON, March 3.—One of the most constant and overwhelming feelings one has in attempting to keep in touch with even the main outlines of the war is the extreme difficulty of reaching a safe conclusion on the most significant points. I always have believed in the untrustworthiness of human testimony, but that belief, strong as it was, has been increased.

Consider the most important military question of the moment—the strength of the German line in France, on which depends the outcome of the contemplated great "push."

I have just come from a conversation with a man who is much more able to think than most men are and whose official position gives him exceptional advantages. He had been at the German headquarters in France recently and in the first line German trenches, and had made up his mind that the German lines were impregnable. He then came to England, and after he had been here two weeks he was of the opinion that the British and French would be able to smash through this spring.

Difficult to Get Facts.

The general impression counts for a great deal in one's conclusion, and the impression is inevitably colored by one's environment. It is also extremely difficult to get at more definite facts, as, for example, at the morale of the German troops. We know that a certain number surrender voluntarily, more than they did before, but the numbers are not large and it is dangerous to draw too sweeping conclusions.

Again, we know that the British have become excellent at ordinary trench fighting and raids, but we have no way of knowing how well they can maneuver if they ever get through on a large scale.

"Let them get through," some German officers said to a friend of mine; "we ask nothing better than to fight them in the open. In this trench warfare there is no difference to speak of between the skillful and the stupid, but once the fighting gets beyond the trenches our military superiority will be decisive."

See Victory in Big Push.

Many experts believe that a sudden break through of several miles, with the consequent capture of the heavy guns, will be decisive.

In connection with this question of skill and its relation to the spring campaign, a certain report about the prime minister is interesting. It is narrated to me by one who ought to know that Lloyd George was in favor of coördinating the work of the west by having the whole British army act under general directions from the French supreme command. Lord Northcliffe was among those who opposed the measure.

I asked what the opposition was founded on and the answer was: "Lord Northcliffe believes that Sir Douglass Haig is a great military genius and is thoroughly convinced that he will accomplish marvels in the spring drive." One is tempted to add that these differences of opinion about policies and the crucial elements of the situation would be likely to be removed when we find out how the spring drive gets on, except that experience earlier in the war gives one pause.

Wary of Giving Opinion.

When I was at the front in France in 1915 I was given such exact information by French officers and French statesmen in charge of munitions about what was going to happen one month and two months hence that I am wary now of drawing any conclusions about the decisiveness of the next few months. All that can be reported positively is that it is the preponderance of opinion here, in France, and in Germany that the war, if not actually finished, will be decided to all intents and purposes by July.

Beside the weight of the spring drive the two factors that will do most to bring the situation to a head are, of course, the situation in Germany regarding food and certain raw materials necessary to the manufacture of munitions, and secondly, the food situation in England, which is comfortable now and will remain comfortable unless the new German submarine campaign is unexpectedly successful.

I have the best of opportunities of getting information about the food situations in Germany that is as thorough as can be procured and is also impartial. What cannot be told, however, by anybody until the test comes is the psychology of the German people.

Burden Borne Unequally.

That the distribution of food has failed in its object of equalizing the burden is unmistakable. I already have cabled that the poor, being unable to buy the meat for which they have tickets, are selling their meat tickets to the rich.

You might naturally ask why the tickets are not so made out that they can be used only by the persons to whom they are issued instead of being usable by the holder, as they actually are. The answer is that the attempt to control the ultimate destination of the food is recognized as hopeless, and that it is believed; and rightly believed, that the result would be more demoralizing if the transfer were more secret and attended with more risk.

If you stopped a man from selling his ticket you could not stop him from selling the meat after he obtained it. The experience in Belgium has been exactly the same. The more difficult is made the sale of food tickets, the worse has been the result. The sale has not been decreased, but the demoralization has been greater.

The same principle has applied to a large extent, both in Germany and in Belgium, to maximum prices. It is impossible to maintain them absolutely, but they can be more nearly maintained when food tickets are transferable.

Germans Depend on Roumania.

The Germans are hoping much from the Roumanian harvest. They have sent one of the ablest men in the empire, a general from the western front, to Roumania, and under his direction the planting has been of the first order. They have taken equally effective steps in Serbia.

Nevertheless, it is extremely probable that even if they tide over the time between now and September they will not be much more comfortable after the new crops come in than in the meantime because of the terrific strain that they are under on account of the shortage in so many important directions.

If Germany feels the way the southern states felt in the last part of the civil war, it is the best opinion that she can go on for two or three years by gradually retiring and by being prepared to wear herself out completely. If, however, her spirit is different and she would rather yield as soon as her people are widely convinced that they are doomed to defeat and in danger of prostration, then much the most probable time for that conviction is next summer or autumn, if in the meantime the submarine campaign proves insufficient to make England as uncomfortable as Germany is.

Tracing a Story in Press.

As I am writing about the difficulties of reaching positive conclusions I ought to add that if a person were dependent on the newspapers instead of on more inside sources of information he would be much worse off. Of course, the more partisan a newspaper is the more difficult it is to separate fact from the extreme discoloration brought about by the emotions and the will.

My experience with the newspapers has been such that, while I take plenty of them, I read little in any one, with the exception of the Manchester Guardian. It seems to me to represent the underlying liberal spirit of Great Britain more than any other daily, and I believe also that this underlying liberal spirit is about the same as that of the United States, of France, and of a considerable part of Germany itself, when the spirit can be freed from conditions that have obscured it.

One of the results of warfare that has interested me most is the effect of suffering and sacrifice on the heart that bears them, and here again we come against the difficulties of getting our quantities right.

Russia Becoming Nationalized.

A word that everybody is using just now is the word "nationality." We are supposed to do everything on nationalistic lines. That conception is put to the front in most of the great geographical and political changes that the allies plan. That it is an extremely important fact to consider I do not doubt, but like other facts it cannot usefully be considered alone, and it is easy to exaggerate it.

We know, for example, that there is a great outburst of nationalistic feeling in Russia. We know that it is so strong, notably in the army, that it keeps the country from going in the direction of separate peace, and also that it is the explanation of the vacillation in the capitol about the composition of the cabinet, the machine putting in one man after another because he is, or is supposed to be, sympathetic with their point of view, and then speedily throwing him out because they are alarmed at the indignation caused in the nation by his inefficiency.

This increase of nationalism in Russia is unmistakably one of the biggest developments of the war, and yet it would be a great failure in imagination to conceive the Russian people as being wholly made over in three years.

Huge Tasks Face Europe.

This year 1917 and probably the year 1918 are going to be spent in making the world over. The task for any one country of carrying on its share merely in conducting the war seems superhuman. The task of conducting the war and keeping open one's mind and heart is stillmore superhuman. In addition we have the immense difficulties of obtaining real knowledge. Against all those obstacles what kind of a record is going to be made by the little race of man? Imperfect at the best. Better, let us hope, because of our own participation. At least all liberals over here believe it will be better because of us.

Every day I feel overwhelmed by the bigness of the problems and the shortness of human vision, and yet every day, as I think of what soon will fall on a few men, I still cling to the belief that it is still possible to make out of the settlement something good enough to pay for its cost. To realize all the difficulties and the imperfectness of our information is not to be discouraged. It is to be prepared.

Miss Elizabeth Folds

MOFFETT PHOTO

Just as fourteen of her young guests had taken their seats last evening at a dinner party given by Miss Elizabeth Folds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Folds of 1228 North State street, announcement was made by Mrs. Folds of her daughter's engagement to Laurence Adams Eggleston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Eggleston of Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Folds is one of the most popular of this season's debutantes, and has had many parties given for her during the winter. She has recently returned to the city from a trip south.

Another engagement announcement from the north side which interested society folk is that of Miss Frances Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fielding Lewis Marshall of 73 East Elm street, to Calvin Durand Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hubert Allen of Baltimore, Md. The marriage will take place, it was said at Miss Marshall's home yesterday, after the family have returned from their summer stay in the Blue Ridge mountains.

Mrs. C. Kidd, Scotland, Ill, Seeks Her Son Here

In Edinburgh, Scotland, a dying mother is asking for her son. He is thought to be somewhere in Chicago, but Scotland relatives do not know his address, and they have asked THE TRIBUNE to help them in the search. The sick mother is Mrs. C. Kidd of 22 Broughton street, Edinburgh. She is seriously ill and not expected to recover, according to a letter written by J. F. Kidd. The letter is dated Feb. 7.

Duck Hunter Rescued.

Harry Dudley of 2007 Clifton avenue was rescued from Lake Michigan off Wilmette yesterday by the United States coast guard at Evanston. Dudley was duck hunting in the drainage canal and his boat floated a quarter of a mile into the lake.

7% Preferred Stock

A Food Manufacturing Company located near Chicago, that has been running twenty-four hours daily for the past two years, has found it necessary to double its present capacity.

For this purpose it is issuing two hundred and fifty thousand dollars of 7% preferred stock, that is not superseded by underlying bonds or other liens, on property values that will exceed three for one.

The company is placing this issue without the aid of stock-selling organizations and is desirous of getting in touch with solid, substantial salesmen who have personal acquaintance with and entre to good, conservative investors.

Our own organization will assist in closing sales and will make proper arrangements with the right parties.

NO ONE CAME TO CONCERT BUT A WAITER

"Art for art's sake" was the only excuse for a morning recital at the Congress hotel last week. The hour was 10 o'clock; scene, the green room, with chairs arranged in rows to accommodate a goodly audience, flowers decking the piano, soft music furnished by two musicians, two boys in dapper uniforms to usher and collect tickets.

Ten o'clock came and went, but it was like the marriage feast in the Bible, for not a guest arrived.

The assistant head waiter dropped in to be sure that everything was going along nicely; he chatted with the artiste while another half hour passed, and not a single unit of the anticipated audience presented itself.

Finally, in defiance, the lady decided to go ahead with the program, and invited the waiter to seat himself and hear her program. Which he did.

And James Knoppes—for that is his name—experienced such elevation of the soul as he hopes never again to endure.

GIRL WIFE MAKES HUSBAND ADMIT SLAYING RIVAL

Mrs. Mildred Noranchick, 15 years old, confronting her husband, Joseph, in the Desplaines street station yesterday, forced him to confess he shot and killed Louis Girtos, an old rival.

Noranchick was arrested after Girtos had been slain in a hotel at 500 South Halsted street. He denied the shooting until his young wife was led into Capt. Gleason's office.

"You did kill him—I saw you," accused the wife.

"Yes, I did," declared Noranchick. "He drove me crazy."

Mrs. Noranchick told Capt. Gleason her parents gave her to Noranchick despite her love for Girtos. They came to Chicago and Girtos became a boarder in their home. When he left Noranchick abused her and drove her out. She then went to live with Girtos in the Halsted street hotel. Noranchick burst in on them and shot Girtos.

HERE'S A CHANC TO AID SCHO FOR CAVALIER

Lincoln Memorial [illegible] Carries Light to Folk of Mountains.

BY AUDRIE ALSPAUGH [illegible]

Tucked away in a niche, [illegible] only level niche there is in the [illegible] land mountains, is a [illegible] country's beloved Abraham Lincoln [illegible] no thing of gray stone or cold [illegible] is customary with monuments [illegible] living, growing influence [illegible] token of remembrance, Lincoln [illegible] al university, founded twenty [illegible] in accordance with the president's expressed wishes, at Cumberland [illegible] only break in the mountain [illegible] which permits the mountain folk of the [illegible] Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee [illegible]

It has struggled along [illegible] years and now it wants to do [illegible] panding.

To night at Grace Methodist [illegible] church in La Salle street, Dr. [illegible] liams will fire the first gun [illegible] dollar endowment campaign. [illegible] of the Northwestern Christian Advocate and Bishop Fallows will speak [illegible] there will be shown some moving pictures taken around the school and the country.

Ask $250,000 [illegible]

This being a national and [illegible] rian interest, in the opinion of [illegible] sors, Chicago and vicinity is to [illegible] for a quarter million dollars [illegible] ings similar to this first one [illegible] held in many churches of different denominations.

This is unique missionary work [illegible] is passing the bread of knowledge [illegible] our own people, the young [illegible] come so eagerly to this school being [illegible] descendants of the earliest [illegible] America, left marooned in the [illegible] fastnesses when emigration [illegible] ward.

"They have the blood of [illegible] them," declared President [illegible] Hubbell. "You may go into the [illegible] cabin in the most remote mountain [illegible] and there meet the finest [illegible] is instinctive."

Have 500 Students.

There are about 500 students [illegible] average the year through at the [illegible] which is set on a 600 acre farm [illegible] the curriculum. About one-third [illegible] girls and two-thirds boys, the [illegible] proportion increasing.

They come from all over [illegible] foot and many with no other [illegible] than the clothes they have on [illegible] money jingles in their pockets [illegible] is no handicap.

"Of course," said President [illegible] modestly, "we like to have the [illegible] have from $10 to $25 to start [illegible] course, but it isn't necessary."

The school has a tuition fee of [illegible] $7 for three months, a board [illegible] a week, and room rent from [illegible] $2 a month. Folks who have [illegible] ingness to meet these modest [illegible] notes, short time or long [illegible] they enter, for a certain amount [illegible] penses, and then they assume [illegible] duties and are paid for their [illegible] two accounts being balanced.

From A-B-C to B. A.

Scholastically, the students [illegible] everything from their a-b-c's to [illegible] A., though most of them know [illegible] read when they come. And with [illegible] goes hand and muscle training [illegible] them for the kind of lives their [illegible] nity offers to them. The school [illegible] an enlarged rural home, for [illegible] do regular farm, dairy and [illegible] work, and the girls are [illegible] house things, cooking, sewing [illegible]

"The general effect is [illegible] standard of living through the mountains," commented the president. "[illegible] girls marry, that still being the [illegible] business of women in the south, [illegible] rule is for them to choose [illegible] and make good homes."

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

For Sale for $25,000.00

An interest in a selling company having exclusive control of two modern household articles. Have been on the market six years selling direct by mail or personal calls or through established merchants. The line has been advertised and has a valuable good-will. The company is making money. It has no debts of any kind. Its field is large and expanding and requires more capital. The present owners will not sell their holdings, but because their time must be divided with an allied concern they will, if satisfactory, transfer the sales management to the incoming capital.

Will Deal Only with Principals.

A Stock Farm, a Man and a Real Business

Underwriting Wanted for This Combination

This stock farm is a profitable going business that has made the present owners wealthy. They want to sell and retire, but don't want their property peddled. I will not have to. The place consists of 9,000 acres of improved land, a whole flock of barns, stables, granaries, concrete silos and houses; several hundred horses, tractors, tools and machinery. The whole place can be bought for around $75 per acre, and it now pays a profit on twice that value.

I want to finance this purchase with an issue of bonds and preferred stock, just as a public utility would be financed. A good, strong firm is wanted to underwrite the securities; one that will be satisfied with a modest promotion profit and one-half the common stock. Nothing in this for get rich quick schemers.

I am a successful business man and farmer, with the necessary experience, pep and backbone to handle this proposition. There is no blemish on my record. I want to tie up with the sort of firm that is naturally reluctant to answer an ad of this kind, and I will understand if you just put your name and your business card in an envelope and send it to
